THE PERIOD BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

JEWISH HISTORY FROM SECULAR SOURCES.

JUDEA continued subject to the kings of Persia about two hundred years, but does not appear to have had a separate governor after Nehemiah. It was annexed to the province of Syria, and the administration of its affairs was left to the high-priest, subject to the control of the provincial rulers. This raised the high-priesthood to a degree of temporal dignity and power which very soon made it an object of ambition to the different members of the family of Aaron, and gave rise to many violent and disgraceful contests among them for the office.

Upon the overthrow of the Persian army by Alexander, Syria and the neighboring countries fell under his power, and Tyre was taken after an obstinate resistance. Alexander then marched into Judea to punish the Jews, who, as faithful subjects of the king of Persia, had sent the Tyrians supplies of provisions, and refused them to him. But it is related that, as he approached Jerusalem, and saw a procession of the people clothed in white coming to meet him, headed by Jaddua the high-priest, and all the priestly race, in their robes of office, his heart was turned to spare and favor them. He continued to them the free enjoyment of their laws and religion, and exempted them from tribute during their sabbatical years; and when he built the city of Alexandria, he placed a great number of Jews there, and gave to them the same privileges as to his Greek subjects.

After the death of Alexander and the division of his empire among his generals, Judea became a subject of contention between the kings of Syria and Egypt, which ended in its forming for a time part of the monarchy of Egypt. Ptolemy Soter, the king of Egypt, brought many thousands of the Jews into that country, settled them there and treated them kindly, placing them on an equality with the Greeks at Alexandria. Greek being the common language of that city, it was quickly learned by the Jewish settlers, and became the native language of their children who were born there, and who on that account, in process of time, were called Hellenists, or Grecian Jews, a name which afterward came to be applied generally to all Jews speaking the Greek language in foreign countries (see Acts vi. 1; ix. 29; xi. 20, etc.). These Grecian Jews had synagogues in Alexandria, in which the writings of Moses and of the prophets, translated into Greek for this purpose, were read every sabbath day. This translation, which is called the Septuagint, contributed much to spread the knowledge of true religion through the western part of the world. It came into common use among the Jews, and the quotations made from the Old Testament Scriptures in the New, by the evangelists and apostles, are often, though not always, from this version.

Seleucus, king of Syria, about 300 B.C., built numerous cities in Syria and Asia Minor, and regarding the Jews as good and faithful citizens, endeavored to attract them to his new cities by the offer of the same privileges as were enjoyed by the Greeks and Macedonians. They accordingly settled there in great numbers, especially at Antioch in Syria.

It is worthy of notice that by these events the Jews were brought into contact with a new form of heathenism. They had already encountered its more ancient and more barbarous forms during their sojourns in Egypt and in Babylon, the headquarters and central seats of idolatry in their days. But now, by their dispersion in Egypt, and the other countries bordering on the eastern end of the Mediterranean, they were everywhere brought into contact with the more cultivated and refined mythology and philosophy of the Greeks; and there are good grounds for believing that they were the means of communicating to the more candid and teachable among them some knowledge of a purer religion.

During the reign of Ptolemy Soter the prosperity of the Jews was much promoted by the internal administration of an excellent high-priest, Simon the Just. He repaired and fortified their city and temple, and made a spacious reservoir of water, "in compass as a sea."

After the Jewish nation had been tributary to the kings of Egypt for about eighty years, it became, by the conquest of Antiochus the Great, subject to the kings of Syria, but the Jews were still governed by their own laws, under the high-priest and council of the nation.

Judea, being situated between Syria and Egypt, suffered much during the whole of this period from the frequent wars in which those countries were engaged, and was the arena of many bloody and destructive battles. Besides this, the peace of the nation was greatly disturbed by the claims of rival candidates to the office of high-priest, which afforded to the kings of Syria frequent pretexts for interfering with the internal affairs of the nation. And all these evils were considerably aggravated by the corruption and misconduct of the chief men, and the increasing wickedness of the people, who began to neglect the worship and the law of God far more than they had ever done since their return from the captivity.

God saw fit to punish the Jews for this defection by the hand of Antiochus Epiphanes, who came with an army and plundered the city and temple of Jerusalem with every conceivable circumstance of cruelty and profanation. For three years and a half they were altogether deprived of their civil and religious liberties. The daily sacrifice was suspended; the temple itself was dedicated by Antiochus to Jupiter Olympius, whose statue was erected on the altar of burnt offering; the worship of Jehovah and the observance of his law were prohibited under the severest penalties; every copy of the sacred writings that could be seized was burned; and the people were required, under pain of death, to sacrifice to idols. Never before had the Jews been exposed to so furious a persecution. The apostates were numerous, but a remnant continued faithful; and these events were doubtless useful in calling the attention of the heathen around to those great principles for which many of the Jews were willing to peril their lives.

At length, God raised up a deliverer for his people in the noble family of the Asamoneans. Mattathias, a priest eminent for his piety and resolution, and the father of five sons, encouraged the people, by his example and exhortations, "to stand up for the law," and having collected around him a large number of faithful men, he undertook to deliver his people, and to restore the worship of the God of Israel. But being very old when he engaged in this arduous work, he did not live to see its completion. At his death his eldest son Judas succeeded to the command of the army, in which he was greatly assisted by his brother Simon, a man of remarkable prudence. The motto on his standard was Exod. xv. 11: "Who is like unto thee among the gods, O Jehovah?" the Hebrew words being, Mi Camoka Baalim Jehovah; and from the initial letters of these words, MCB I, is said to be derived the word Maccabi or Maccabee, which became the surname of the family.

After several victories over the troops of Antiochus, Judas Maccabeus gained possession of Jerusalem; and his first care was to repair and purify the temple for the restoration of the Divine worship. This reconsecration of the temple and revival of its worship was ever after celebrated by an annual feast of eight days. It occurred at the time of the winter solstice (165 B.C.), and was called the Feast of the Dedication (John x. 22).

The war was carried on for twenty-six years, with five successive kings of Syria, and after many sanguinary battles the Syrians were driven out of the country, and the Jews, under their Maccabean princes, regained for a time their independence and the free exercise of their religion, which they commemorated by commencing a new epoch in 143 B.C. as the year of "the freedom of Jerusalem." They had again regular troops, strong garrisons and alliances with other powers, including even Rome, and the boundaries of the state were extended by the subjugation of the Idumeans and Philistines, as well as of Moab, Ammon and Arabia Petrea. Previously to this, in the year 153 B.C., as the Asamonean family were descended from the eldest branch of the race of Aaron, the office of high-priest was assumed by Jonathan, the then reigning prince, and it remained in the family until the usurpation of Herod.

This season of prosperity was, however, of short duration. The nation was exceedingly troubled by internal dissensions, especially on the part of the Pharisees, who first appear prominently in history in the reign of John Hyrcanus, as forming a large and powerful body, of turbulent character and lofty pretensions, and carrying on fierce quarrels with the rival sect of the Sadducees, which led upon one occasion to a dreadful civil war. There were also violent contests for the throne between rival members of the royal family, which greatly weakened the nation, and it was ill-prepared to withstand the extending power of Rome, which in the year 65 B.C. subjugated Syria, and soon afterward conquered Egypt. In the year 63 B.C. Pompey marched his army into Judea, besieged and took Jerusalem and made the country tributary to the Romans, though it was still governed by the Maccabean princes. During the reigns of the later princes of this family, Herod Antipater, an Idumean by birth, obtained a position of power and influence in the land, and after his death, his son, Herod the Great, so ingratiated himself with the Romans that he obtained the appointment of king of Judea in the place of Antigonus. He had, however, some difficulty in obtaining possession of his kingdom, as the people were greatly attached to their Maccabean kings. But he came against Jerusalem with a Roman army of 60,000 men, and, after a siege of above half a year, took the city by storm, and massacred many of the inhabitants. Shortly afterward he put to death Antigonus, and thus ended the Asamonean dynasty, after it had subsisted a hundred and twenty-six years.

Herod was a man of great abilities and of indomitable resolution, but an ambitious and cruel tyrant, unscrupulous as to the means by which he gained his ends. He persecuted to death all the members and adherents of the Asamonean house, and he even put to death his wife and two of his own sons. He degraded the high-priesthood by making the tenure of the office dependent on his own pleasure. In order to gain popularity with his subjects, as well as to increase his own fame, he greatly enlarged and beautified the temple at Jerusalem, making it, in some respects, more magnificent than that of Solomon. He also erected in neighboring cities many heathen temples, and constructed numerous public works, such as bridges, roads, baths, aqueducts and harbors, the cost of which he defrayed by heavy exactions upon his subjects.

In the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Herod, while Augustus was emperor of Rome, THE SAVIOUR OF THE WORLD WAS BORN.

Herod was succeeded in the government of the greater part of Palestine by his son Archelaus, who acted with great cruelty and injustice, and in the tenth year of his reign, upon a complaint being made against him by the Jews, he was banished by Augustus to Vienne, in Gaul, where he died. Publius Sulpitius Quirinus (who is called in Greek Cyrenias, Luke ii. 2), the president of Syria, was then sent to reduce the countries over which Archelaus had reigned to a Roman province, and a governor of Judea was appointed under the title of Procurator, subordinate to the president of Syria. But the Jews were still permitted to exercise their religious worship without molestation or restraint.

Meanwhile, in the Gentile world, the old systems of idolatry had fallen into disrepute, partly through the extreme corruptions of worship and of morals connected with them, and partly through the cultivation of Grecian philosophy, the conflicting theories of which, however, utterly failed to satisfy the wants of mankind, as they afforded little solid truth and produced no moral renovation. At the same time, the universal prevalence of the Roman power, ensuring internal peace and facilitating communication between different parts of the world, together with its indifference to the various forms of religious belief and worship, opened, for a time, a wider field for the diffusion of the gospel. So that Providence combined with prophecy to mark this as the "fulness of time," when the expected SAVIOUR should come into the world.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

A TABULAR ANALYSIS.

SECTION.	THE LESSONS INCUICATED IN THE SEVERAL SECTIONS OR DIVISIONS.	PASSAGE.
I.	The Beatitudes. These were calculated to rectify the mistaken notions of the Jews respecting Messiah's kingdom. They have been designated "Christian paradoxes," because they place happiness in such dispositions of mind as men generally deem incompatible with it.....	Matt. v. 1-12.
II.	Here the great fact is laid down that Christians are to be the light of the world, and that their conduct and influence are to elevate and bless mankind.....	13-16.
III.	The permanency of the law is declared: like the great Lawgiver, it is holy in its character, it cannot change, and it demands purity in all.....	17-20.
IV.	Hence, spirituality of life, godly control of all man's powers, and self-rule, are essential to the Christian character.....	21-32.
V.	The ordering of speech, and the sanctity of oaths and of vows, are then expounded.....	33-37.
VI.	Revenge is forbidden, and a genial and tender spirit is enjoined.....	38-48.
VII.	Benevolence to the poor is recognized as a duty, and ostentation severely condemned.....	Matt. vi. 1-8.
VIII.	Directions given for prayer, and the form usually known as "The Lord's Prayer" set forth.....	9-15.
IX.	Purity and simplicity of heart enjoined, and the sin of hypocritical display duly censured.....	16-18.
X.	Heavenly treasures and the riches of earth contrasted as to their permanency and value.....	19-22.
XI.	The danger of a mistake on this subject, and hence the need of spiritual illumination.....	23-24.
XII.	Reasons assigned for trusting God, and encouragements to faith and obedient walking.....	25-34.
XIII.	Knowledge of self and charity toward others commended.....	Matt. vii. 1-5.
XIV.	Manifold and precious encouragements to prayer stated and urged on Christians.....	6-11.
XV.	A rule of duty laid down to guide in the intercourse of Christians with all men.....	12-14.
XVI.	How to discriminate about character. The fruit shows the tree, and so with the fruits of ministers.....	15-20.
XVII.	The sad insecurity of the mere formalist, and the uselessness of being only professors.....	21-23.
XVIII.	An illustration to show the wretched fate of the unwise who build on a sandy foundation, and the safety of those who are resting on the Rock of Salvation.....	24-29.

INCIDENTS AT THE TRIAL OF OUR LORD.

AFTER the observance of the Paschal feast and having instituted the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, to be observed in commemoration of the Great Sacrifice which was about to be offered, JESUS and His Disciples went together to the first scene of his suffering, at the base of the Mount of Olives (Matt. xxvi. 30; Mark xiv. 26; Luke xxii. 39).

Crossing the brook Kedron, they entered the Garden of Gethsemane (the oil-press). A part of this garden still remains, and the few olive trees which continue to live in it seem to be old enough to have been growing in our Saviour's time. Here JESUS took PETER, JAMES and JOHN to be near Him during the awful scene of His Agony. Thereafter, the traitor and the officers of the temple appeared, and having arrested Him, His alarmed Disciples forsook Him and fled; but the seal of PETER and the love of JOHN led them to follow at a distance (Matt. xxvi. 36-56; Mark xiv. 32-50; Luke xxii. 39-53; John xviii. 2-11).

TAKEN BEFORE ANNAS.

The Divine Prisoner was taken first to the house of ANNAS, the father-in-law of the High-priest, CAIAPHAS, probably to ascertain if it would be safe to risk a public trial. It is obvious that all parties among the rulers desired to go forward, and ANNAS sent Him bound to CAIAPHAS, who had already publicly advised His death (John xviii. 13, 14, 24).

ARRAIGNED BEFORE CAIAPHAS.

The examination took place in the house of CAIAPHAS, and here the melancholy denial of PETER occurred. To understand the scene, it should be remembered that Oriental houses and palaces were erected with an open court-yard in the centre, and the apartments surrounding and opening into it. In the middle of this yard the servants and officers had made a fire, because of the cold of the spring night. PETER and JOHN had entered, and PETER rashly took his place among the soldiers. The Saviour had been led into one of the chambers, and thus both JESUS and JOHN could hear and see all that took place; thus it is obvious that JOHN's testimony, as recorded in his Gospel, is of the utmost value, as he was an eye witness. "The High-priest asked JESUS of His Disciples and of His Doctrine," evidently desiring to ascertain how far His influence had spread (John xii. 42), especially to learn if any members of the Sanhedrim had become His followers, and thus to prepare for dealing with them as well as with Him. On the first point, JESUS gave no information, and on the second He referred to the evidence of those who had been His hearers, whereupon an officer struck Him for contempt of the High-priest (John xvii. 19-24).

BEFORE THE SANHEDRIM.

At dawn of day (15th of Nisan, i.e., April 6th) the Council (Sanhedrim) met, and JESUS was arraigned before them (Luke xxii. 66). The first object was to convict Him as a false prophet and a blasphemer, and thus according to the Jewish law bring Him in as worthy of death. Two witnesses were required, but the evidence of all who testified was contradictory. They aimed at proving blasphemy against Him for speaking irreverently about the temple, when He referred to His own death and subsequent resurrection, but their testimony failed to establish their charge (Matt. xxii. 59-63; Mark xiv. 55-61). At length the High-priest reproached Him for His silence, and adjured Him by the LIVING GOD to say whether or not he was the CHRIST, the SON OF GOD. He then plainly said, I AM, and warned them of the time when they should see Him sitting in His Power, at the Right Hand of God and Coming in the Clouds of Heaven. He was forthwith condemned for blasphemy, whereupon the officers covered His face, spat on Him, and buffeted Him, mocking and asking Him to say who it was that struck Him (Matt. xxvi. 63-68; Mark xiv. 61-65; Luke xxii. 67-71 and 63-65; comp. Isa. l. 6; lili. 7). According to Jewish law, he would now have been led out of the city and stoned to death. But "the sceptre had departed from Judah," and the power of life and death did not now rest in Jewish hands. Their national life had ended, and the time must therefore have arrived when the Shiloh had come (Gen. xlix. 10). Hence, they unwittingly fulfilled the prophecy of JESUS respecting His Death. It was effected by the act of PILATE and the consent of HEROD, so that the ecclesiastical rulers of the Jews and the civil authority of Rome combined (comp. Ps. i.), and thus that form of death was inflicted which was the most painful, the most ignominious, and being the usual punishment of slaves and the most degraded criminals, attested the depth of that humiliation to which THE SON OF GOD descended for the salvation of man (Gal. iii. 10; vi. 14; Phil. ii. 8; Heb. xii. 2; Col. ii. 14).

THENCE TAKEN TO THE ROMAN PROCURATOR, PONTIUS PILATE.

JESUS was then led to the Prætorium, where the Roman Procurator PONTIUS PILATE had taken his seat early in the morning. The Jews could not enter a court that was inaugurated with heathen sacrifices without being polluted, and therefore unable to keep the feast, so PILATE came out to ascertain the charge against the prisoner. They accused Him at first as a malefactor, and next with the political offence of forbidding the people to pay tribute to Cæsar, and with the desire also of making Himself a King; thus aggravating their guilt (of malevolence) by falsehood, as they knew that they had in vain sought to entrap Him into a political offence, and that He had even by a miracle provided for the payment of the Roman tax. JESUS replied to the interrogation of PILATE that His "Kingdom was not of this world." After further inquiry, PILATE attempted to dismiss Him, but the priests and the elders assailed Him with other charges (Matt. xxvii. 1, 2, 11, 14; Mark xv. 1-5; Luke xxiii. 1-5; John xviii. 28-38; comp. Isa. liii. 7).

BY PILATE SENT TO HEROD ANTIPAS.

At the mention of Galilee as the scene of His seditious teaching, PILATE resolved to send him to HEROD ANTIPAS, who had come to Jerusalem to the Passover—a practice by which he hoped to conciliate the Jews. HEROD was pleased by the conduct of PILATE, with whom he had been long at variance, but getting no information from JESUS, he sent Him back again to PILATE, and thus "the kings of the earth set themselves and the rulers take counsel together against THE LORD and against His ANOINTED" (Luke xxiii. 4-12; Ps. ii. 1, 2; comp. Acts iv. 25, 26).

AGAIN BEFORE PILATE—BARABBAS PREFERRED TO JESUS.

Obligated to decide the case, PILATE tried an appeal from the rulers to the people. Knowing that the envy and malice of the priests had instigated the charge, he proposed to liberate Him whom the populace had lately hailed with such enthusiasm. The cunning of the priests, however, defeated the scheme. They knew that the brigands who opposed the Roman power were favorites with the people, and that one of this class had forfeited his life and was lying under sentence of death. The priests therefore suggested the liberation of BARABBAS, and as the people saw that no political change was likely to be effected by JESUS, they took up the cry, "Not this man, but BARABBAS!" Again PILATE tried to bring them to reason, being affected by the interference of his wife. To his inquiry, "What will ye then that I shall do to Him, whom ye call king of the Jews?" the vehement outcry of the fickle mob was, "Crucify Him!" The loud cries of the populace prevailed over reason, conscience and justice, and PILATE yielded up JESUS to their will, washing his hands and protesting before the people that he "was innocent of the blood of this just person." They accepted the awful responsibility, exclaiming, "His blood be on us and on our children" (Matt. xxvii. 15-26; Mark x. 6-15; Luke xxiii. 13-25; John xviii. 39-40).

THE PURPLE ROBE, THE REED SCEPTRE, THE CROWN OF THORNS.

JESUS was now handed over to the Roman soldiers. Their hatred and contempt of the seditious Jews led them to treat with great indignity a person whom they believed to be a peasant aiming at political power. Scourging always preceded crucifixion, but in addition to this torture, they added the mockery of a royal insignia, crowning His head with thorns, giving Him a reed as a sceptre and assailing Him with blows and violence (Matt. xxvii. 26-30; Mark xv. 15-19; John xix. 1-3).

PILATE'S LAST WEAK EFFORT TO RELEASE JESUS.

The scene seems to have incited PILATE to make yet another effort, and if unsuccessful, he would at least insult the Jews. Knowing Him to be innocent, he presented Him in the robes of mockery, but he was still assailed with the cry, "Crucify Him!" "Take you Him and crucify Him, for I find no fault in Him," rejoined PILATE, well knowing that they dared not take him at his word. Leading JESUS back into the hall, he asked Him, "Whence art thou?" and urged the question with the intimation that he had power to crucify Him, or to set Him free. The Saviour assured him that he had no power, unless it were given him from above, and then assured PILATE of the guilt of his wicked betrayers. Alarmed, PILATE determines to release him, but again the weak and unprincipled man yields to fear, for the Jews knew what above all things he dreaded. They knew the character of his administration, and how much he feared an imperial examination into his tyrannical rule; and therefore, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend," was their triumphant appeal, and the fear of acquitting a usurper induced the selfish and unjust ruler to condemn to death the innocent and the just ONE. Yielding Him to their fury, he inquired, "Shall I crucify your king?" and the answer was an abjuring of the independence which had been a passion with the Jews: "We have no king but Cæsar!" (Matt. xxvii. 26-30; Mark xv. 15-19; John xix. 1-16).

GOD'S PUNISHMENT OF THE PARTICIPATORS IN THE CRIME.

The Providence of GOD took the Jews at their word, and their last futile efforts for freedom ended in their dispersion over the world. The retribution which also fell on the chief actors in this greatest of crimes which was ever enacted in the world's history was no less signal. PILATE afterward met the actual fate which he had dreaded, for he was deposed and degraded, and in a far distant land of disgraceful exile closed his life by suicide. HEROD deservedly met a similar fate, as he was divested of power and banished for the rapacity and cruelty of his rule. After a miserable life he died in exile. CAIAPHAS was deposed. There was no delay in the doom of the miserable traitor, JUDAS. In remorse he carried back the thirty pieces of silver to the chief-priests, acknowledged his sin, encountered their mockery and disdain, and the wretched man, in hopeless despair, went out and hanged himself. The chief-priests, who had perpetrated such iniquity, were yet such religious formalists that they would not return the silver to the treasury, as it had been the price of blood, and so they purchased the potter's field, without the city, as a burial-place for strangers, and thus they fulfilled to the very letter the prophecy of Zechariah (xi. 12, etc.). It may have been the place where JUDAS committed suicide, and the double memorial of the scene and the price of blood was preserved in its name, Aceldama, the field of blood (Matt. xxvii. 2-10; Acts i. 18, 19), by which it was afterward known.

INCIDENTS AT THE CRUCIFIXION.

THE incidents of the Great Sacrifice may be classified under the heads of manner, place and time. Our contemplation of the awful scene may be made more affecting by viewing these in order, while our gratitude and love may be rendered more heartfelt and fervid. It was a Roman execution, conducted in the usual form, with certain variations arising from incidental circumstances.

THE PLACE—CALVARY.

THE place was necessarily without the city (Acts vii. 58; Heb. xiii. 11-13; comp. Ex. xxix. 14; Lev. iv. 11, 12, 21; vi. 30; ix. 11; xvi. 27; Num. xix. 3); but the exact locality is unknown. It was near one of the gates, and beside a public road, but there is no mention of its being on a "hill" or "mount." The name of CALVARY, which occurs in Luke, is the Latin translation of the Greek word (kranion), by which all four Evangelists explain the Hebrew term GOLGOTHA (Matt. xxvii. 33, 34; Mark xv. 22, 23; Luke xxiii. 33; John xix. 17). As a mark of shame and ignominy, the criminal had to carry his cross to the place of execution, and CHRIST was thus led forth with two culprits, who were "justly in the same condemnation" (Luke xxiii. 26, 32, 41; comp. Isa. liii. 12). Everlasting honor was laid on SIMON, a man of Cyrene, whom the soldiers seized as he was entering the city, and on whom they laid the load under which JESUS had sunk. It was then that He told the women, who had followed Him, weeping, to mourn rather for the judgments which were coming on the land (Matt. xxvii. 31, 32; Mark xv. 20, 21; Luke xxiii. 26-32; John xix. 17).

THE CRUCIFIXION—THE PRAYER FOR HIS MURDERERS.

THE condemned were stripped at the place of crucifixion and fastened to the cross, which was usually of the form known by the name of the "Roman Cross," but not nearly so high as is commonly represented. Usually, the feet of the sufferer were only about a foot or two above the ground, so that, instead of being raised aloft and looking downward, JESUS suffered in the midst of His persecutors. The body was either nailed or bound by cords to the cross, and sometimes both modes were adopted. Our LORD was nailed both by the hands and the feet, as had been foretold (Ps. xxii. 16; Zech. xii. 10; John. xx. 25, 27; comp. Rev. i. 7), a method exquisitely painful, though tending perhaps to shorten the torture. As in our SAVIOUR'S case, when the cross was not already fixed and standing, the sufferer was fastened to the wood as it lay on the ground, and the shock must have been agonizing when the cross was dropped into its place in the ground. Usually some drug was given to deaden the sense of these tortures, but our LORD refused the mixture of wine and myrrh that was offered to Him. He bore the agony of death in meekness and silence, as had been predicted of Him by Isaiah, and thus between two malefactors He died, the Just for the unjust, being "numbered with the transgressors" (Matt. xxvii. 38; Mark xv. 27, 28; Luke xxiii. 33; John xix. 18). While suspended on the cross His first saying—an utterance never to be forgotten—was a prayer for His murderers: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke xxiii. 34).

THE TIME—THE GUARD.

THE time of our LORD'S crucifixion was the third hour (or 9 o'clock A. M.), the very time when the morning sacrifice was offered (Mark xv. 25); and His death was at the ninth hour, which was the time of the evening sacrifice; and the space of the intervening six hours was divided at noon by the commencement of the miraculous darkness. The cross was watched by a centurion and a guard of four Roman soldiers. The garments of the sufferers were their perquisites, and so the raiment of our LORD was divided among them, except the upper robe, which was without a seam; the soldiers cast lots for it, thus unconsciously fulfilling another prophecy: "They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots" (Matt. xxvii. 35; Luke xiii. 34; John xix. 23; Ps. xxii. 18).

THE INSCRIPTION ON THE CROSS.

PILATE was enabled again to insult the Jews by the inscription which, according to custom, was placed over the culprit's head to indicate his crime. Hebrew, Greek and Latin were now understood and spoken by the people in Jerusalem, and therefore he wrote the label in these tongues. This fact in some measure explains the various readings of the Evangelists, who aimed only at giving the substance of the inscription, without noting the differences of expression in the three languages.

THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS (Matthew).

THE KING OF THE JEWS (Mark).

THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS (Luke).

JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS (John).

The chief priests felt the insult, and desired a change in the inscription, but PILATE contemptuously refused, saying, "What I have written, I have written" (Matt. xxvii. 31-38; Mark xv. 20-28; Luke xxiii. 26-34, 38; John xix. 17-24).

THE GRACIOUS PROMISE TO THE PENITENT ROBBER.

For three hours (9-12 A. M.) JESUS hung on the cross, exposed to the insults of the rulers and of the fickle rabble, who had changed when they saw Him apparently helpless in the hands of His enemies. Some stood to enjoy the sight, others, passing in and out of the city gate wagging their heads, taunted Him with the very prophecy which was being fulfilled—the destruction of the temple of His body that it might be raised again in three days. The chief priests even professed that they would believe on Him if He would establish His Divine power by coming down from the cross; and one of the culprits beside Him joined in railing at Him, asking as a proof of His mission that they might be delivered from the cross. The other, confessing the justice of their sentence, reproved his comrade, and uttered the memorable prayer, "LORD, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." For the second time JESUS spoke, and assured the dying penitent: "Verily, I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise" (Matt. xxvii. 39-44; Mark xv. 29-32; Luke xxiii. 35-37, 39-43).

THE WOMEN AT THE CROSS.

THREE women, together with JOHN, had lingered at the cross. His mother, her sister and Mary of Magdala—the three Marys. In the hour of His agony He bade His mother to look on John as her son, and John to receive her as his mother; "and from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home" (John xix. 25).

THE MIRACULOUS DARKNESS.

It was now noon, yet a supernatural darkness covered all the land from the sixth to the ninth hour. The Jewish months were lunar, and the Passover was in the middle of the month when the moon was full; therefore this obscuration could not be an eclipse. Deeper far than this darkness was the gloom that rested on the SAVIOUR'S soul, as He bore the burden of Divine wrath for the sins of men. At the ninth hour, He exclaimed, "My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?" Catching at the word "Eli," His utterance was misunderstood by those around Him as an appeal to the prophet Elijah. At this moment the Sufferer's mortal frame endured its last agony of intense thirst, and He fulfilled another prophecy by the exclamation, "I thirst." One of the spectators filled a sponge with the acid wine and water that the Roman soldiers ordinarily drank, and raised it to His mouth on the end of a stalk of hyssop. JESUS refused it, while the others said, "Let us see if Elijah will come to help Him" (Matt. xxvii. 46-49; Mark xv. 33-36; Luke xxiii. 44, 45; John xix. 28, 29).

THE DEATH OF JESUS.

ALL that the LAMB OF GOD could do for man had been endured; and now the end of His agony and the completion of His great redemption work are announced by the utterance, "It is finished," and yielding His soul to God. He exclaims, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," and bowing His head on His breast, He expired (Matt. xxvii. 50; Mark xv. 37; Luke xxiii. 46; John xix. 30).

PORTENTS AT CHRIST'S DEATH—CONVERSION OF THE CENTURION.

THE priest who entered the holy place with the blood of the evening sacrifice at the very hour of His death saw that the veil was rent from the top to the bottom, thus intimating that "a new and living way was consecrated for us to enter into the holiest of all, by the blood of JESUS, through the veil, that is to say, His flesh" (Heb. x. 19, foll.). The rocks around Jerusalem were rent by an earthquake, the graves were opened and many of the saints arose and were seen in the city after his resurrection. All these wonders and evidences did not suffice to subdue the hardened spirit of the Jews, but in the death of JESUS the Roman centurion saw enough to satisfy his mind that "this was the Son of God!"

HIS DEATH MADE CERTAIN—THE WATER AND THE BLOOD.

At sunset the Sabbath would begin. "That Sabbath-day was a high day," being the second day of the Feast of Unleavened Bread, when the first-fruits of the harvest were offered in the Temple, and whence the fifty days were reckoned to the Day of Pentecost. For that Sabbath this day was "the preparation." Now they would put away all defilements and all signs of mourning. They had just enacted a deed which would have profaned any day, but they could not endure its defilement by the consequences of their judicial murder. Their request that the sufferings of those on the cross might be ended was granted by PILATE, who consented that the soldiers might break their legs, and so hasten their death. The two malefactors were thus treated, but CHRIST was found to be dead already, hence His limbs were not broken. To be sure, however, that He was really dead, one of the soldiers pierced His side with a spear, and from the wound there flowed blood and water. Thus, in the death of Him, the true Paschal Lamb, two prophecies were fulfilled—"A bone of him shall not be broken," and, "They shall look on him whom they pierced" (John xix. 31-42; comp. Ex. xii. 46; Ps. xxxiv. 20; Zech. xii. 10; Ps. xxii. 16, 17; Rev. i. 7). Thus is the death of CHRIST attested, and even PILATE procures additional testimony from the centurion (Mark xv. 44, 45), because of his surprise at the briefness of the Sufferer's agony. Knowing the relation of these facts to the subsequent resurrection, JOHN, who was a witness of the scene, gives in detail all the incidents as they passed before his eyes.

JESUS LAID IN THE TOMB.

JOSEPH of Arimathea, a rich man and a member of the Sanhedrim, and who was secretly a disciple of JESUS, applied to PILATE for the body, who, when he was satisfied that JESUS was really dead, complied with his request. The conduct of JOSEPH encouraged NICODEMUS, who brought myrrh and aloes to anoint the corpse. They took the body down from the cross, rolled it in linen with the spices, and, because the Sabbath was at hand, they laid it hastily in a newly-made sepulchre, which JOSEPH had prepared for himself, in an adjoining garden. To secure the body until the Sabbath was past, they rolled a great stone against the door and departed. Thus was the prophecy of Isaiah fulfilled (liii. 9), that He should "make his grave with the rich." The chief priests remembered with anxiety the prediction that JESUS had uttered respecting His resurrection, and therefore, to guard against any devices of His followers, they obtained from PILATE a guard of soldiers, who sealed the stone and watched at the tomb (Matt. xxvii. 62-66).

THE RESURRECTION AND ASCENSION.

THE FIRST LORD'S DAY.

17th of Nisan (April 8th).—As the Resurrection is the great fact, so the day of its occurrence is the great day of Christianity. Ever since it has been called by the name of the LORD'S DAY (Rev. vii. 10); and to this epoch of the new creation of all things, marked by the NEW LIFE of CHRIST, all the permanent sanctity of the primeval Sabbath was transferred (John xx. 26; Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xvi. 2).

The Resurrection itself is related only by MATTHEW (xxviii. 2-4), who may have learned the facts from one or other of the Roman guard after they had got free from the danger in which they stood because of their falsehood and avowed unfaithfulness. All who heard it must have known that their story was absurd, and that, had they been asleep, they could not have known what had transpired. According to MARK, the Resurrection occurred early on the first day of the week, which commenced from the sunset of the evening before (Mark xvi. 9). It had already taken place when the first visit was paid to the sepulchre, "while it was yet dark," "as it began to dawn" (John xx. 1; Matt. xxviii. 1). Whatever portion of this day JESUS was in the tomb was, according to the Jewish custom, reckoned a day, and in the same manner the interval between His entombment and sunset on Friday was counted as a day, and thus He was three days in the earth (Matt. xii. 40; xvi. 21; xx. 19; xxvii. 63; Mark viii. 31; ix. 31; x. 34; Luke ix. 22; xviii. 33; John ii. 19, etc.).

VISIT OF THE WOMEN TO THE SEPULCHRE.

THE Jews resumed the business of ordinary life the moment that the Sabbath closed. The two MARYS were therefore able during the evening to procure the spices required to complete the hasty and partial embalment by NICODEMUS, and in the early dawn they approached the tomb, with certain other women, wondering how they would get the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. Reaching the tomb about sunrise, they found it open, and entering, they saw that the body of JESUS was not there (Matt. xxviii. 1; Mark xvi. 1-4; Luke xxiv. 1-3, 10; John xx. 1, 2).

The ardent spirit of MARY MAGDALENE led her to run at once and tell PETER of the indignity which she concluded the enemies of JESUS had perpetrated in removing His body.

The other women now entered, and there they saw an angel sitting on the right side, who told them that JESUS had arisen, and would meet His disciples in Galilee.

FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE RISEN SAVIOUR.

To the Women on their Return from the Sepulchre.—On their way back JESUS appeared to them and addressed them. They fell down to worship Him, and received from Him the message that had already been delivered by the angel (Matt. xxviii. 9, 10). The Apostles were yet in darkness, and they received the intelligence "as idle tales" (Luke xxiv. 9, 11).

VISIT OF PETER AND JOHN TO THE SEPULCHRE.

WHEN they heard from MARY her tidings, PETER and JOHN hastened to see for themselves, while the other women were in converse with the other Apostles. JOHN reached the tomb first, and, looking in, he saw the grave-clothes, but when PETER arrived he entered at once, and saw the linen clothes lying as they had been left, and the napkin that had been around the head folded and lying by itself (John xx. 8-10; comp. Luke xxiv. 12), showing that the Apostles could not have stolen the body, as they would have carried off all these things in their haste.

SECOND APPEARANCE OF JESUS.

To Mary Magdalene at the Sepulchre.—MARY had followed PETER and JOHN to the sepulchre, and when she arrived they had departed. Looking into the tomb, she saw two angels sitting at the head and feet where the body of JESUS had lain. Turning away she saw JESUS, but, excited and weeping, she did not recognize Him in her great mental confusion. The word "MARY," from the lips of our LORD, recalled her to herself, and in her excitement she would have embraced Him, but the mysterious words, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father," restrained her, and at His desire she went to intimate to the disciples His approaching Ascension (John xx. 11-18; Mark xvi. 9-11).

THIRD APPEARANCE OF OUR LORD.

To Peter.—PAUL states that immediately after our LORD'S Resurrection "He was seen of CEPHAS," before He appeared to the other Apostles (1 Cor. xv. 5). LUKE also mentions this appearance very emphatically in connection with the journey to Emmaus (Luke xxiv. 34).

OUR LORD'S FOURTH APPEARANCE.

The Journey to Emmaus.—The mental state of the Disciples may be seen by Luke xxiv. 13-35. CLEOPAS and his companion seem to have taken this journey merely for the sake of communion with each other respecting the bearing of the recent events on the Messiahship of JESUS. As they journey, an apparent stranger joins them, and, having asked them of the subject in which they seem so absorbed, quietly reviews the whole matter, expounding the Scriptures that related to the Messiah. Though their "hearts burn," they fail to recognize Him until He makes Himself known in the "breaking of bread," and no sooner are their eyes opened than "He vanishes out of their sight."

OUR LORD'S FIFTH APPEARANCE.

THE Apostles, all except THOMAS, were met together, when suddenly JESUS appeared in the midst of them. He called them to feel His body, and showed them His hands and His feet. He even ate food with them, and opened their minds to understand what was written of Him in the Law, the Prophets and the Psalms. He indicated the character of their Apostolic mission as witnesses of His ministry and of His Resurrection, and that they were to be preachers of repentance and remission of sins in His name to all nations. Enjoining them to wait at Jerusalem for the descent of the HOLY SPIRIT to qualify them for their work, He departed (Mark xvi. 14-18; Luke xxiv. 36-49; John xx. 19-23; 1 Cor. xv. 5, "then of the twelve").

CHRIST'S SIXTH APPEARANCE.

Second Appearance to the Assembled Disciples with Thomas.—That we find the disciples again assembled on the first day of the following week, and our LORD'S presence blessing their meeting, goes far to mark the LORD'S DAY as sacred. It was then that THOMAS, hitherto incredulous, was taught by the evidence of his senses that our LORD was risen indeed (John xx. 24-29).

THE SEVENTH APPEARANCE OF OUR SAVIOUR.

The Third Appearance of Jesus to the Apostles (seven of them) by the Lake of Galilee.—The meeting at the lake, which JOHN describes (xxi. 1-24), must have been previous to that which took place by appointment on the mountain in Galilee. Seven of the Apostles had returned to their vocations, and by a miraculous draught of fishes JESUS reveals Himself to them. It was now that He dealt so tenderly with PETER, and restored him after his fall.

THE EIGHTH APPEARANCE OF JESUS CHRIST.

To His Disciples in Galilee.—MATTHEW describes how the Disciples went to the place appointed on the mountain in Galilee (xxviii. 16, 17), and it is almost certain that it was to this assembly that PAUL refers when he says that JESUS was seen of "above five hundred brethren at once" (1 Cor. xv. 6). Here, in the region where His ministry had chiefly been spent, He closes it with the memorable commission (Matt. xxviii. 18-20) by which He sends forth His Apostles and disciples to be heralds of salvation to mankind.

CHRIST'S NINTH APPEARANCE.

To James.—After stating that JESUS was seen by such a great body of witnesses, PAUL immediately adds, "After that He was seen of JAMES," and this appears to have been a special interview, as JAMES was not among the Apostles at the Lake of Galilee.

HIS TENTH APPEARANCE, AND ASCENSION.

Our Lord's Last Interview with the Apostles, and His Ascension.—His tenth appearance. This last scene was specially reserved for the Apostles alone, who were to be His witnesses for His Resurrection and Ascension. PETER rests on the fact that when GOD raised JESUS from the dead, "He showed Him openly not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of GOD, even to us who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead" (Acts x. 40, 41).

Thus, during forty days, JESUS "showed Himself after His passion by many infallible proofs. As MOSES was forty days on the Mount, and ELIJAH the same time in Horeb, and as JESUS was forty days in the wilderness tempted of the devil, so it appears that a similar period was allotted to establish the fact of His Resurrection. At last, on the fortieth day, the Apostles were assembled with JESUS at Jerusalem (it would seem by special appointment, Acts i. 4; comp. v. 6), and He desired them not to depart thence till they received the promise of the FATHER, the baptism with the HOLY GHOST. Rebuking their desire to know when He would restore the kingdom to Israel, He promised them power for the work which they had to do in His Name in Jerusalem, in Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth (Acts i. 4-8). And now He led them forth over the very ground He had traversed with them six weeks before, when He entered the city for His sufferings. The farther or eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, overlooking Bethany, was called by that name, and having reached that locality, He blessed them with uplifted hands, and being received as into a chariot by a cloud, He ascended from their sight into Heaven. Meanwhile, the Disciples scarcely recollected that this was what He had Himself foretold: "What and if ye shall see the SON OF MAN ascend up where He was before?" (John vi. 62). They stood gazing up after Him, lost in admiration, until they were aroused by the appearance of two angels standing by them and declaring that He would so come again in like manner as they had seen Him ascending into Heaven. Having worshipped their GLORIFIED LORD, they returned from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem with great joy; and while awaiting the promised gift of the HOLY GHOST, they spent the time in the Temple praising and blessing GOD (Luke xxiv. 50-53; Acts i. 1-12).

The narrative may be appropriately closed by referring to the two points on which JOHN insists: first, that we have only a small part recorded of what our LORD said and did while on earth; and secondly, that what we have, has been written with a specific object—"that we might believe that JESUS IS THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, and that, believing, we might have LIFE THROUGH HIS NAME" (John xx. 30, 31; xxi. 25).

THE SUFFERINGS AND DEATH OF CHRIST.

THE BELIEVER'S PARDON AND SALVATION: THEIR OBJECT AND RESULT.

NOTE.—Only so much of each passage is cited as bears directly on the Gracious and Glorious Doctrine of Pardon and Salvation in and through CHRIST.

This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead; he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.	Rom. v. 6..... 7..... 8..... 9..... 10..... 11..... 15..... 16..... 17..... 18..... 19..... 21.....	When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. Scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life. We also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement. But not as the offence, so also is the free gift: for if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man Jesus, Christ, hath abounded unto many. And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification. For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. Therefore, as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound: that as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.
	I am the door of the sheep. I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me. And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.	Rom. vi. 3..... 4..... 5..... 9..... 10..... 22..... 23.....	Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him. For in that he died, he died unto sin once. Now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.
	Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me. This he said, signifying what death he should die.	Rom. viii. 3.... 32.... 34.... 39....	God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

THE SUFFERINGS AND DEATH OF CHRIST.

THE BELIEVER'S PARDON AND SALVATION: THEIR OBJECT AND RESULT.

TEXT.	THE TESTIMONY.	TEXT.	THE TESTIMONY.
Rom. x. 9.....	If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.	Heb. vii. 22....	By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament.
Rom. xiv. 9....	To this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.	25....	Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. Who needeth not daily, as those high-priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself. For the law maketh men high-priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore.
1 Cor. i. 30....	Of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption.	27....
1 Cor. iii. 11..	Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.	28....
1 Cor. v. 7....	Even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us.	Heb. ix. 12....	Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God. And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth. Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high-priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others; for then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world; but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many.
1 Cor. vi. 11....	But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus. Ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.	13....	We are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. This man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God; by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified. Their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh.
1 Cor. xv. 3....	Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures.	14....	To Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.
2 Cor. v. 14....	The love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead: And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.	15....	The bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high-priest for sin, are burned without the camp. Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.
19....	God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. He hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.	16....	Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.
21....		17....	Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit.
Gal. iii. 13....	Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree.	25....	Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh.
Gal. iv. 4.....	When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law. To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.	26....	The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.
Eph. i. 7.....	In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace.	Heb. x. 10....	He is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.
Eph. ii. 13....	Now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. He is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby.	12....	Ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us.
14....		17, 18	God sent his only-begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. We have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.
15....		19....	This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God. We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.
16....		20....	Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father.
Eph. v. 2.....	Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour. Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.	Heb. xii. 24...	Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.
23.....	Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.	Heb. xiii. 11..	These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God.
25, 26....	In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins. Having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; Christ in you, the hope of glory.	12..
27.....		1 Peter ii. 24..
Col. i. 14.....	You, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses. Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it.	1 Peter iii. 18
20.....		1 Peter iv. 1...
27.....		1 John i. 7....
Col. ii. 13.....	God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.	1 John ii. 2....
14.....	Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope; this is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.	1 John iii. 5, 8
15.....		16....
1 Thess. v. 9...	Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.	1 John iv. 9....
10....	Salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.	10....
1 Tim. i. 1, 15.	The great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.	14....
1 Tim. ii. 6....	When he had by himself purged our sins.	1 John v. 11..
2 Tim. i. 1, 9...	How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation? We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. To make the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil: and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. In that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.	12..
Titus ii. 13, 14	Being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him.	13..

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT,

WITH THE AUTHORSHIP AND DATE WHEN WRITTEN.

WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.	THE BOOKS OF THE FOUR EVANGELISTS, CALLED THE GOSPELS.	WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.
38 and 61 Jerusalem.	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MATTHEW.—There has been much discussion as to the language in which this Book was written and its date. Some have maintained that it was written in Hebrew, or rather Syro-Chaldaic; others, that its original was in Greek; and others, again, that it was written by the same inspired author in both languages. The last is probably the fact, and the Hebrew copy was written about A. D. 38, the Greek A. D. 61. St. MATTHEW relates what he saw and heard with the most natural and unassuming simplicity, in a plain and perspicuous style. "For simplicity of narrative and an artless relation of facts (without any applause, censure or digressive remarks, on the part of the historian, upon the characters introduced in it; without any intermixture of his own opinion upon any subject whatsoever), and for a multiplicity of internal marks of credibility, this Gospel certainly has no parallel among human productions." St. MATTHEW wrote primarily for the Jewish Christians, and hence his Gospel abounds, more than either of the other three, in allusions to Jewish customs, and hence, too, he dwells most on those of our Lord's words and acts that had direct reference to the Jews, and points out carefully numerous instances of the fulfilment of prophecies—a line of argument especially calculated to influence the devout Israelite. It is worthy of note, that the outlines of the whole Spiritual system are in this Gospel correctly laid down. St. PAUL has amplified and illustrated, but neither he nor any other Apostle or inspired writer has brought to light one truth, the prototype of which is not found in the words and acts of EMMANUEL, as related by St. MATTHEW. [For a sketch of St. MATTHEW's life, see page 54 of these Aids.]	63-64 Rome.
61 Alexandria.	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MARK.—St. MARK is supposed to have been "JOHN, whose surname was Mark" (Acts xii. 12), called by St. PETER, in his First Epistle (v. 13), "Marcus, my son," from which it is concluded that he had been converted under St. PETER's preaching. Some have thought that he was the young man mentioned Mark xiv. 51, 52. He was a companion of St. PAUL and St. BARNABAS during their earlier missionary labors, but left them at Perga, in Pamphylia; some time later he became co-laborer with the latter. After this he went to Rome (2 Tim. iv. 11), and thence into Asia, where he again met St. PETER. He wrote his Gospel, it is supposed, under that Apostle's supervision; this supposition is based upon the fact that he is spoken of by PAPIAS, a Christian writer of the Second Century, as St. PETER's "disciple and interpreter," and upon the additional fact that, while he omits many things honorable to that Apostle, he mentions at length all his shortcomings. In fact, JUSTIN MARTYR calls it "the Gospel of St. Peter." (See also 2 Peter i. 15, 16.) The date of the Gospel has been fixed by general consent a little later than that of St. MATTHEW—about A. D. 61. That it was written directly for Gentile and not Jewish converts is evident from the facts that quotations from the Prophets and allusions to Hebrew customs are usually avoided, and, when they occur, explanatory clauses are added. St. MARK is supposed to have died at Alexandria.	97 Ephesus.
64 Rome.	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. LUKE.—This Gospel was written by St. LUKE, "the beloved physician," about A. D. 63-64, while he was with St. PAUL in Rome. St. LUKE, according to the testimony of some of the Fathers, was a native of Antioch. He would appear, from his intimate acquaintance with the Greek language, as well as from his Greek name, Λουκᾶς, to have been of Gentile extraction. But from the Hebrew terms occurring in his writings, and from his accurate knowledge of the Jewish religion, ceremonies and customs, it is highly probable that he was a Jewish proselyte; and, having afterward embraced the Gospel, he became a faithful and zealous companion of St. PAUL in many of his labors and travels (Acts xvi. 10; xx. 5, etc.). We learn from Acts xviii. 15 and Philom. 24 that he was with the Apostle at the time of his first captivity at Rome; and from 2 Tim. iv. 11 that, during his second imprisonment, St. LUKE alone remained by his side. TERTULLIAN and CHRYSOSTOM call St. PAUL St. LUKE's master and teacher, and EUSEBIUS says he was for the most part a companion of that Apostle. Though, like St. MARK, he was not an Apostle, nor is he once mentioned in the Gospels, yet this does not diminish the credit due to his narrative, because he himself has told us the sources of information to which the HOLY SPIRIT directed him. While passing over various particulars mentioned by St. MATTHEW and St. MARK, he records many things not mentioned by them. His classical style, in both this Book and the Acts, shows him to have been a scholar, while his Gospel is certainly more of a regular narrative than either of the others, as he evidently preserved the chronological order of the main facts. THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. JOHN.—Written at Ephesus, after St. JOHN's release from the Isle of Patmos, about A. D. 97, this Gospel completed "the Canon of Scripture." St. JOHN, the "disciple whom Jesus loved," from his call till our Lord's Ascension, was never voluntarily absent from His Master's side: leaning upon His breast, standing at His cross (when all the rest were scattered) and running to the sepulchre, his love was earnest and devoted. "GOD, who distributes His graces and gifts severally as He pleases, seems to have given St. JOHN a peculiar insight into the mysteries of Divine love." He takes a particular pleasure in enlarging upon it, and treats of it in a plain and inartificial style, but yet with such a lofty eloquence as is above the rules of human art, and can only be ascribed to the influence of that HOLY SPIRIT who gave him utterance. Some learned writers have thought that he wrote the Gospel as an answer to certain vile heresies that had grown up and were disturbing the Apostolic Church; it was certainly written for a more catholic purpose, which he distinctly states: "THESE ARE WRITTEN THAT YE MIGHT BELIEVE THAT JESUS IS THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD; AND THAT BELIEVING, YE MIGHT HAVE LIFE THROUGH HIS NAME." St. JOHN has recorded those of our LORD'S discourses, parables, miracles and prayers which the most clearly showed forth His character as GOD MANIFEST IN THE FLESH, and displayed His wondrous love to man, evidenced by His acts and words as well as by His Vicarious Sufferings and Death. [For a sketch of St. JOHN's life, see page 54 of these Aids.] Thus, we have the life of our LORD in four narratives, which differ sufficiently in their details to show their independence of each other, and yet are so fully in accord on points of importance as to demonstrate that the same SPIRIT guided and influenced the mind and directed the work of their several writers (John xiv. 26).
	THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. THIS BOOK is a connecting link between the Gospels and Epistles—a useful postscript to the former and a valuable preface or introduction to the latter, especially to those of St. PAUL. The commencement acknowledges it to be a sequel to the Gospel according to St. LUKE; and this, with the fact that the same style prevails, proves it to have come from the pen of the same writer. It was probably published about the year 64, at Rome, his arrival at which city, with St. PAUL, the writer mentions near the close of the Book. Though its name would imply that it was a history of the work of all the Apostles, yet the greater part of it is an account of St. PAUL'S missionary travels, showing how the Gospel privileges were offered to and accepted by the Gentiles. It covers upward of thirty years, commencing with the Ascension of our LORD and closing with the second year of St. PAUL in Rome. The Book of the Acts is one of the most important, as well as interesting, portions of the Sacred History, materially assisting us in understanding both the Gospel narratives and the Apostolic Letters. While it is unexceptionable as a literary composition, its language is so plain and unassuming

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT,

WITH THE AUTHORSHIP AND DATE WHEN WRITTEN.

WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.	THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL, THE APOSTLE.	WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.
	THE APOSTOLIC EPISTLES, of which St. PAUL wrote fourteen, are a Divinely-inspired commentary and an authoritative authentic exposition of the truths and doctrines of our holy religion, as uttered by our LORD and recorded in the Gospels. They contain the complete development of those "many things" which JESUS told His Disciples they were "not able to bear" during His life, and which were to be taught them by the HOLY GHOST. The Pauline Epistles are strongly controversial; they first discuss and settle the questions in controversy, and refute such erroneous ideas or doctrines as had sprung up in the Church addressed, then apply the truths deduced and proven to practical edification and holiness. In studying these letters three facts must be borne in mind: his quotations from the Old Testament are taken from the Septuagint version, then in general use; in some instances he unites passages from different prophets, without indicating the separating points; and in other places he gives the sense of a passage without regard to the precise language.
58 Corinth.	THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.—It is not known by whom the Gospel had been carried to Rome, though it is thought by some of the Pentecostal converts (Acts ii. 10). St. PAUL had not yet been at Rome, but had heard of the state of the Church there from Aquila and Priscilla, who had been banished by the edict of Claudius. It was written at Corinth and addressed to the Church at Rome, which was composed of both Jews and Gentile converts. Its object was to confirm them in the faith; to guard them against the errors of Judaizing Christians; to show that Faith in JESUS CHRIST could alone obtain for them salvation. It is very valuable on account of its arguments as to the necessity, excellence and universality of the Gospel Dispensation. It is a writing which, for sublimity and truth of sentiment, for brevity and strength of expression, for regularity in its structure, and, above all, for the unspeakable importance of the discoveries which it contains, stands unrivalled by any mere human composition, and as far exceeds the most celebrated productions of the learned Greeks and Romans as the shining of the sun exceeds the twinkling of the stars.	62 Rome.
57 Ephesus.	THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS was written at Ephesus, in the year 57, to the Church at Corinth, a city of Greece, situate on the isthmus of that name. Its object is to notice and reprove various abuses and disorders which had crept into the Church, and to exhort the members to union, simplicity and purity of life. It contains directions about the marriage state; advice with reference to partaking of meats offered in heathen sacrifices; cautions against irregularities in the administration of the Lord's Supper; a powerful defence of the doctrine of the Resurrection; a fine exposition of and argument for Christian love; and various other matters of importance.	62 Rome.
58 Philippi.	THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS was written a year after the first, at Philippi, in Macedonia, and subsequently sent to the Corinthians by St. Titus and his associates. The first letter to the Church at Corinth having had the good effect of producing regret and reformation amongst those whom it rebuked, this was written to confirm them in their good resolutions, and to give them advice on various points suitable to their situation and circumstances, more particularly with reference to attempts that were making by false teachers to pervert their faith and to lessen St. PAUL's credit by denying his Apostolic mission.	52 Corinth.
52 Antioch.	THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS is supposed to have been written, about A. D. 52, to the Church in that part of Asia Minor called Galatia. St. PAUL himself had planted the Church in these parts; subsequently certain Judaizing mischief-workers had intruded themselves among the converts, and disparaging the Apostolic commission of St. PAUL, had led some of them astray from the Gospel. In this letter the Apostle exposes the Judaizing heretics, shows that he is "not a whit behind the chiefest Apostle," and powerfully vindicates Gospel truth.	62 Rome.
51 Rome.	THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.—Ephesus was a city of Ionia and the capital of Proconsular Asia; it was also famous for a temple of Diana, which was esteemed one of the seven wonders of the world. Its inhabitants were noted for their superstitious arts, luxury and lasciviousness. St. PAUL preached the Gospel for a short time at Ephesus, about A. D. 53; and in the following year returned and remained there more than two years. He wrote this Epistle about A. D. 61, during the early part of his imprisonment at Rome. Its scope is to establish the Ephesians in the faith, and to this end to give them more exalted views of the eternal love of GOD, and of the excellency and dignity of CHRIST; to show them that they were saved by grace, and that the Gentiles,	62 Rome.
	however wretched they had formerly been, now had equal privileges with the Jews; to encourage them by declaring with what steadfastness He suffered for the truth, and with what earnestness He prayed for their establishment and perseverance in it; and, finally, in consequence of their profession, to engage them to the practice of those duties which became them as Christians. (See Rev. ii. 1-7.)
	THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS was written at Rome, toward the close of St. PAUL's first incarceration, A. D. 62. The Church at Philippi appears to have been one of the most pure and generous of that age. Its members showed the tenderest regard for St. PAUL. Twice while he was at Thessalonica, and once when at Corinth, they had generously sent him contributions for his support, which he accepted, to prevent the Gospel being burdensome to more recent converts. They had also cheerfully borne many sufferings for their adherence to the Saviour. Their conduct had been uniformly so exemplary that he had only to rejoice over them. Accordingly, in this Epistle, he pours forth his heart in expressions of devout thankfulness and hearty commendations, not unmingled, however, with exhortations and counsels.	62 Rome.
	THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS was written A. D. 62, to the Christians at Colosse, in Asia Minor, in reply to an inquiry which they had sent after his health and welfare. It is doubtful whether St. PAUL ever was at Colosse, as it is, also, by whom the Church there was founded. The contents of this Epistle are of a general nature, exhorting to Christian faith and practice.	62 Rome.
	THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS was probably written A. D. 52, to the Church at Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, and is supposed to have been the first written of all the Epistles. Its contents are of a general nature; but toward the end he dissuades against excessive grief for the loss of deceased friends, and recommends preparation for death and judgment.	52 Corinth.
	THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS was written in the same year as the former, principally to correct some wrong notions which its perusal had excited with respect to the near approach of the day of judgment.
	THE FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.—There has been much dispute as to when this Epistle was written; internal as well as external evidence leads us to adopt the later date assigned, A. D. 64, during a missionary tour subsequent to St. PAUL's first imprisonment at Rome. St. TIMOTHY was a native of Lystra; his father was a Gentile, and his mother, Eunice, a devout Jewess; by the latter, assisted by her mother, Lois, TIMOTHY had been well reared in the Hebrew faith, and he was one of the first of St. PAUL's converts to Christianity. St. PAUL ordained him to the ministry, and subsequently made him Bishop of Ephesus. This Epistle is a pastoral charge, instructing TIMOTHY in the duties of his office.	64 Laodicea.
	THE SECOND EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY was written while St. PAUL was a prisoner at Rome, and probably during his second captivity, just before his martyrdom.	65 Rome.
	THE EPISTLE TO TITUS.—St. Titus was by birth a Greek, and one of St. PAUL's earlier converts to the faith; after accompanying St. PAUL for a time, the Apostle had placed him in charge of the churches in Crete. This Epistle is a pastoral charge instructing him in the duties entrusted to him.	64 Nicopolis.
	THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON, written during St. PAUL's first imprisonment, and forwarded with that to the Colossians, by the hands of ONESIMUS. This Epistle is a beautiful specimen of Christian courtesy.	63 Rome.
	THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS.—As the HOLY SPIRIT did not direct the author of this Epistle to insert his own name, or to specify the persons to whom it was addressed, the determination of these questions cannot be essential to its right use, nor is it surprising that there should have been much difference of opinion upon them. Whilst, however, many both in former and in later times have thought otherwise, it has been determined by the best authorities that it was written by St. PAUL to the Jewish converts to Christianity. There are ample internal and external evidences of the correctness of this conclusion. Its object is to show the connection between the Mosaic and Christian Dispensations. The objections to the Gospel are answered with great force, and the arguments, being addressed to Jews, are principally taken from the Old Testament. The style is elegant, and often sublime.	63 Rome.

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT,

WITH THE AUTHORSHIP AND DATE WHEN WRITTEN.

WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.	THE CATHOLIC OR GENERAL EPISTLES.	WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.
	THE Epistle of St. JAMES, the two of St. PETER, the three (two of which are not "general") of St. JOHN, and the one of St. JUDE, have been called the Catholic or General Epistles, because they are addressed to the Church at large, and not to the converts of any one city or district.	55 Babylon.
61 Jerusalem.	THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF ST. JAMES was written about A. D. 61, by the son of ALPHEUS or CLEOPHAS, St. JAMES, who is called in the Gospels JAMES THE LESS, to distinguish him from JAMES the son of ZEBEDEE. He is supposed to have been the cousin of Christ, his mother being the sister of the Virgin Mary. He was Bishop of the Church in Jerusalem, and presided at the Councils of the Apostles; in consequence of his integrity and holy zeal he was surnamed JAMES THE JUST. He was put to death in a tumult of unbelieving Jews, A. D. 62. The object of the Epistle was to animate the Jewish Christians to support patiently their sufferings for the Gospel, and to correct a misinterpretation of St. PAUL's doctrine of justification by faith without the works of the ceremonial law, which some bad men had perverted to mean without the works of the moral law, and thus opened the door to all sorts of profligacy. Hence, the Apostle shows the true nature of a living active faith, which "without works is dead."	68 Jerusalem.
63 Babylon.	THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF ST. PETER.—Of this inspired Epistle Dr. Clarke has well said, "No Christian can read it without deriving from it both light and life." St. PETER's style is peculiarly vigorous and impressive; as one of the early Fathers, ERASMUS, said, "It is sparing in words, but full of sense" ("verbis pauca, sententiis differta"). This Epistle is addressed to the Christians scattered "throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia," and was designed to comfort them in the terrible persecutions that had thus dispersed them, and he does this by the noblest considerations which the Gospel suggests.	69 Jerusalem.
	THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF ST. PETER.—The Apostle wrote this Epistle just before his martyrdom. It is addressed to the Church at large. Grand throughout, the style in some parts is positively sublime (see iii. 10, et. seq.). THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF ST. JOHN.—A learned writer has described this Epistle forcibly as "a didactic discourse upon the living fundamental principles of the Christian religion." A terrible heresy had sprung up, the propagators of which are called by the Apostle "deceivers" and "Antichrist," and the Apostle's main object seems to have been to expose and denounce this false doctrine, and to assert, and that emphatically, the Divine and Human Nature of Jesus Christ. Like the Apostle's character, this Epistle is full and overflowing with LOVE.
	THE SECOND AND THIRD EPISTLES OF ST. JOHN.—These are improperly classed with the General Epistles, as they are addressed to individuals; the Second to "the elect lady and her children" (or more correctly, probably, "the lady ELECTA and her children"), the Third to "GAIUS" (or CAIUS).	66 Syria.
	THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF ST. JUDE.—The author of this Epistle was called also LEBBEUS and THADDEUS (Matt. x. 3; Luke vi. 15). He was the brother of St. JAMES (the Less), and hence cousin of our LORD. He was one of the twelve Apostles. We read little more of him in the Gospels than that he inquired of our LORD how He intended to manifest Himself to His disciples and not to the world (John xiv. 22). His Epistle is supposed to have been written to Jewish Christians in Syria and Arabia, where he is reported to have labored, and its design is clearly to guard the Christian Church against those false teachers who resolved all religion into speculative belief and outward profession, and sought to allure the Disciples into insubordination and licentiousness. THE APOCALYPSE, COMMONLY CALLED THE REVELATION OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE.
95 or 96 Isle of Patmos. Published 97	THIS Book is styled the Apocalypse (Αποκάλυψις) or Revelation (i. e., the revealing or unveiling of that which had been hidden) of St. JOHN the Divine (Θεολόγος, "Theologian"), as consisting of matters chiefly prophetic, which were revealed to St. JOHN by OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST. This took place when he was in the Isle of Patmos, in the Ægean Sea, whither he was banished, as is generally supposed, by the Emperor Domitian, A. D. 94 or 95. It was published soon after his release from exile, about A. D. 97. It has been remarked by a learned and able writer that no book of the New Testament has been so strongly attested or commented upon so early as this, nor does any other equal it in the dignity and sublimity of its composition. It may be divided into three parts: Chapter i. contains JOHN's vision of CHRIST in glory; ii., iii., the seven letters addressed by our LORD to the seven Churches of Asia Minor. The remainder of the Book, after presenting us (ch. iv.) with a description of the LAMB ON THE THRONE, and bringing to our notice the Book of GOD'S decrees as to future events, is occupied in showing the contents of that Book, the subject of which is the state of the Church, from the close of the Sacred Volume till the consummation of all things; and thus it forms a suitable sequel to the prophecies of DANIEL. The Epistles to the Seven Churches supply the most important instruction to the Universal Church in every age, and may be profitably read by every Christian. As general hints for the profitable reading of this invaluable Book, which, as ages roll on, affords to each succeeding generation a brighter evidence of the Divine origin of our holy religion, and of the gracious intentions of GOD to man, the following remarks from Bishop LOWTHER, the celebrated commentator, are extremely valuable: "An ordinary reader may receive great edification from those noble hymns offered up to GOD and CHRIST, and may likewise discover many useful truths, such as the adoration of the one SUPREME GOD in opposition to all creature-worship; the relying upon the merits of CHRIST only for pardon, sanctification and salvation; and that we ought to wait patiently for CHRIST'S appearing and His kingdom, and, in an earnest expectation of it, to continue steadfast in the profession of	the true faith and practice of sincere holiness, notwithstanding all the sufferings which may attend a good conscience. All may learn those marks and characters of Antichrist which it most nearly concerns us to take notice of, viz. pride, ambition and affectation of worldly pomp and grandeur; a cruel and persecuting spirit, seeking to reduce others rather by force and compulsion than by reason and argument; the love of ease and softness and a careless and luxurious life; and that whosoever are guilty of these things are so departed from the true spirit of Christianity; and surely he that takes warning from the plain and frequent admonitions of this Book to avoid these sins has not wholly lost his labors in reading it; and, withal, has entitled himself to the blessings pronounced upon those who keep its sayings." To those who would trifle with the prophetic parts of this Book because of their mystery, the following considerations may not be without value: "No prophecies in the Revelation can be more clouded with obscurity than that a child should be born of a pure virgin—that a mortal should not see corruption—that a person despised and numbered among malefactors should be established for ever on the throne of DAVID. Yet still the pious Jew preserved his faith entire amidst all these wonderful and, in appearance, contradictory intimations. He looked into the holy books in which they were contained with reverence, and, with an eye of patient expectation, waited for the consolation of Israel. We in the same manner look up to these prophecies of the Apocalypse for the full consummation of the great scheme of the Gospel, when Christianity shall finally prevail over all the corruptions of the world, and be universally established in its utmost purity." The conclusion of this Book is deeply solemn, characteristic of the Gospel, as distinct from the Law (ch. xxii. 21 with Mal. iv. 6 and John i. 17) and expressive of the design of the whole Bible, which is to point out CHRIST as the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last, and to invite mankind to take of the water of life freely offered through Him—that life of which the indwelling of His Spirit in our heart is the pledge—for without holiness no man shall see the Lord.
	THE HOLY BIBLE. GREAT GOD, with wonder and with praise On all Thy works I look; But still Thy wisdom, power and grace Shine brightest in Thy Book. O, may these Heavenly Pages be My ever chief delight; And still new beauties may I see, And still increasing light	Divine Instructor! Gracious Lord! Be Thou for ever near. Teach me to love Thy Sacred Word, And view my Saviour here. BLESSED LORD, who hast caused all Holy Scripture to be written for our learning, grant that we may in such wise hear them, read, mark, learn and inwardly digest them, that, by patience and comfort of Thy Holy Word, we may embrace and ever hold fast the blessed hope of everlasting life, which Thou hast given us in our SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST. AMEN.

TABULAR MEMOIR OF ST. PAUL.

YEAR OF OUR LORD.	RECORDED EVENTS IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER.	WHERE RECORDED.
1-5	Born at Tarsus, the capital of Cilicia.....	Acts xxii. 3.
Tarsus.	Learns the trade of tentmaking.....	Acts xviii. 3.
Jerusalem.	Taught according to "the perfect manner of the law of the fathers" by GAMALIEL.....	Acts xvii. 3.
31 and 32	While still a "young man" he participates vigorously in the persecution of Christians.....	Acts vii. 58; viii. 1, 3.
33	Yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter, he seeks and obtains a commission from the high-priest to go into Damascus on his cruel errand of persecution.....	[5; xvi. 9-12.
Near Damascus.	Near Damascus, a vivid miraculous light shines from heaven and blinds him, and SAUL and his company fall to the earth.....	Acts ix. 1, 2; xxii. 4.
Damascus.	JESUS appears to him and converses with him, directing him to go into the city to learn what he shall do.....	Acts ix. 3, 4, 8; xxii. 6.
In Arabia and Damascus.	He arises and is led into Damascus, where he remains blind three days.....	Acts ix. 4-6; xxii. 10; xxvi. 14-18; 1 Cor. xv. 8.
36	ANANIAS, being sent by the LORD, comes to SAUL, restores his sight and baptizes him.....	Acts ix. 7-9; xxii. 11.
Jerusalem.	Then, being thus born again, he retires to Arabia for a season, and returning to Damascus, at once enters upon his Apostolic labors, preaching CHRIST in the synagogues of Damascus, exciting the amazement of the multitude, and increasing the more in spiritual strength, he confounds the Jews.....	Acts ix. 10-18; xxii. 12-16.
36	The Jews of Damascus lie in wait day and night to kill him, but he escapes by being let down in a basket at night.....	[i. 17.
Tarsus.	He proceeds to Jerusalem, where the Disciples are at first afraid of him, but being convinced of the change in his character, receive him into their fellowship.....	Acts ix. 20-22; Gal. Acts ix. 23-25; 2 Cor. xi. 33.
43	He preaches boldly; the Jews of Jerusalem seek his life, and he escapes to his native city.....	Acts ix. 26-28.
Antioch.	BARNABAS goes to Tarsus after him, and they proceed to Antioch, where they remain a whole year and establish the first Gentile Church (here the title Christian is first applied to the Disciples).....	Acts ix. 29. 30.
44	PAUL and BARNABAS carry relief to the poor brethren in Judea.....	Acts xi. 25, 26.
Antioch.	Having fulfilled their charge, they return to Antioch, JOHN MARK accompanying them.....	Acts xi. 29, 30.
45	PAUL and BARNABAS are set apart by the Church at Antioch, as commanded by the HOLY GHOST, for missionary work among the Gentiles; they start on their first tour, taking MARK with them; at Salamis they preach in the synagogue.....	Acts xi. 25.
Salamis.	At Paphos, ELYMAS (BAR-JESUS), the sorcerer, is struck blind, and SERGIUS PAULUS, the proconsul, is converted.....	Acts xiii. 1-5.
Paphos.	Then they go to Parga, in Pamphylia, where MARK leaves them.....	Acts xiii. 6-12.
Parga.	Thence they go to Antioch in Pisidia, where PAUL preaches with good effect a powerful sermon to the Jews, which, by request of the Gentiles, he repeats to them the following Sabbath with marked success.....	Acts xiii. 13.
Antioch.	Thence to Iconium, where they make a great many converts.....	Acts xiii. 14-48.
Iconium.	They go to Lystra and Derbe; at the former, PAUL cures the man who had been lame from birth.....	Acts xiii. 51-xiv. 1.
Lystra and Derbe.	The people regard the Apostles as gods, and are with difficulty restrained from offering sacrifice to them.....	Acts xiv. 2-10.
47	Not long after, some Jews, from Antioch (in Pisidia) and Iconium, induce the fickle people of Lystra to stone PAUL; they leave him, supposing him dead, but he recovers miraculously, and he and BARNABAS go to Derbe.....	Acts xiv. 11-18.
Derbe.	Thence they go again via Lystra, etc., to Parga, in Pamphylia, and into Attalia, and then return to Syrian-Antioch. Thus ends PAUL's first Missionary Tour, and he remains at Antioch for about four years.....	Acts xiv. 19, 20.
48	PAUL attends the Church Council held at Jerusalem to decide about the circumcision of the Gentile converts.....	Acts xiv. 21-28.
Antioch.	PAUL, with a number of others, goes back to Antioch, bearing the decision to the Gentile Churches in Syria and Cilicia.....	Acts xv. 1-21.
52	His Second Missionary Tour commences.....	Acts xv. 22-35.
53	He passes through Syria and Cilicia to Derbe and Lystra, where he meets with TIMOTHY, whom he takes with him on his tour. He travels from city to city, accomplishing much good.....	Acts xv. 36-40.
Derbe and Lystra.	At Troas, LUKE joins the company, and in response to a vision PAUL goes into Macedonia; at Philippi, LYDIA is converted, she and her family are baptized, and she constrains the Apostle and his party to abide at her house.....	Acts xvi. 1-3.
Troas.	PAUL exorcises a spirit of divination from a young girl, whose masters bring him and SILAS before the magistrate; they are beaten and cast into prison, their feet being put in stocks.....	Acts xvi. 4-7.
Philippi.	At midnight the prison doors are miraculously opened and their bonds loosed; the jailer is converted; he and his family are baptized. In the morning they are released, and depart from Philippi, going to Thessalonica, where PAUL makes many converts.....	Acts xvi. 8-15.
Thess'l'niae.	PAUL and his company go to Berea, where they are very successful.....	Acts xvi. 16-24.
Berea.	Thence to Athens, where PAUL delivers a powerful sermon, making, however, but few converts.....	Acts xvi. 25-34.
54	He soon goes to Corinth; here preaches on the Sabbaths; among the converts, considerable in number, is CRISPUS, the chief ruler of the synagogue; the LORD appears to Paul and encourages him in his work; he remains in this city a year and a half. After a brief rest, he makes a rapid tour (the third) through Galatia and Phrygia.....	Acts xvi. 35-xvii. 4.
Corinth.	He goes to Ephesus; thence, touching at Cesarea, he hastens to Jerusalem, and returns to Antioch.....	Acts xvii. 5-12.
55	He goes again to Ephesus, where he baptizes in JESUS' name twelve of ST. JOHN BAPTIST's disciples, and they receive the HOLY GHOST; he preaches upwards of two years in the school of TYRANNUS; "GOD wrought special miracles by the hands of PAUL;" his success here is wonderful, especially after GOD has discomfited certain vagabond Jewish exorcists who strive to work miracles similar to his.....	Acts xvii. 13-34.
Eph., etc.	PAUL leaves Ephesus and visits Macedonia and Greece; then returns to Philippi.....	Acts xviii. 1-17.
56	He goes to Troas, where EUTYCHUS is killed by a fall from the window of a room where PAUL was preaching, and is restored to life by the Apostle; he sails to Miletus; here he sends for the pastors of the Church at Ephesus and delivers to them a solemn charge, moving them so that they "wept sore and fell on PAUL's neck and kissed him.".....	Acts xviii. 18-22.
58	Thence they sail to Cesarea, where AGABUS foretells what awaits PAUL at Jerusalem; nevertheless he goes to Jerusalem.....	Acts xviii. 23.
Troas.	PAUL is seized and cast out of the Temple by a mob, but is rescued by a Roman officer; as he is being dragged to the castle, he is granted permission to speak to the multitude, and, standing on the steps, makes his defence in a speech that for grand eloquence and power has seldom been equaled.....	Acts xix. 1-20.
Miletus.	Being arraigned before the Sanhedrim, PAUL skillfully sets his judges at variance, and is again taken in charge by the Roman authorities; the LORD appears to him and encourages him, telling him that he is to bear witness in Rome.....	Acts xix. 21-xx. 5.
Cesarea.	A conspiracy is entered into by certain Jews to kill PAUL, but is frustrated by his nephew and the Roman officer, LYRUS.....	Acts xx. 6-38.
62	He is arraigned before FELIX; TERTULLUS makes a plausible speech of accusation, which PAUL effectually answers; FELIX defers the case; he keeps PAUL a prisoner for two years, and on vacating his office leaves him bound.....	Acts xxi. 1-26.
62	PAUL is arraigned successively before FESTUS and AGRIPPA; though guilty of no crime, he having appealed unto Cæsar, they cannot release him.....	Acts xxi. 27-xxii. 29.
Malta.	PAUL is sent, a prisoner, on board a ship bound for Rome; predicts the perils of the voyage; they are wrecked on Melita.....	Acts xxii. 30-xxiii. 11.
63	Here PAUL is bitten by a viper without injury; cures the father of PUBLIUS of a fever, and heals others.....	Acts xxiii. 12-35.
Rome.	They sail after three months' delay for Rome, where they arrive without further incident, and PAUL is delivered to the captain of the guard, who suffers him to live by himself with but a single soldier as guard.....	Acts xxiv.
65	PAUL preaches to the chief of the Jews, and subsequently he continues to teach in his lodging; he dwells two years in his own hired house, "preaching the kingdom of GOD and teaching those things which concern the LORD JESUS CHRIST, with all confidence, no man forbidding him.....	Acts xxv., xxvi. Acts xxvii. Acts xxviii. 1-10.
		Acts xxviii. 11-16.
		Acts xxviii. 17-31.

Here ends St. PAUL's history as recorded in the Acts of THE APOSTLES. There are no certain particulars of the remainder of his life. It does not appear that he was tried during this imprisonment. It is probable that, on his release in 65, he made another Missionary Tour through Greece and Asia Minor, and possibly through Spain; some have thought he also visited Britain, but though not impossible, the evidence is very unsatisfactory. Soon after this he was again carried to Rome as a prisoner, and was not treated with kindness and consideration, as during the first imprisonment, but as a felon (2 Tim. ii. 9). He was beheaded A. D. 67 or 68, during the persecutions of NERO, when between sixty-three and sixty-seven years of age. There has been much discussion as to the chronology of St. PAUL's life; without entering into the question, we have taken the dates as they appear in the standard editions of the Bible; it is possible (and we think probable) that two years should be subtracted from each date given.

THE APOSTLES OF OUR LORD.

WHEN our LORD entered upon His ministry He was followed by great multitudes of people from Galilee and from Decapolis, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan. He now proceeded to provide for His Church the teachers who were to edify His people, and He commenced to proclaim His doctrines by the celebrated Sermon on the Mount. The TWELVE APOSTLES whom He selected were needed to bear witness to His own deeds and words (Matt. iv. 17-25; x. 2-4; Mark iii. 1, 13-19; Luke vi. 12-49). He ordained them "that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses and to cast out devils." After His Ascension it became a chief part of their mission to bear witness to the fact of His Resurrection, a fundamental truth in the System of the Gospel. For this duty it was essential that their personal intercourse with Him should be constant; and, hence, St. PETER speaks of them as "witnesses chosen before of GOD . . . who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead" (Acts i. 21, 22; comp. x. 41). The marks of the Apostolic office were these: Personal intercourse with CHRIST; appointment by Himself; the gift of the HOLY SPIRIT breathed on them by CHRIST, and more plentifully bestowed on the day of Pentecost, thus enabling them to work miracles and to speak in foreign tongues; to which was added the power to confer that gift on others. The union of these qualifications rendered it impossible for the Apostles to have successors in office, and thus they were distinguished from every other class of ministers, whether Deacons, Evangelists, Pastors or Bishops.

The time is not certainly determined when our LORD separated the Apostles from His disciples and followers to their distinctive office. They were from the lower ranks of life, and it appears that some of them at least had been with Him before they were called as Apostles, but after their appointment they remained continuously in His service. They were all on an equality, so far as official rank was concerned, during and after the ministry of CHRIST on earth. St. PETER, indeed, from his emotional and energetic character, was usually prominent among them, and enjoyed the distinguished honor of founding the Jewish and Gentile Churches (Acts ii. 14, 42; xi. 11; comp. Rev. xxi. 14; Eph. ii. 20); but we never find in Scripture the slightest trace of primacy or official superiority assigned to him. It is true that he and JAMES and JOHN, the sons of ZEBEDEE, are admitted to the inner privacy of our LORD'S acts and experiences on several occasions (Matt. xvii. 1-9; xxvi. 37; Mark v. 37), but this is no evidence of superiority and distinction in office.

Early in our LORD'S ministry they were sent out, two and two, to preach repentance and perform miracles in His name (Matt. x; Luke ix.). They were warned by their Master of the solemn character of their office. They were with Him in His journeyings, while teaching and attending the Jewish feasts. They saw His wonderful works, heard His discourses and conversations with the people (Matt. x. 13; Luke x. 25). They recognized Him as their Master and the CHRIST of GOD (Matt. xvi. 16; Luke ix. 20), but while they ascribed supernatural power to Him, they made slow progress in comprehending the true import of His spiritual teaching, being blinded by their national prejudices (Matt. x. 16; xvi. 22; xvii. 20, 21; Luke ix. 54; xxiv. 25; John xvi. 12). They were obliged to seek explanations of His simplest parables, and even when our LORD was led to death they had learned but little of the true nature of His kingdom (Luke xxiv. 21; John xvi. 12), although He had been so long instructing them. They forsook Him in alarm, and even left His burial to one who was not of their number.

The fact of His Resurrection seems to have awakened their minds to a clearer conception of His mission, yet even after His exposition and intercourse some of them seem to have returned to their original calling, and it required a new direction from our LORD to recall them to their great work, and reunite them in Jerusalem (Acts i. 4).

On the Feast of Pentecost, ten days after our LORD'S Ascension, the HOLY SPIRIT descended on the infant Church (Acts ii.), and thenceforward the Apostles became different men, and with great power and boldness they gave forth their witness to the Life, Death, Resurrection and Ascension of their GLORIFIED MASTER and LORD, as He had predicted they should do (Luke xxiv. 48; Acts i. 8, 22; ii. 32; iii. 15; v. 32; xiii. 31).

The Mother Church in Jerusalem sprang up under their hands, and their superior dignity and authority were recognized by the rulers and the people (Acts v. 12-16). Even when St. STEPHEN suffered, the trial does not seem to have reached the Apostles, and when they did leave Jerusalem for Samaria they delayed not, but entered on their work in that city, and now the first period of the Apostles' agency ends. The centre of labor was Jerusalem and the central figure St. PETER. Antioch soon became the centre of a second period, and now the central figure is St. PAUL, who was not one of the original Twelve, but was miraculously called and prepared by our LORD, who regularly qualified and commissioned him for the work. Here a Church of Jews and Gentiles was soon gathered (Acts xi. 19-30; xiii. 1-5) by the united labors of St. PAUL and other Apostles. Intimate intercourse existed between the Churches at Antioch and Jerusalem. From this time a third period opens, in which the original Twelve Apostles disappear, and the prominent figure in the subsequent history is St. PAUL, the great Apostle of the Gentiles. When the narrative leaves him at Rome, all the Gentile Churches from Jerusalem round about to Illyricum owe to him their foundation and look to him for spiritual direction and Apostolic care. The others disappear from the page of inspired history, and when they were removed by death, the Apostolic office ceased as a matter of course, for its continuance was from the very conditions of its existence (comp. I Cor. ix. 1) absolutely impossible. The Bishops and Pastors of the ancient Churches co-existed with, and did not in any sense succeed, the Apostles in the things which were peculiar to their office; and thus it is evident that it can only be chronologically, and not officially, that in the Church there can be any persons who are Successors of the Apostles.

PETER.—His original name was SIMON. He was the son of JONAS, and was brought up to his father's occupation as a fisherman on the Sea of Galilee. He and his brother ANDREW were partners of JOHN and JAMES, the sons of ZEBEDEE. Various allusions in the sacred narrative seem to indicate that their social position was easy, and that they had a fair measure of education. PETER lived first at Bethsaida and afterward at Capernaum, in a house which he or his mother-in-law owned; and it must have been a large one, as he received in it not only our LORD, but multitudes who were attracted by the miracles and the preaching of JESUS (Matt. xix. 27, etc.). The passage in Acts iv. 13, where PETER and JOHN are called "unlearned and ignorant men," does not necessarily mean that they were illiterate, but rather that they were "laymen," i.e., men of ordinary education when contrasted with those who were educated in the schools of the Rabbis. That he was an affectionate husband and married in early life are facts inferred from Scripture. CLEMENT of Alexandria, and others, tell us that his wife's name was PERPETUA, that she had children and that she suffered martyrdom. The impression prevailed that PETER was advanced in life at the time of his death, but there is no evidence to prove that he was much older than our LORD. He was probably only between thirty and forty when called, along with ANDREW, at the Lake of Galilee. Thereafter JAMES and JOHN were appointed, and ere long PETER and his eleven fellow-disciples were set apart as our LORD'S immediate attendants (Matt. x. 2, 4; Mark iii. 13-19; Luke vi. 13). From this time forward PETER held a prominent place among the Apostles. His energy and boldness urged him forward, but he held no distinct office above his brethren, and he certainly never claimed any power which did not equally belong to his associates. It would appear that his consciousness of ability and devotion to his Master seemed to develop a tendency to rashness that verged on presumption. He even incurred a severe rebuke from our LORD (Matt. xvi. 23) because of his dictatorial manner, and yet it is obvious that, bold as he no doubt was, he frequently manifested his greatest weakness immediately after some decided display of resolute devotion, as may be seen by his anxiety to find out who among the Apostles would prove a traitor, loudly asserting his own purpose of steadfastness, and then forthwith in a moment of weakness miserably denying his LORD (Matt. xxvi. 33-35; Mark xiv. 29-31; Luke xxii. 33, 34; John xiii. 36, 38).

He was restored again after his fall by our LORD at the Lake of Galilee, and the prediction of his death showed him that he would indeed be permitted to follow his glorified Master. After the Ascension he and his colleagues were to govern and extend the Church that their Master had founded, and the narrative of the Acts of the Apostles presents him as a leader, although neither exercising nor claiming any authority or superiority over his brethren. Before ANANAS and CAIAPHAS the boldness of PETER and JOHN was observable, and they utterly refused to be time-servers. Miracles of healing and of judgment, as in the case of ANANIAS and SAPPHEIRA, were wrought by PETER, and from Jerusalem he and JOHN were sent to Samaria. There he was confronted with SIMON MAGUS, and about three years later he came into contact with PAUL (Acts ix. 26 and Gal. i. 17, 18). The baptism of CORNELIUS was the crown and consummation of the ministry of PETER, as it was the first-fruits and the earnest of the great Gentile harvest. Shortly afterward he was imprisoned by HEROD AGRIPPA (Acts xii.), and his miraculous deliverance closes the second great period of his ministry.

From this time there is no continuous history of him. He left Jerusalem, but the scene of his labors is not recorded. Six years later he returned, when the Apostles and elders assembled to settle the question about circumcision. It was at Antioch where the painful collision between him and PAUL occurred, when an essential point in Christian discipline and living was determined. That PETER preached in the provinces mentioned in his first Epistle is mere conjecture, but there is reason to believe that he did reside for a time at Babylon. If he ever visited Rome, it must have been toward the close of his life. There is no allusion in the Epistle to the Romans to his having been in the Roman capital, and the traditions and evidence bearing on the controversy are confused and contradictory. CLEMENT, IGENATIUS, DIONYSIUS, IRENEUS, CAIUS, ORIGEN, TERTULLIAN and others testify to the fact that he was at Rome, and that he and PAUL suffered martyrdom there about the same time, and yet the evidence on the other side is so exceedingly weighty that it may be considered an unsettled question. He may have been in Rome, and even suffered martyrdom there, but it is morally certain that he was never Bishop of the Church, and that he never claimed a primacy there or elsewhere over his brethren.

ANDREW was one among the first-called of the Apostles. He was brother to PETER, but whether older or younger is uncertain. He was of Bethsaida, and had been a disciple of JOHN THE BAPTIST. With another of JOHN'S disciples he brought his brother PETER, and they attached themselves to JESUS. In the catalogue of the Apostles his name appears second in Matthew and Luke, but in Mark and Acts he is enrolled after PETER, JAMES and JOHN as the fourth, and in company with PHILIP. He appears to have enjoyed great intimacy with our LORD, and to have been assiduous in his duties (John xii. 22; vi. 8). There are few details given of him in Scripture, and many of the traditions are quite uncertain. EUSEBIUS makes him preach in Scythia, JEROME and THEODORET in Achaia (Greece), and NICEPHORUS in Asia Minor and Thrace. He is said to have been crucified at Patrae, in Achaia, on a cross "decussate," hence called after his name.

JAMES and JOHN, the sons of ZEBEDEE.—In the spring or summer of the year 27, ZEBEDEE, a fisherman, was on the Sea of Galilee with his two sons engaged at their occupation. Near them was another boat with SIMON and ANDREW, all of them being partners. Being unsuccessful, they landed and began to wash their nets. The new Teacher (JESUS) appeared on the beach, and at His call they left all and became His disciples. The leading incidents in the career of JAMES may be briefly stated. In the following year he was confirmed as an Apostle, and witnessed the miraculous healing of JAIRUS' daughter. In the spring of 28 he was present at the Transfiguration. Very early in the year 29 he urged our LORD to call fire down from heaven to consume a Samaritan village, and about three months later he and his brother made their ambitious request through their mother SALOME. On the night before the crucifixion he was with our LORD in Gethsemane. He witnessed the Ascension, and shortly before the Passover, in the year 44, he was put to death (Acts xii. 1) by HEROD AGRIPPA.

JOHN is generally believed to have been younger than his brother JAMES. His life may be divided into three periods: 1. Before his call to the discipleship he no doubt lived with his parents in or near Bethsaida, and little is known of him. When the voice of JOHN THE BAPTIST was heard in the wilderness of Judea and multitudes flocked to hear him, the sons of ZEBEDEE were among the number. 2. But a greater than JOHN arose, and these brethren attached themselves to Him. PETER, JAMES and JOHN came within the innermost circle of our LORD'S friends. He enjoyed the memorable distinction of being the disciple whom JESUS loved. He witnessed the Transfiguration, and was with Him during His agony. He was the first of the disciples to recognize our LORD after His Resurrection, and his zeal was unwearied in the company of PETER in the expansion of the Church. Fifteen years after PAUL'S first visit to Jerusalem he was there, at the settlement of the great question which had agitated the Church, and his position and influence were those of one who was known to be a chief "pillar" in the Church (Gal. ii. 9). 3. The traditions of a later age connect him with Ephesus after his departure from Jerusalem. It is held that the seven Asiatic Churches were his special charge, and that he had much to do in saving them from soul-destroying error. Persecution drove him to the island of Patmos, where he labored in the mines, and where he received the Revelations which close the New Testament. POLYCARP, IGNATIUS and PAPAS were his disciples; and at a great age, and after seeing the Church extended from Palestine westward to Italy and Gaul, he died, and so the last of the Apostles of our LORD passed away.

PHILIP was of Bethsaida, the city of ANDREW and PETER (John i. 44), and probably was among the followers of JOHN THE BAPTIST. It is probable that from ANDREW he learned that the CHRIST had appeared. In the Gospels his name usually occurs at the head of the second group of four, as PETER'S name is at that of the first (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 14). The first three Gospels tell us few facts about him, but JOHN records a few important utterances. After the Ascension and the day of Pentecost all is uncertain about his history.

BARTHOLOMEW, one of the twelve, was probably born at Cana of Galilee. He is said to have preached the Gospel in India, but if he went eastward, it is likely that his labors were not extended beyond Arabia-Felix. There is a tradition which connects him with Armenia, and reports him to have been there flayed alive and then crucified with his head downward.

THOMAS.—Nearly all that we know of him is derived from the Gospel of JOHN, where he is represented as a man slow to believe, seeing the dark side of any question, subject to despondency, but filled with attachment to our LORD. The earlier traditions represent him as preaching in Parthia or Persia, and the Church in Malabar in India is reputed to have been founded by him, but this is evidently an error, as a Nestorian THOMAS who labored in India was no doubt the missionary of that province.

MATTHEW, the Publican, was the writer of the Gospel that is called by his name. He had been a farmer of the taxes, or a public officer, engaged, no doubt, by a Roman knight or some man of high standing. EUSEBIUS says that after our LORD'S Ascension MATTHEW preached for fifteen years in Judea, and then went to foreign nations. SOCRATES SCHOLASTICUS says he labored in Ethiopia. AMBROSE sends him to Persia, ISIDORE to the Macedonians, while others hold that he preached among the Medes and Persians, but nothing is really known of his later history.

JAMES, the son of ALPHEUS, and his younger brother JUDE, appear to have been called to the Apostolate in the year 27. It is likely that JAMES had taken part in the effort to restrain the SAVIOUR, as mentioned in Mark iii. 21; John vii. 7. We hear no more of him until after the Crucifixion and the Resurrection, and again he is lost sight of for ten years. When PAUL came to Jerusalem we find JAMES on a level with PETER deciding the course to be adopted toward PAUL. Tradition places him over the Church in Jerusalem, and HÆGESIPPUS says that before Vespasian began the siege of the city he was thrown down from the temple by the Scribes and Pharisees; he was then stoned, and his brains were dashed out by a fuller's club.

LEBBEUS was a name of the Apostle JUDAS or JUDE, the brother of JAMES, of whose later history nothing is known. Tradition connects him with the Church at Edessa.

SIMON, the Canaanite (ZELOTES, Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13), was one of the twelve, but nothing is known of his later life. He is reported to have labored in Egypt, Cyrene and Mauritania, and to have been crucified in Judea in the reign of DOMITIAN.

JUDAS ISCARIOT is called the son of SIMON in John vi. 71 and xiii. 2, 26, but in the other Gospels he receives no other name but ISCARIOT, the meaning of which is conjectural. We can scarcely hope to explain fully the reasons why such a man was called to the Apostolate, but the choice was not made without a foreseeing of the issue (John vi. 64). As soon as the Twelve had to accompany our LORD in a body, it became necessary that provision should be made for their wants; and their form of life (Luke viii. 3) brought the temptation before which he fell. The Galilean or Judean peasant was entrusted with larger sums than he had ever owned, and covetousness, unfaithfulness, the lust of the world, overpowered him. He became infuriated when he perceived that his Master had read his heart, and in the madness of his rage he sold "the innocent ONE for thirty pieces of silver." What he did after the betrayal is not recorded, further than that the sight of his enormity so filled him with remorse that life became intolerable, and he died a hopeless suicide. It would appear that the rope by which he sought to hang himself gave way, and so, falling headlong, his abdomen was lacerated, and thus he died, as it were, a double death, and so went to his own lot.

THE PARABLES OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST

UNFOLDED

“All these Things spake Jesus unto the Multitude in Parables; and without a Parable spake He not unto Them.”—Matthew xiii-34.

INTRODUCTION

THE parables of Jesus are the most attractive parts of the New Testament, to nearly all Bible readers and students, although they are often confusing because they present both a dark and a bright side of humanity.

There is a natural delight in this manner of teaching, because it appeals to the understanding, the feelings, and the imagination, exciting the whole soul, with all its faculties, into pleasurable activity. Things learned with delight are the longest remembered.

The disciples were offended at their frequent use as a means of instruction, and perhaps justly so, for they gave various views of “the kingdom of God” without explanation, which, as even a well-finished picture does, needed full and clear light to bring out the truth that is in the work, or in the lesson. Such clear light we have in the text of the gospels and epistles, but they who heard the parables never profited by those writings.

Some have said that the truth was hidden in parables as a means of puzzling His disciples, and compelling them to search for instruction, and also for concealing the mysteries of the “kingdom” from the multitude. Esdras tells us that he was commanded by God to publish one part of the word revealed to him, and to conceal another part. This was probably so done because there are moral conditions necessary for understanding the truth. Some of his hearers desired spiritual instruction, and looked to him for help; others were indifferent, and many rejected the teachings. To all the warning words, “Take heed how ye hear,” were significant.

The parables were framed to teach spiritual and heavenly truth, which might awaken the soul to a consciousness of its divine origin, improve the intellect, and purify the reason. To this end, therefore, they are never sullied by jesting or railery at the follies or the crimes of mankind.

Fables differ, in using animals and animal instincts, jests, railery, sarcasm, and bitter mockery at the calamities which overtake men on account of their follies and crimes. While the parable never transgresses the laws of nature, the fable always does, in attributing speech and reason to animals, trees, and stones.

The myth differs from both, in presenting itself as the truth, while the parable and fable never pretend to do more than convey the precious essence.

Proverbs are usually obscure or enigmatical, and depend on remote allusions for their meaning and force, but sometimes they are concentrated parables—a whole lesson in a sentence; as in this one, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."

The allegory is another form of fable or parable, or, rather, a different form of teaching, for it contains its explanation in itself, but it transfers the properties, qualities, and relations from the human to the lower order of things, as in the case of this one: "I am the true vine, and ye are the branches."

The faithful in the Church believe that God has established a spiritual "Kingdom of Heaven," through the atoning work of Jesus the Christ, and that the benefits of the kingdom have been freely offered to all. That kingdom is represented in the parables, which present it in different aspects: first, concerning the entrance to the kingdom; second, on the privileges and the duties of the kingdom; third, showing the relation of the kingdom to the world; and fourth, those which refer to the future world of spirits.

No rule can be made for interpreting the parables that does not allow good sense, reason, and spiritual insight to have full play. Too much must not be expected from any one parable. It is more likely that one single truth is the object of the lesson, than that we are to look for meanings in every phrase and every word, as some have supposed. The Gnostics built up a scheme of religious speculation on the supposed meaning of words, and even letters, and so made a cloud-land of their faith, where they could invent, color, and change their teachings as their fancy suggested. The parables to them were mere speculations about the creation, the origin of evil, the fall of angels, and other kindred topics, which they had imagined were more important than spiritual truth.

Other more recent writers endeavor to show that the parables are a part of the history of the Kingdom of God, and its progressive development to the end of time, thus combining spiritual with political and ethical things, unwisely.

The use of parables was common among the Jews before the teaching of Jesus, for He appealed to some as well known. The book called the "Shepherd of Hermas" has several, especially in the third chapter.

There are no parables in the apocryphal gospels, and a few only in other apocryphal writings of the New Testament age.

The parables have been grouped in this collection into four divisions, in which those which are like each other in purpose as lessons are placed together.

The four divisions are: 1. ENTRANCE INTO THE KINGDOM OF GOD—The Prodigal Son, The Lost Sheep, The Lost Piece of Money, and the Pharisee and Publican; 2. DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD—The Royal Marriage Feast, The Great Feast, The Friend at Midnight, The Rich

Fool, The Barren Fig Tree, The Importunate Widow, The Two Sons, and The Good Samaritan; 3. RELATIONS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD TO THE WORLD—The Mustard-Seed, The Sower, The Seed Growing Secretly, The Tares, The Leaven, The Pearl of Great Price, The Hid Treasure, The Merchantman, The Net, The Unmerciful Servant, The Unfaithful Steward, The Laborers in the Vineyard, The Two Debtors, and the Wicked Husbandmen; 4. RELATIONS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD TO THE FUTURE WORLD—The Ten Virgins, The Rich Man and Lazarus, Unprofitable Servants, The Tale of The Unjust Judge, and The Pounds.

In these divisions of these gems of teaching we see how fully the great Teacher dealt with the various problems of life, concerning what he needs to fit him for a life of faith, what society everywhere wants, and what will most contribute to genuine progress toward perfection in humanity. To follow His teaching is to make each succeeding generation better than it would be by merely imitating the faith and practice of former ages.

There seems to be an outline of belief in a future life, and teaching that the test of the personal life of each soul here will be reached when it passes into the future state of existence. How much the parables which are assigned to this subject add to what has been said in other places, in the Bible and elsewhere, must be left for each reader to determine from an acquaintance with the stores of thought and imagination laid up for us in the precious relics of ancient books.

The parables contain the secret mysteries of the heavenly kingdom, which are the guides for planting and increasing faith, and are the most precious of all in the library of choice readings for the Christian in a leisure hour.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

LUKE XV. 11-32.

THIS is the pearl or crown of all parables. Many interpretations of its supposed meaning have been offered. One is that it refers to the Jews as the elder son, and to the Gentiles as the younger son, who wandered away into apostasy, and the return provided in the new dispensation of the Church.

Supposing that the publicans and sinners were Jews who had fallen into evil ways, the argument is framed for receiving again into communion those who had been cut off from the Church.

Others say that the publicans and sinners must have been heathen, in spite of the declaration of Jesus that one of the chief publicans, Zacchæus, was a son of Abraham, and that Matthew, the apostle, had been a publican.

The simple truth in the parable seems to be that Jesus came to call and receive sinners within the covenant, and wherever there are penitent and proud sinners there the parable is finding its fulfilment. In this view the younger son is really the Gentile world, and the self-righteous elder son is the Jewish synagogue.

The sin of pride is the sin of sins—and the name of Satan in Arabic is Eblis, pride. This sin possessed the younger son when he felt that he could become independent and sufficient in himself, and so asked for his share of his father's property. In spiritual language this means man's desire to become independent of God, to become a god to himself (Gen. iii. 5), and to lay out his life at his own will and pleasure. This is in great contrast to the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread," which acknowledges a constant dependence on God.

The father granted his son's request, because he would not keep him at home against his will, whose heart was set on roaming. This is quoted as an argument in favor of the doctrine of free-will. The only true freedom is a freedom in God, all else being bondage to sin. Serving God is serving one master, but to depart from Him is to become subject to the natural passions, which are many masters.

After deciding to go away from home, a little while is spent in reflecting before actually setting out. This is the spiritual history of one who says that there is no God, and that he will set up an opinion for himself. His conduct is compared to that of men who forsake the fountain of living waters for broken cisterns that hold no water (Jer. ii. 13). In the long (six months) dry season of Palestine, a good cistern is very valuable, but a broken one is an infinite contrast to a fountain of sweet waters.

The wanderer feels free at last. Free to think and act, but without sufficient knowledge or wisdom to avoid errors and shun vices, and the inevitable result was disaster. The famine in the land where the young man had wasted his portion found him unprovided for evil days, and therefore increased his misery.

The spiritual famine among those who deny the existence of God means a want of truth, sincerity and love—the true nourishment of the soul. The love and care of parents and relatives, domestic affections, and the friendship of neighbors were absent, leaving the soul hungry—famishing.

One other fact is noticed, and which is as true now as it was then: when the young prodigal had spent his last piece of money, not one of all those who had joined him in wasting his substance would lift a finger to help him in his need. Such boon companions in riotous living are the first to take themselves off when the prodigal's money is spent.

He "joined himself to a citizen of that country" probably means that he tried to frame a new system of faith and belief in his apostate condition. To one who has been brought up "in the fear of the Lord," the change to unbelief after maturity is literally wasting spiritual inheritance and substance, and the attempt to reconcile one's self to the new surroundings is difficult indeed. The temptation to "arise and go to my father" was irresistible, when he remembered how happy and contented he was when under the care of his spiritual father and possessed of the riches of faith and belief.

But the resolution to return was not taken until he had tried to reconcile himself to the ways of the world by entering into its service. This may mean that he entered into business, became familiar with the crafty ways in which worldly men succeed, the subtle snares that they lay for the unwary, the deceptions, frauds, and mean, petty crimes that they practice who are bent on accumulating money, right or wrong, and that these are the husks that swine feed upon. To fill the belly, or the bank, with such husks is not to increase the riches of the soul. The man or the woman who grinds dollars out of poor, hard-worked, starving humanity, does not grow in spiritual riches, of truth, honor, brotherly love, or charity. Bah! they don't pay! Such a person is indeed a citizen of that "far-off land," far away from the heavenly Father's home of love, grace, purity, and joy. A citizen of that country of apostasy is compelled to associate with those who delight—or at least pretend to delight—in speaking disrespectfully of all that once was held precious and lovely in the Church. God and the angels, love and mercy, and all spiritual things are constantly held up to scorn, ridicule, and contempt. Such revilings are the merest husks from which the kernel of life, truth, and love has been stripped; and the more the soul strives to gather of such stuff, the more miserable it is, for the bondage becomes intolerable; it increases every moment, as Habakkuk says (ii. 5), he "enlargeth his desire as hell, and as death, and can not be satisfied."

Such a fall, so low in guilt and misery, is an extreme case, but is possible to any soul after the first downward step.

This parable might very well have a new title, for it is really a SOUL'S TRAGEDY.

In the darkest hour of his troubles "he came to himself." His first thought was of his father, the fountain of spiritual truth and life, and the pleasant home-life, where the atmosphere is faith and love. The return was then easy, when it had been decided upon, and the reception was cordial, hearty, and, except the envy of the brother, in every way satisfactory and consoling.

THE LOST SHEEP.

MATT. xviii, 12-14; LUKE xv, 3-7.

THE popular character of the teachings of Jesus, at the time in which this parable was spoken, drew the outcasts of the people to hear His comforting words. He received them graciously, taught them freely, and lived in familiar social relations with them which offended the Scribes and Pharisees. The Old Testament form of righteousness was an outward separation from sinners, as from the infected with disease, and the Scribes and Pharisees had no remedies for sinners, nor hope nor wish for their redemption, nor had they knowledge of any antidotes against the supposed danger from infection. When asked why He received sinners, He answered that He acted as they would in seeking a lost sheep.

He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance,—to find lost sheep. It was the owner himself who seeks the lost sheep. Only one—one in a hundred—but that one was lost. A lost sheep is the most helpless of animals, and vainly wastes its strength in useless bleating and aimless wandering, until, exhausted, it falls in death.

The shepherd's care is the only hope for the lost sheep. His effort must be made at once, for every moment increases the danger, and he leaves the flock to go after the one lost.

The spiritual rulers of the Jews were called shepherds by the prophets. One of the psalmists calls the Lord his Shepherd, and another says the Lord is the Shepherd of Israel.

It is said by some that the incarnation of the Son of God was a putting on the shepherd's garment of flesh, and His life from the baptism of John was a search for the strayed sheep of Israel. And the text of the gospels sets forth the toilsome way, with its thorns of scorn, hate, and betrayal.

The shepherd is said to search until he found the lost sheep, when he carefully helped it out of difficulty, and, if needed, carried it back to the fold.

The dangers which the shepherds face from wild beasts in the wilderness in our day in Palestine are great. They are seldom armed with more than a stick, and, although lions are rarely met, bears, hyenas, and wolves are common in some parts, and are always hungry and ferocious when they approach the flocks. David told King Saul that he had killed both a lion and a bear in defence of his flock.

When the shepherd returned to his home with the recovered sheep, he called his friends together, and they rejoiced over his success. The lesson is that heaven and earth are one in "the kingdom," and that there will be joy in heaven over one repentant sinner, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance. This repentant sinner then enters into the inner sanctuary of faith, and is the cause of more joy among the redeemed than those who remain at the legal door refusing to go in.

The early Christians portrayed the Lord as the Good Shepherd in paintings, sculptures, mosaics, on gems, glass cups, seals, and many other articles of personal or public use, and great numbers of those relics have been preserved to our day. In some of those ancient pictures Jesus is represented as the Orpheus of the Christians holding a harp and surrounded by animals that are charmed with His music.

THE LOST PIECE OF MONEY.

LUKE XV. 8-10.

THE Church is the organ by which the Holy Spirit does its works of mercy. In this parable the Church is personified as a woman; the piece of money is the soul, stamped with the image of the Great King (Gen. i. 27), as the silver, gold, or copper was with that of the emperor or other ruler. The candle is the word of God, held forth by the Church, and by whose light sinners are found, and each one is precious in the Lord's eyes as the silver money is to the merchant.

The woman sweeps the house when searching for the lost piece, and raises the dust—of selfish ease, and calls out such remarks as those in Acts, where it is said the Apostles were charged with having turned the world upside down, as the Church is always doing, while searching for sinners.

The woman confesses that she lost the piece of silver, as if she had contributed to the loss through negligence, and called her female friends and neighbors together (see Ruth.

iv. 14, 17; Prov. iv. 3); and it is supposed by some commentators that they were the angels.

In the Epistle to the Corinthians the term angels is applied to certain redeemed members of the Church.

In the book of Job it is said that "sons of God" shouted for joy and sang together at the creation, and in the parable of the Lost Sheep that there is joy in heaven over a repentant sinner; so in this parable there is rejoicing, but it is here on the earth. Some suppose that the joy here referred to is in a group of the invisible angels who are sent into the earth to minister to the heirs of salvation, and who belong to a higher race.

There are several thoughts which group around this lesson. The lighted candle is peculiar to this parable, and indicates that the Church needs help—the help of the truth, which the light signifies—for the search. The candle is the word. The image of the golden candlestick and its mystic explanation are familiar with students of the Old Testament, among the furniture of the tabernacle and the temple, and candles and candlesticks are used also in the Revelation of John.

The Spirit is the maker of the word, and its light the truth, and is therefore the true searcher, the Church or the woman being only means to the end. "Christ is the Light of the World," and therefore He it is who searches for and finds the lost pieces from the spiritual treasury.

Sweeping the dust away that may have covered the piece of silver was necessary as a part of the process of finding it. Whether covered with dust or hidden by tarnishing, the searcher must still sweep.

It was silver that was lost, and intrinsically precious; valuable, even when lost, and although more useful when restored, yet no more worth than before.

Those who are inclined to mysticism see in the lighted candle a symbol of the divine incarnation; the glory which the Saviour had within shining through the fleshly covering which only partially concealed it. The light of the candle and the divine glory still illuminate the world.

THE PHARISEE AND PUBLICAN.

LUKE XVIII. 9-14.

PERSONAL responsibility in asking for God's favors is illustrated in the parable of the Prodigal Son. There the son asks forgiveness. In this parable there is an estimate of the different views which men have of prayer to God.

Two men seek to draw nigh to God in prayer, in the temple, where was seen the great altar, with its daily sacrifices of blood, in token of sin; near it the great laver, for cleansing hands, faces, and feet, and supplying water for various purposes; and in the holy place the altar of incense, symbol of prayer, ever rising toward heaven; and the golden candlestick, with its seven typical lamps, emblems of the seven planets, the seven spirits of wisdom, goodness, and piety; and the table of shew-bread, where the tribes of Israel were each represented by a loaf of bread, which was renewed each week; and in the holy of holies, behind the veil, the ark of the covenant, with the two tables of the law; and each and all of these things, with many others in and about the holy house, indicated that Jehovah was believed to be a prayer-hearing God.

The Pharisee may have represented the Jewish people, and the publican the Gentiles. The Jew gloried in his own merits, and extolled himself, but through pride and self-righteousness failed, in not gaining divine favor. The Gentile meekly acknowledged his vileness, repented of his sins, and obtained mercy and grace.

It is supposed that the lesson was intended for certain followers of Jesus who had a latent Pharisee in their hearts, and were content with cleaning the outside of the bowl, being indifferent or ignorant of the uncleanness within, and who would not be likely to say, "Deliver me from mine adversary," because they do not feel conscious that they have an adversary, and it can also be applied to others who have found their sins an intolerable burthen, and look to God for delivery.

The act of the Pharisee, in separating himself from others, because he felt himself to be better, less sinful, a more strict observer of fast-days, and tithe-paying, and other outward religious acts, was an exhibition of an ugly, foul, proud, and scornful soul, which was cold and dead to all the world of humanity beside itself.

The publican, through his humbling himself, was exalted, while the Pharisee, through his self-exaltation, was humbled. Pride is at the root of every sin, and even when doing good, if pride is mingled with the motives, there is a lessening of the good, in proportion to the extent of the pride.

DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

THE WEDDING GARMENT; OR, THE MARRIAGE OF THE KING'S SON.

MATT. xxii. 1-14.

THE King in this parable is Christ himself, and the feast referred to is an allusion to the joys prepared for those who are invited to their reward. The enmity of the Pharisees had reached its highest pitch, and they had resolved to put Jesus out of the way. The guests that are invited refuse absolutely to come, misuse the messengers, their acts amounting to open defiance of the king's authority, which was simply rebellion.

The king punishes them by destroying the murderers and burning their city. Some suppose that the enmity to the king had been growing in secret for a long time, and on this marriage found a pretext or opportunity for breaking out. Sinners of every degree were invited to fellowship in the blessings of the Gospel, and their entrance to the marriage feast was without scrutiny, for by grace alone were they called, both good and bad. But when they are inside the king will make a strict examination, and will not excuse any whose garments are in any sense improper or unfit. That is, members of the Church must live without reproach.

The guest was self-righteous, or a hypocrite, and in need of a garment that should cover, rather than expose, his poverty of spiritual things.

THE TWO SONS.

MATT. xxi. 28-32.

IN this discourse the two sons stand for two classes in the Jewish people. The one who said he would not work, and repented, and did go into the vineyard to work, was the representative of the publicans and harlots; and the other son who promised so readily to work, and did not go, was the representative of the priests, elders, Pharisees, and all the respectable and religious in society. The human nature of our day is precisely like that of the time in which this parable was spoken, and we have only to look around us for its application as they did who heard it at the first. Many are conscious of a willingness to do right, but who also are like the second son in neglect or refusal to act, and feeling satisfied in having a pious feeling, religious sympathy, and in having cherished sentiments of the most kindly import, without one effort at putting them into practice.

Others are unfeeling and wantonly rude as well as disobedient in their repudiation of God's authority, and take pride in affecting a deeper and more resolute ungodliness than they really feel. In our day such persons pretend to be viciously wicked and active in opposition to all that is called Christian, but whose hearts or consciences are still alive, hate hypocrisy, love to do right, and may at any moment resolve to come to the truth, the light, and the way.

THE WICKED HUSBANDMEN.

MATT. xxi. 33-45; MARK xii. 1-12; LUKE xx. 9-19.

THIS parable exhibits a picture of the inexhaustible patience and long-suffering of the Father toward His children the Jews, of the Son toward his Church, and of God toward the sinner.

In Isaiah the vineyard is the symbol of the Jewish Church, and the Lord is said in Exodus to have planted it. The wall around the vineyard, of stone or of thorns, is the separation by birth, race, or religion of the Jew from the Gentile—of the worshipers of God from those who fall down before idols.

This garden of the Lord was cultivated by the deliverance from Egypt, the law from Sinai, the wandering in the wilderness, the passage over Jordan, the settlement in Canaan, the teaching of the prophets, the captivity in Babylon, the restoration under Ezra, the long rest under the Greeks, and the final harrowing by the Romans. The annalists say that Jehovah refused at one time to speak any more face to face with the Jews, and after that declined to give responses when consulted by Urim and Thummim, leaving them under the guidance of the law alone.

When it was the fruit season, servants were sent to learn the results of the harvest. In spiritual language this is said to mean those occasions in which souls are tried and required to show good fruits of virtue and righteousness.

The servants sent were the prophets, and they were killed. Luke says that when the son of the owner of the vineyard was sent, the wicked keepers of the vineyard killed him, knowing him to be the heir of his father, their employer.

Jewish tradition is filled with instances of ill-usage of spiritual teachers—servants of the Lord of the Vineyard—and many of them are alluded to in the Epistle to the Hebrews: "And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment; they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain by the sword; . . . of whom the world was not worthy."

Sending the Son is the last and crowning act of divine mercy, and if it fail, the last resource of heavenly love will have been exhausted, and the transgressors will have filled up the measure of their guilt.

In this view the entire succession of generations of Israelites, from the first to the last, are considered as one body, one vineyard, and in that sense only could those then living be called to account for what had been done ages before to the prophets.

The punishment consisted in losing the favor of the Lord, and seeing their birthright transferred to the Gentiles.

The priests and Pharisees are said to have been angry when they saw that the parable was intended for them. But the Great Teacher, having shown that the charge laid on them was a duty, proceeded in another to set forth the same obligation as a privilege.

THE FRIEND AT MIDNIGHT.

LUKE xi. 5-8.

THE lesson herein is addressed to every one who may be called to serve and assist or relieve a wanderer from the way of life when he wishes to return to the true path, for it teaches the method of gaining a supply of spiritual food needed in such cases. The application is made to the Divine Friend in behalf of the penitent who has returned, and who also engages in secret prayer. The gift is obtained by persistence, for "the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent taketh it by force," and things long desired are more sweet when obtained. Faith, patience, and humility are called into exercise by these denials, for it is shown by them who will pray always and not faint, who will not be discouraged by the first lack of success.

THE UNJUST JUDGE; OR, THE IMPORTUNATE WIDOW.

LUKE xviii. 1-8.

THE lesson enforced in this parable is the duty of continued prayer, in which God likens Himself to an unjust judge, and brings forward an instance of a wronged woman, a widow, pleading in vain for redress. She suffers injustice and appeals in vain to the dispenser of justice for a while, but succeeds through importunity. An unrighteous petition gains no hearing in any case.

Although long delayed the day of deliverance will surely come to all who are unjustly oppressed.

Those who look for the second coming of the Son of God find in this lesson much consolation, whether that event is expected at the end of each soul's earthly life, or at the end of the world's period. Delays are trials, wearisome, and seem like denials, but the Divine Father, who appears as the unjust judge, knows when and how to avenge his children's wrongs.

The judge is described in strong terms as a bold, bad man, who is boastful of his impiety, but who has more regard for his own ease than for either God or man. The prophet Isaiah said that God creates evil, and in the book of Job we learn that evil is used by Jehovah as a means of discipline. The appearance of the Father in this parable in such a character as the unjust judge is therefore no surprise.

The closing sentence is rich in suggestions for thought. At His coming shall He find such faith in the world as the widow had? His work then will be of heart-searching and of judgment. His search will discover the faithful to themselves and to each other, for they are known to Him now, and then will it be shown that prayer is the test of faith. Prayer is the medicine that expels spiritual sickness, says Chrysostom the Golden.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

LUKE x. 30-37.

THE lawyer who questioned Jesus understood the letter of the law, but not its spirit—its spiritual application was to him unknown. He had no true conception of the meaning of the word neighbor. He probably felt obligation toward those who were designated as having claims on him—or, in other words, his poor, his relatives, his friends, his associates, and rejected every prompting to assist the miscellaneous herd of poor, the unknown crowd of beggars, the rags and tatters of humanity who were strangers and had no one to vouch for them as worthy and needy of bounty. This lawyer has representatives among us now. It is very difficult for a really deserving poor man or woman to find help, while a hypocrite who will fawn upon the dispensers of "charity" will be bountifully supplied.

The traveler—a Samaritan and not a Jew—found a Jew, whom he had been taught from infancy to despise and avoid, wounded and helpless in the highway, and without question as to whether he belonged to his church, or to any congregation, or had any society claims, he did all that was required, and more beside. This was to an entire stranger, stripped of every valuable thing which might have given a clue to his former rank or condition, and whose only appeal was present need.

In this case the priest did not recognize him as a member of his flock; the Levite failed to see a familiar face, having never met him among the frequenters at his shrine, because both flock and shrine had too narrow quarters. The Samaritan worshiped in a broader temple, as wide as the earth itself—all men were his brothers and entitled to his assistance when in need.

Some have recognized in the traveler personified human nature, or Adam, the head of the race, who has forsaken Jerusalem, the heavenly city, the city of the vision of peace, and is going down to Jericho, the profane city, the city under a curse. Once in the way, out of the presence of his God, he falls a prey to a robber, who strips him of his original righteousness and leaves him wounded, slandered, reviled, and supposed to be dead because crushed under the false and deceptive cruelties of defamation.

The special lesson is to exhibit the great gulf that exists between knowing and doing. Knowing and keeping the law is not enough, but having faith and doing what that requires is the true way of spiritual life.

THE BARREN FIG-TREE.

MATT. xxi. 18; MARK xi. 12; LUKE xiii. 6-9.

ALL of the parables, excepting this one, are founded on acts, or supposed acts, or relations between men, which are in themselves rational, or the product of sensible persons. In this case the surprise consists in the act of Jesus in punishing a natural object which could not possibly bear the stain of guilt. If the entire parable is symbolical it is certainly rational.

The fig-tree was said to have been rich in foliage, but destitute of fruit, and so a symbol of the Jewish people, so profuse in outward shows of piety, but destitute of its reality. The fruitless tree which failed for three seasons, under the patriarchs, the prophets, and the priests, or of the natural law, the written law, and of grace, to realize the aim of its being, was destroyed, and by this we understand that the Theocratic people, for the same reason, was worthy of destruction.

THE SEED GROWING SECRETLY.

MARK iv. 26-29.

MARK alone records this parable, the lesson in which is the secret, invisible energy of the divine word, having a life of its own, with the power of unfolding itself according to the laws of its being, and it may be left, when once planted, to flourish by its inherent energy.

There is some difficulty in determining who was meant by the man casting the seed into the ground, whether Jesus or His disciples. It is clear that Christ was intended as the one who put in the sickle and gathered the saints at the harvest, which was when faith had done its proper work.

The parable is supposed to apply to the origin and progress of the Church, rather than of any one person. The Lord at His first coming in the flesh by sowing the word of the kingdom planted the Church and withdrew. It has been without His visible assistance ever since, and is expected to be so until it has borne and brought to maturity all its appointed fruit. When the harvest of the world is ripe, when all have had the opportunity of faith, He will appear the second time.

THE LABORERS IN THE VINEYARD.

MATTHEW xx. 1-16.

SECOND to that of the Unfaithful Steward, this parable is full of difficulties in the way of clear interpretation. Chrysostom queried fifteen centuries ago over the various problems in this parable, as many have since and are doing now. He asked, "How can one who is himself a member of the kingdom of God be held by that lowest of all passions, envy, and an evil eye, grudging in his heart the favors shown to other members of that kingdom?" If it be denied that the grumblers are truly members of the kingdom, how is it that they are paid the wages?

Neander says the idea is, that all who faithfully obey their call, who are truly converted, and labor diligently after their conversion, whether it occur at an earlier or a later period, and their new life is long or short, are made partakers of the same blessedness in the kingdom of God. The question is not what they were before their conversion, but what they become after it. No one is entitled to receive more than his fellow receives; there being no human merit in the case, all that is given is of God's free grace and mercy in redemption. And it applies also to the relations of nations, including the Jews and Gentiles.

Many fanciful interpretations have been proposed, of which this is a specimen: If it is supposed that the hours of the day in which the laborers were hired are the successive ages in the world's history, then it is said that the different laborers hired were Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses and the Apostles; Jesus standing for the Lord of the Vineyard. In each case they were bidden to labor in the vineyard—to teach righteousness. Those called in the earlier ages had the harder task; the later were Christian teachers. Others say the summonses were given to Moses and Aaron, David and the kings, Maccabean princes and priests, and to Christ and the apostles.

Another idea is that the different hours are the different periods in men's lives at which they enter on the Lord's work.

The true spiritual meaning probably is that the reward is whatever each soul makes of it, as Thomas Aquinas says. There is one vision of God, but many degrees in the capacities of souls for enjoying it; one divine ray of light, which gladdens the healthy eye, but inflames and torments the diseased.

The Mystics taught that God exerted only one power, which operated for reward in good souls, and for punishment in evil.

The sentence, "Many are called, but few chosen," refers to the special qualities that some souls have for spiritual joy.

THE WISE AND THE FOOLISH BUILDERS.

MATT. vii. 24-27.

HEARING and doing, or practical efforts in support of the faith, is the lesson of this parable, which was spoken to instruct and encourage hearers to become doers of the word.

The wise man, who built his house on a rock, was one who took the faith into his heart, and built his spiritual edifice there, where it was secure against all attacks of doubts and criticisms, and resisted the storms of calumny and defamation.

The foolish builder is one who built on sand, and, spiritually, was the insincere man, whose self-righteousness was in opposition to the righteousness of the Lord; whose good works satisfied him that he had a claim on the Redeemer; whose profession of religion with its outward forms stands with him instead of the spirit and power of the faith.

Christ is the rock, the precious, immutable, sure foundation of all hopes of the kingdom of God. Those who build on that rock have some knowledge of the character, person, offices, and work of Christ, as set forth by the Church, and reject all things that are inconsistent with such a faith and belief.

THE TWO DEBTORS.

LUKE vii. 41-43.

DIVINE faculties were believed to slumber undeveloped in the soul until roused to action by teaching, example, or visions. It was further supposed that when that faculty was developed its possessor was able to see not only invisible things, but the character of any whom they met.

When the Pharisee noticed that Jesus permitted a lewd woman to perfume His head and feet with spiced oil, although the act itself was common, yet, because he believed her touch was contagious, he felt that Jesus was polluted by it; and probably thought that if Jesus could permit such defilement, or if He was ignorant of the character of the woman, He was doubly unfit to be called a prophet of God, because He could not see evil, or if He did, He did not rebuke it in this case. This argued in his mind a ceremonial lack of holiness.

The Persian poet Saadi wrote a beautiful legend which is well worth reading in connection with this parable:

"Jesus, it is said, while on earth, was entertained one day in the cell of a dervish of great reputation for sanctity. In the same city lived a youth sunk in vice and sin, whose heart was so black as to horrify Satan himself. Hearing of the presence of the great prophet, the young man appeared at the door of the cell, and lamented deeply the wickedness and folly of his past life, and shed many tears, imploring pardon and grace. The dervish was very indignant at his approach so near God's holy prophet, and bid him depart, for there was no forgiveness for such a wretch as he. He also apologized to Jesus for his intrusion, and offered a prayer in these words: 'O God, grant me that I may stand far from this sinful man in the judgment day.' Then said Jesus, 'Your prayers are granted. The young man sought mercy and grace, and has found them; for his sins are forgiven; his place shall be in Paradise on the great day. And for you, unforgiving and unmerciful dervish as you are, your place shall be in hades, far from him, as you wished it.'"

THE WISE AND FOOLISH VIRGINS.

MATTHEW xxv. 1-13.

CONSTANT preparation for the uncertain time of the second advent of Christ was the subject of this parable. The ever pressing necessity of being ready was clearly urged, but the time of that coming was purposely left undetermined in this, as it is in all other references to that question.

Virtue, under the form of prudence, is also a part of the lesson. Christian prudence differs from that ever-vigilant presence of mind which springs from one constant and predominant aim in life.

It is possible that the Great Teacher intended to warn His disciples against trusting in the vicarious services and merits of others.

The spiritual lesson is plain. The Bridegroom is Christ, the bride is the Church, the house is the earth. The wise young women have prepared for the expected visitation, but the foolish have neglected their duty. That is, some who are converted and join the Church never do anything more to advance in spiritual growth.

RELATIONS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD TO THE WORLD.

The Kingdom of Heaven is likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents. But forasmuch as he had not wherewith to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

THE parables in the thirteenth chapter of Matthew have been considered as a connected series, indicating, progressively, the several stages of advancement through which the mystical Kingdom of God on earth was to proceed, from its beginning to its end, or consummation, for it can never end. Each parable belongs or relates to a certain period in that growth, during which a certain state of things exists, and each succeeding stage includes all that have gone before, the grand concluding scene re-enacting the entire series. In this view the Sower belongs to the time of calling the apostles, when the seed of the word of eternal life was first sown; the Tares to the next season, when dissensions, heresies, and false doctrine began to creep in; the Mustard-Seed to the time of Constantine, when the church had grown strong and extensive, and could afford shelter and aid to others; the Leaven to the time of its diffusion throughout the world; the Hid Treasure to the age when the church was still persecuted; the Pearl to the time in the future when Satan will be bound and the Kingdom of God be esteemed above all other things; and the Draw-net to the judgment, when the separation of contending elements will take place.

THE SOWER.

MATT. xiii. 3-8, 18-23; MARK iv. 4-8, 14-21; LUKE viii. 5-8, 11-15.

THIS is the first of the many parables of the Great Teacher, and it introduced a new manner of teaching to His hearers.

This and the one of the Wicked Husbandmen are the only ones common to the synoptic gospels, Matthew, Mark, and Luke.

The seed, being the truth conveyed in spoken words, fell on ears that were more or less educated, trained, and fitted for understanding what was said. The different degrees of ignorance, indifference, scorn, jealousy, hatred, and active opposition were likened to the various accidents incident to the business of sowing grain in a field.

The explanation which the Lord gave is clear. A hearer can only profit by what is heard in proportion to former education and training, and in the degree of willingness to receive instruction. How much such a preparation may depend on heredity, how much we may be indebted to our parents or other ancestors and teachers, is well worth considering.

The Scripture teaching seems to be that no soul can be good until the word has been received, and that there are many degrees of difference between good and bad souls both before and after they have received the truth.

Vast tracts of the earth's surface are useless for sowing anything, much less for growing food, and many small gardens are so precious for use in raising choice flowers, etc., beside the many places occupied by dwellings and other things required in our busy world, that grain-producing is impossible in such soil. Many men are mental deserts, icy-cold regions, while others are so occupied as to make it nearly impossible to get their attention to divine things.

The typical hearer would be one who was mature, educated, trained to think, anxious to know the truth, received it from an intelligent source, gladly meditated over it, patiently proved its fitness for this world, and then imparted the glad tidings to others.

THE TARES.

MATT. xiii. 24-30.

THE tares are the children of the wicked one, that is, doubts, errors, and heresies; and their fruit is centuries of violence and crime, intensified by having been done under a pretense of serving God; countries desolated by the follies, vices, and passions of their people; diseases that can not be eradicated, and that make us tremble for the future of mankind; sin and sorrow more bitter, more cruel, more appalling than any physical disease, because they are the products of spiritual disease.

The church teaches that Christ came to inaugurate a new order of things, which must prevail until all evil disappears from the world. Progress is difficult in the church where there are so many adverse elements, and is often apparently much farther advanced in the world outside of the church, in all the material requisites of civilization, and so far as a scientific basis for morals prepares the way, in spiritual matters also occupying a position higher and purer than the corrupt church.

The Master proposes to delay until the harvest, when He will separate the wheat from the tares, for He does not counsel hasty action in the church.

The true believer is satisfied with the reflection that although "The mills of God grind slowly, But they grind exceeding fine," and simply looks forward to the second coming of Christ, and His purifying work in the final consummation, when evil will no longer be permitted to mar the lives of the good—the justified.

The tares may look as well as the wheat. The most dangerous enemies of good order and of virtue are often the most smooth-tongued and comely, finely-formed, plausible hypocrites and frauds in society.

The fruit of a person's life is according to the seed sown. No one in whose early years the seeds of tares were sown in greater proportion than of wheat, can expect a harvest purely of grain. The tares, fables, fancies, false doctrines, and all other forms of un wisdom, produce fruit as well as the truth. innocence, devotion to duty, and right.

THE MUSTARD-SEED.

MATT. xiii. 31, 32; MARK iv. 30-32; LUKE xiii. 18, 19.

In this parable we are reminded how small and slight may be the beginnings, the gradual progress toward the marvelous increase of the church, and the final spiritual dominion throughout the earth.

Jesus is Himself the mustard-seed and the man that sowed it, for the germ of the church was in Him, and unfolded itself from Him; and its pure principles are one with Him, as the tree is with the seed from which it grew.

Jesus as the Sower of the seed is the Great Teacher and example and the field, or as Luke says, His garden was the world.

The smallness of the seed is shown in the spoken word, which may fall on indifferent ears and be remembered only in part; and even when an impression had been made on some one, a fisherman, for instance, the beginning was still small.

The image of the mustard "tree," with birds resting on its branches, suggests the many drones and hangers-on in the church, and hypocrites with all sorts of vicious and wicked frauds, who seek the cloak of religion as a cover for their evil intentions. The growth of the tree exhibits the increase of truth among the students of God's word. That truth is the wealth of the kingdom of God, and they are blessed who are so fortunate as to become heirs of its precious treasures, and in any way be able to contribute to the increase or growth of truth in humanity.

THE LEAVEN.

MATT. xiii. 33; LUKE xiii. 20, 21.

As the parable of the Mustard-Seed signified the wonderful spread of the kingdom of God, openly, so this exhibits the hidden influences with which the church works its way in society and into the hearts of men. That is to say, Gospel truth in its influence on the hearts of men is like the working of leaven which in a little time affects the whole measure of meal.

Leaven is a fit emblem of the spread of gospel truth because it so aptly represents the good and evil which are ever blending in human life. The natural action of leaven is toward corruption, but the secondary action is for good, producing the best bread.

It was symbolic of moral corruption and therefore held to be offensive to God, and therefore it was condemned in the exodus (Ex. xii. 19), and was not permitted in the bread of the wanderers. But as the Passover represented deliverance from Egypt, the Feast of First Fruits was a memorial of the entrance into Canaan. After passing over Jordan the symbol of evil in leaven became the symbol of good.

In the most common use made of leaven we find it means falsehood, cunning, fraud, corruption, naughtiness, and sin, and yet Gregory Nazianzen says: "Lay aside the evil leaven which has grown old and maketh sour, and be transmuted into the new leaven, which is Christ Jesus." This good view of leaven indicates or prophesies the diffusion of the Gospel throughout the world—the three measures of meal perhaps meaning the Pharisees, Sadducees, Scribes, and the publicans and sinners and the Gentiles.

The working of leaven is like spiritual truth, from inside outwards. The world is not yet entirely leavened, and there is much work still for believers to do.

THE HID TREASURE.

MATTHEW xiii. 44.

THIS parable refers to the personal appropriation of the benefits of the kingdom of God, which every soul needs, and when possessed becomes a hidden treasure. The Gospel not being looked for by some, is yet sometimes met with by them, and becomes a matter of great joy, fitly termed a treasure, which is very naturally hidden in a country where there are no banks of deposits, and society is in an insecure condition.

It is the custom among rich men in the East to bury a part of their treasures while using another in business, as security against the rapacity of the government, thieves, and invading armies. Such deposits in the earth are frequently found by workmen. In one case at Sidon, in a garden, three stone jars were found filled with gold coins of Alexander the Great and of Philip, his father. Finding such a hid treasure one becomes suddenly rich. The inquiring sinner who finds the truth that is in the Gospel becomes suddenly spiritually rich, heir to and partaker of the wealth of the kingdom of God.

The value of this spiritual treasure becomes apparent only to those who make the discovery for themselves of the real nature of divine grace. Discoveries of treasure are made by those who search, and very seldom by accident.

Some say the field in which the treasure is hid is the Scriptures.

Selling all to buy the field containing hid treasure may mean that a soul must part with everything that has obscured

God's claim to the homage of his heart, for the field is to be obtained "without money and without price."

THE PEARL OF GREAT PRICE.

MATTHEW xiii. 45, 46.

THE kingdom of God is likened to a pearl of great price, which is eagerly sought by a wealthy man who is willing to pay any sum for it. The pearl is the truth, and when once the search for truth has been begun the effort gains in force, absorbs the thoughts and time of the soul, and permits no rest so long as there is a higher truth in prospect that may be attained. This is said in the parable to be selling all and buying the pearl of great price. This is a world in which exchange is absolutely necessary. No good thing can be had for nothing. Equal and exact exchange of value is nature's law, which law is as unerring as the law of gravity in the scales where a pound of gold only balances a pound of feathers. The soul is ready and really does exchange all that it has for the hope of future joy, believing that the hope is well founded and complete as a perfect pearl.

The merchant who seeks the pearl is Christ, and the pearl is the Church. In this view Christ gave Himself—all that He had to give—that the church might be established. Another says that the pearl is the kingdom of God, which was secured to us by one who was richer than all others, yet became poor for the sake of enriching humanity. Having gathered the riches of human life into a well-rounded and complete form, which is beautifully emblemized in the pearl of great value, he provided the machinery of the church as the most efficient means of imparting spiritual riches to poor souls.

THE DRAW-NET.

MATTHEW xiii. 47-50.

THE parable of the Tares recognizes the present mingling of good and bad souls in the church, good and bad plants in the garden, good and bad seed in the field, and this takes up the legend and refers to a future separation of good and bad elements in the spiritual world.

We are witnesses of such discrimination in the economy of nature constantly going on, in which fit material is chosen and unfit is rejected, and may easily be persuaded by analogy that a similar process purifies the spiritual world. This lesson, therefore, looks forward to the final consummation of the church, when it shall be coextensive with the world—that is, include every soul that has ever lived.

The problem of the presence of good and evil in the world, and also in the church of redeemed souls, has puzzled and grieved many of the best people in all ages. Many have asked, Why should the infinitely Just and Good apparently make laws and break them, in His dealings with men? Why should the infinitely Good and Wise seem to cast contempt on virtue and piety, and reward vice and rebellion? The only rational answer is that the Infinite has power to restrain or chastise wrong and avenge innocence, and this power is always used at the proper time.

That this is and has been the idea in the minds of all writers in the church, we learn from accounts of Satan in Eden, Ham in the ark, Golden Calf at Sinai, Judas among the Twelve, and now a spiritual Babylon within Israel's camp. When these opposing elements are to be harmonized has not been determined, for a large part of the church has maintained the belief that rewards and punishments are to be expected in the future life.

Chrysostom said this is a terrible parable, and Gregory the Great said that it is one to tremble at, but can not be expounded.

THE UNPROFITABLE SERVANTS.

LUKE xvii. 7-10.

THIS parable presents the Jew in his servile condition under the Law—the old or Mosaic dispensation. The disciples asked for increase of faith. The Lord will grant the request, but at the same time will magnify the value of the gift they ask. He shows them that all works done without the living principle of obedience which they enjoy under the new dispensation are merely servile, and merit only a servile reward, for God can take no pleasure in them, since He owes no thanks to them, because such are unprofitable servants after all they may do. The lesson teaches humility. Truly, there is no royal road to earthly ease and worldly distinction as followers of the Lord, for they must contend with their own corrupt hearts, trusting in Him for help and victory, for by a living faith in the Master they will be enabled to do all things.

Spiritually this lesson means that we must renounce our own righteousness and trust in that of the Great Example. All that we have or hope to become depends on grace—the grace of the Lord.

THE UNJUST STEWARD.

LUKE xvi. 1-9.

CHRISTIAN prudence is the lesson taught in this parable, that is to say, the faithful will always use the world and the world's goods against the world and for God, as exemplified in the conduct of the unjust steward, which was commendable.

Not to be honored for robbing his master, but commended for cleverness and shrewdness in providing for himself in the future, by making friends among his master's debtors. The sharp practice of business men is admired by men who are willing to profit by the wits of such as use craft and are unscrupulous.

The relation of the steward to his master shows the relation of man to God. The faithful are expected and required to be conspicuous among their fellow-men for intelligent and reverential acknowledgment of this lesson. Unfaithfulness in any form stands as its own witness against us, for all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do. He needs no witness, but unfaithfulness ever makes many witnesses who delight in exposing it.

All stewardship looks forward to the day of settlement. It is the right of the master to require a report, and with God the reckoning is sure. We respect the laws of the material world, so far as they are known, and we are becoming more and more acquainted with them from year to year, and laws of the moral or spiritual world are probably founded on the same immovable principles, and will be obeyed as surely and as soon as we are made to know them as well as we know the laws of the material world.

The use of the conduct of bad men in the parables is somewhat perplexing, but even the upright may learn some lessons from selfish and dishonest men, without compromising themselves.

By showing their faithfulness in the things of this world, men prove their fitness to be intrusted with a higher stewardship, over heavenly riches, the true riches of faith.

Fidelity in the stewardship of the Lord is in choosing to serve God instead of mammon. In truly serving God mammon is made our servant.

THE UNMERCIFUL SERVANT.

MATT. xviii. 21-35.

PETER inquired, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of God? and this lesson was the answer, teaching the law of forgiveness as a means of gaining souls. The Jewish law required forgiveness three times over for the same offence, but commanded punishment for a fourth, and Peter felt that he was proposing a very generous rule in more than doubling the number of times that one should forgive an erring one. The Master taught that forgiveness should be unlimited—seventy times seven meaning to an oriental an endless succession.

Some Christian writers maintain that certain offenses ought not to be forgiven, for in most good men's estimation there is a limit beyond which it is contrary to good morals to go. But even in most aggravated cases, when it is known that forgiveness can be ascribed only to a merciful spirit, men do applaud the man who dares to forgive even the greatest of injuries. In contrast to this the unforgiving spirit is quite sure to exhibit unreasonableness and meanness, as this unforgiving debtor did, and within a few moments after he had received the highest tokens of favor for himself. He betrayed no sense of shame, no feeling for his master's losses, but only a dread of personal slavery and suffering. He seemed incapable of serious humility, honest thoughtfulness in facing the facts, or of a love of truth. He is very ready to promise if he can by it escape present disagreeable consequences.

But the King (who is God in fact), who had before dealt with the unmerciful servant as a creditor with a debtor, after hearing of his conduct with his fellow-servants, then dealt with him as a judge with a criminal, and delivered him to the tormentors.

This raises a question. Do sins that have been forgiven return on the sinner by reason of after offences? The forgiven soul, living near Christ, is free; "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." The soul that sins knowingly, and not one that does a wrong ignorantly, is guilty. A soul may sin "ignorantly" against some priestly law and still remain innocent before Jehovah.

The unmerciful servant was delivered to the tormentors until he should pay his entire debt. This is said to mean that judgment in the spiritual world which is looked for at the end of the world. In the meantime those who are faithful in the kingdom of God forgive others their trespasses as they hope to be forgiven.

THE GREAT FEAST.

LUKE xiv. 15-24.

God's provision for man's spiritual nourishment and gratification is called a great feast. The abundance and variety of supplies for the feast are calculated to satisfy the spiritually quickened who hunger and thirst after righteousness, and who long for peace and joy after trial and suffering.

The natural man is so indifferent to heavenly or spiritual things, his desire is so wanting or so very faint, that the feast must be prepared in an attractive manner. Even then, those who were invited, who knew what good things might be expected, and who are supposed to have been the Scribes and Pharisees, did not come, and publicans and sinners were compelled to attend instead.

The servants who were sent out to invite the guests were the apostles and evangelists, or, if we accept another interpretation, He was the Lord himself, who is the only true apostle and evangelist, whose mission was to do the Father's will on earth.

Those who were invited and excused themselves represent such as believe themselves in no need of divine things, rich enough in all that the priest is supposed to deal, occupied so much with their own affairs that there is no time for attending to anything more, and so well supplied with good things of their own that the feast has no attractions. Such souls may be spiritually poor without knowing their condition. The poorest, in fact, were those who felt it beneath their dignity to spend their time over such useless matters as the priests have to offer. The gospels do not record a single instance of one of the so-called spiritual leaders of the Jews who had attached himself in any way to Jesus. They all repudiated the Christ and His spiritual kingdom.

The anger of the master at those who despised his feast is the anger of God whose love is despised. They were all in the city—that is, in the Jewish people. The second class of invited guests were also among the Jews—the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind—or, in other words, the spiritually sick and needy.

The phrase, "compel them to come in," has been quoted as an excuse for calling in the civil power in aid of the church against such as opposed certain doctrines in all ages since the early church gained any power or influence in public affairs. Many wars have been waged over a trifling difference of opinion on one point or another, and probably will be in the future; for so long as the church can control in civil affairs, it will make a servant of the civil power. The only safety is in keeping religious and secular matters entirely distinct.

The spiritually poor, who are conscious of their poverty and unworthiness, must be forcibly reminded that the invitation is intended for them. The pious monk Anselm says that God compels poor souls to come in through calamities, and Luther said they were driven in by their awakened conscience.

Those who have no desire for or knowledge of spiritual things readily find excuses for absenting themselves from the "table of the Lord." The food is not attractive to them, and so the parable is true to human nature, which loves the world and its pleasant things, but has to acquire a liking for divine things.

Some are kept away by pride, or business, or pleasure, and are courteous enough to offer an excuse, but others refuse in plain terms—will not come to the supper because they have as good or a better at home.

Then the master in anger invited the poor, the maimed, the lame, and the blind to be guests at the supper. That is those who are spiritually ailing, while those who think they are spiritually rich, virtuous, meritorious, exclude themselves.

If the city in the parable represented the theocracy, or the Jewish people, then the highways and hedges stand for the Gentiles, or Pagans. In this sense the parable is prophetic, for it showed how God had prepared a supper for a larger number of guests than could be found among the Jews, and sufficient for the world—for both Jew and Gentile.

The command to gather from the highways and hedges other guests for the feast is supposed to refer to the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles, more distinctly announced in the command to preach the gospel to every creature.

The revelation of the Father's will in the solemn annunciation, "that none of these men which were bidden shall taste of My supper," seems to have been applied thoroughly to the Jews, for exceeding few have ever accepted the Gospel from that day to this. Jesus has never been welcome in the synagogue.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

LUKE xvi. 19-31.

In the writings of Justin Martyr, of Ambrosius, of Irenæus, and Tertullian, among the ancients, as well as in those of many moderns, this is not accepted as a parable, but such is its popular title still.

The lesson enforced is the fearful consequences of unbelief, of a heart set on this world, and refusing to accept the invisible or spiritual world on faith, and the consequences, discovered when too late to avoid them.

The sin of the rich man is unbelief; hard-hearted contempt and neglect of the poor, and luxurious squandering on self are the forms of his transgressions noticed. Those who reject the idea of an invisible spiritual world of righteousness, truth, and joy, must of necessity delight in things which can be seen, handled and possessed. This was also the offence of the Pharisee, love of the world, hard-heartedness toward others, and prodigality toward himself. The possession of riches was not included as a part of the offence. The rich man was not punished for being rich, nor Lazarus rewarded for being poor. When the rich forget that they are God's almoners, stewards for the poor, and indulge in pride and idleness, they are in danger of future misery.

If this parable refers to the spiritual riches which the Pharisees, or Jews, were supposed to appropriate to themselves, and the poverty which Lazarus, as the type of the Gentile nations, endured, we may find it exemplified and illustrated by the world as it now is. The rich man as the church claims to have the choicest spiritual riches, and assumes that non-believers are outcast and poor as Lazarus was, but assuming that time has brought its proper retribution, we find on looking about us that the great work of civilization has been done outside of and in spite of the church, and they possess the true riches of the world which in any way benefit mankind, while the church is literally "in hell," or hades, as it is in the new version, under the criticism of the scholars and thinkers of the age. The parallel could be carried further, but, of course, what the actual experience is in the unknown world of spirits can not be conjectured by us with any certainty. If we accept the statements of this parable as direct teaching from the Great Teacher, who must have known all about the subject, then this is the most awful of all the passages in the Bible.

The church itself recognizes that the feeling of the masses is that of simple indifference, and that unlimited skepticism, the positive license of a conscious godlessness, and a resolute self-trust and self-will are their only rule of life, as we learn from the writings of the Bishop of Bedford and Canon Barry, both of England. And John Bright says that the working classes care as little for the dogmas as the upper classes do for the practice of Christianity.

The leading thought of the parable is this: He that could not be awakened to repentance by Moses and the prophets could not be by the reappearance of the dead. The subordinate idea is the contrast between the rich man and Lazarus; those who seek their highest good in the pleasures of the world, and are thereby excluded from the kingdom of God, forming the principal figure. The kingdom found the hearts of rich men far less accessible than those of the poor like Lazarus; for the very reason that their feelings and dispositions were precisely those of the rich man of the parable.

THE STRAIT GATE.

LUKE xiii. 24-30.

Who would not now gladly ask for instruction from the Great Teacher if it were possible? This parable is an answer to one who inquired as if in doubt about the ultimate success of the kingdom, and was not in earnest himself.

The answer was not direct, but general. Each parable teaches a special truth, and no one repeats the lesson in another. In one the present time is the field for work; in this the future is referred to, as a warning, as something to be prepared for. The door is open now, but there will come a time when it will be shut—by the hand of death.

If the lesson and warning were directed to the Jews, the door was shut to them at the destruction of Jerusalem, first under Titus, A.D. 70, and finally under Hadrian, A.D. 136, when the people were expelled from the promised land.

The Great Teacher urged His hearers to strive—not to rest and expect others to do the work—but to make personal and never-ceasing effort to improve every opportunity. The homely adage, "self-made man," applies to this lesson. Very few men, if any, succeed in life who are not self-made.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

JOHN x. 11-16.

CHRIST criticised the Pharisees with severity, and justly, as false guides to the people, a late instance having called attention to them, in the case of the action of the priests and leaders toward a poor blind man. Christ declares Himself the divinely called leader of the people, and the blind man the type of all who felt oppressed and were repelled by the selfish rulers and teachers. He is the door both for the sheep and the shepherds, and He addressed the shepherds specially in this parable.

All who seek to gather followers and form parties in the theocratic community, and to turn men to themselves instead of to the Messiah, were thieves and robbers, and such persons never gain entrance to the hearts really seeking salvation. They prey on simple and credulous souls. The true teacher who leads his flock to the true fold will be saved, both the flock and himself.

Hirelings can not be trusted when there is real danger. The two classes of Pharisees are described as thieves or hirelings. One sacrificed the welfare of the people to their selfish ends and aims; and the other with better intentions, but with too little true love, and therefore lacking in courage to risk their all for the good of souls. They fled before the Evil One, the wolf.

The flock is larger than the Jewish people, and includes the Gentiles—all mankind. But the Jews have neglected to enter the fold, and George Herbert, the sweet singer of the church, has told of their loss in this verse:

"Poor nation, whose sweet sap and juice
Our cyens have purloined, and left you drie;
Whose streams we got by the Apostle's sluice,
And use in baptisme, while ye pine and die;
Who by not keeping once, became a debter;
And now by keeping lose the letter."

CHRIST THE DOOR.

JOHN x. 1-10.

HERE as in other parables we find spiritual truth represented by a similitude from nature. In the parable of the Sower Christ is the husbandman, the divine word is the seed, and the various degrees of susceptibility for the word in men's souls are likened to the variously productive soils in which the seed is planted, and in this the relation of souls to Christ is compared with that of sheep to the shepherd; and the self-seeking teacher, who offers himself, on his own authority and for a bad purpose, as a guide of men, is likened to a thief who does not enter the sheepfold by the door, but climbs over the wall.

This parable differs from those in the other gospels in being less historical in style. It merely alludes to what usually happens, while they refer to what might have or did actually happen once only, and then when human affairs are taken to illustrate spiritual truths.

Faith in Jesus as the only door of entry into the divine sheepfold is the lesson; and such faith is the supreme sacrifice for sin. All outward ordinances together will not suffice if this is wanting. This faith is for sinners, not for those who need no repentance. Any soul may come and be saved from the curse of the law, and when within the fold, under the care of the Shepherd, be free to come and go anywhere in the pasture land—that is to find spiritual food, to profit by doubts, criticism, inquiry, any and every aid to discovery of the truth. This method is now the rule in the church, and is bringing all sects and divisions into closer union. Thought, study, inquiry, scrutiny, for the fullest possible information on every point is the only safe way in this age of scientific investigation.

Christ is the shepherd and He is the door of the fold, for no one can enter but through His spiritual guidance and help into the kingdom of God.

THE TALENTS.

MATTHEW XXV. 14-30.

DIVERSITY of gifts followed by equal rewards is the lesson of this parable. The reward depends on the motives, not on the amount of one's labors, except so far as this might be affected by the disposition of the heart, and perhaps also to rebuke ambition and jealousy among the disciples themselves. The servant who makes no use of the capital entrusted to him is condemned. Faithfulness and zeal, not the measure of gifts, are made prominent, and the disciple is encouraged to put all diligence into our outward service, if we would give our account at the last with joy and not with sorrow.

An Oriental poet has told a story which illustrates this parable, as here:

"There went a man from home: and to his neighbors twain
He gave, to keep for him, two sacks of golden grain.
Deep in his cellar one the precious charge concealed;
And forth the other went and sowed it in his field.
The man returns at last—asks of the first his sack:
'Here, take it; 'tis the same; thou hast it safely back.'
Unharm'd it shows without; but when he would explore
His sack's recesses, grain there finds he now no more;

One-half of all therein proves rotten and decayed,
Upon the other half have worm and mildew preyed.
The putrid heap to him in ire he doth return;
Then of the other asks: 'Where is my sack of corn?'
Who answered: 'Come with me, behold how it has sped,'
And took and showed him fields with waving harvests spread.
Then cheerfully the man laughed out and cried: 'This one Had insight, to make up for the other that had none;
The letter he observed, but thou the precept's sense;
And thus to thee and me shall profit grow from hence;
In harvest thou shalt fill two sacks of grain for me,
The residue of right remains in full for thee.'"

THE POUNDS.

LUKE XIX. 11-27.

CHRIST made use of many parables during His ministry, while His disciples expected Him to establish a visible kingdom, to give them clearer ideas of the process by which a spiritual kingdom was to be founded and developed.

Three points were brought forward in this: the opposition to be met at Jerusalem; His departure (to the unseen world), and later return in triumph; and, finally, their duty to labor actively in the interval, and not to await in indolence victory by other means.

He showed how they must win their places in the kingdom of God by faithfully using the means intrusted to them. The use of money loaned on interest is the framework of the lesson.

Jellaleddin, the great religious poet of the East, wrote a poem in which life is described as a sum of money, to be laid out at interest for God:

"O thou that are arrived in being's land,
On His affairs was sent, at His command, Thee thy Lord gave thy faithfulness to prove,
The sum of life, a capital in hand.
Hast thou forgotten thine entrusted pound?
Dazed with the market's hubbub dost thou stand?"

"Instead of dreaming, up and purchase good:
Buy precious stones, exchange not gold for sand, Thou at the hour of thy return wilt see Thy monarch set, with open book in hand.
What thou from Him receivest He will bring To strict account, and reckoning demand:
And a large blessing, or a curse from Him,
Thy faithfulness or sloth will then command."

The enemies of Jesus and of all righteousness will be judged in the great day. The destruction of Jerusalem has begun the fulfilment of this prophetic parable. That frightful day of doom to the Jewish people was a second coming of Christ in His wrath to them; but it will be fully ended only when Antichrist, and all who have served under his banner, shall have received his final doom.

START OF THE PHOTOGRAPHIC EXPEDITION IN PALESTINE.—The expedition equipped and sent out from St. Louis by the publishers of the Self-Interpreting Bible were met at Jaffa by a dragoman, assistant dragoman, cook, waiter, chief muleteer, and several assistants, together with horses, tents, cooking utensils, and all other furnishings necessary to perform the work for which the pen sketching and photographing party were sent to Palestine. The instructions of the publishers were definite and comprehensive. All the places made sacred by the words and deeds of Christ, all the cities, villages, mountains, valleys and rivers of the Holy Land, made memorable by association with the kings, prophets, and priests of Biblical History, were to be visited, photographed and described. The success of the expedition vindicated the wisdom of the promoters of the enterprise. By the general consent of the best and most distinguished authorities in Europe and America, the photographs which illustrate this work bring the scenery of Bible Lands before the eye in a more vivid and real way than was ever done before.

In the illustration given above we see Rev. James W. Lee, D. D., the author, and editor of the Self-Interpreting Bible, giving directions to the dragoman and chief muleteer as the party is leaving, in the early morning, the Church of St. John at Samaria. Following close behind is Mr. R. E. M. Bain, the artist, who was selected for this work because of his great experience, efficiency and wide reputation as an outdoor photographer.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT MATTHEW.

Nothing is of more importance, nothing more deserves a plain and fully-attested account, than the birth, life, death, and resurrection of our Redeemer, on which the eternal honour of God and the salvation of men so marvellously depend, and in which the scope and principal predictions of the Old Testament are so manifestly fulfilled. In the four Gospels now before us these things are plainly related, fully attested, and the accounts all deeply marked, not only with the utmost candour of the writers, but with the infallible direction and infinite authority of the Holy Ghost. Matthew and Luke trace our Saviour's history from his conception in the womb to his glorious ascension. Mark and John begin their accounts with his public appearances at his baptism and as a minister of the circumcision. Matthew and Mark (who often shortens, but sometimes adds to Matthew's accounts) chiefly insist on his acts; Luke, and especially John, on the divine discourses which he delivered. But, in all, the miracles which he wrought, the instructions which he inculcated, the conduct which he uniformly pursued, and the manner in which he endured his sufferings, plainly demonstrate him the Son of God and Saviour of the world. Matthew, Mark, and Luke seem to have written their histories of Christ about thirty years after his death, without having previously seen one another's narrative.

[The inspired title is not 'Gospel,' but 'The book of the generation of Jesus Christ.' The word 'Gospel,' however, beautifully expresses the import of the sacred narrative. 'Gospel' is derived from the Saxon god, good, and spel, a history or message; and is a translation of the Greek Ευαγγέλιον, from eu, good, and αγγελία, a message.

Matthew, also called Levi (Lu. 5. 27), was a native of Galilee. He was a 'publican,'—in modern language, a collector of rates or taxes; or, perhaps (see ch. 9. 9), he might receive the more dignified title of 'custom-house officer.' He was one of the twelve who were early called to the service and companionship of our Lord. He preached the gospel of his kingdom during our Lord's ministry, ch. 10. 3; saw him after his resurrection; received the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost; and afterwards preached with much success, especially in Judea. His Gospel is believed to have been written about A.D. 41, or about eight or ten years after our Lord's ascension. As he wrote immediately for the Jewish converts, it has been conjectured that he wrote originally in Hebrew, and that his Gospel was translated into Greek about A.D. 60, while the evangelist was yet living; and there is no doubt that in very early times there were two copies (or MS. editions) of his Gospel, the one in Hebrew, the other in Greek. Nevertheless, from Matthew's interpretation of Hebrew words into Greek (see ch. 1. 23; 27. 33), and the perfect accordance of his phraseology, in such cases, with that of the other evangelists, who unquestionably wrote in Greek (comp. Mar. 5. 41; 15. 22, 34; Jn. 1. 38), the legitimate conclusion seems to be that Matthew, as well as the other evangelists, originally wrote in the Greek tongue. That he may have given an edition in Hebrew is no doubt possible; but the existence of such a Hebrew original rests upon no authority of MSS., can never rise beyond the level of conjecture, and is therefore inadmissible as an item in legitimate Scripture criticism. C.

The Gospel of Matthew might be termed the Bible in miniature. The object of the Bible is to present an all-sufficient Saviour and a complete scheme of saving truth to a sinful world. This is done by Matthew. No essential doctrine is omitted; no essential duty is overlooked; no essential ordinance is left out. The plan of the Gospel is systematic and logical. The genealogy of our Lord is traced from Abraham; and he is thus connected with the revelations and promises made to patriarchs and prophets. The mystery of his conception is explained; and he is thus proved to be God Incarnate. The story of his infancy, growth, wants, and sufferings is told; and he is thus proved to be man. The descent of the Divine Spirit upon him at baptism is narrated; and he is thus shown to have been specially consecrated and prepared for his great work. His temptation and triumph are recorded; and he is thus shown to have power over Satan, man's enslaver. His sermon on the mount and his parables are given; and he is thus shown to be the great Teacher. A series of stupendous miracles wrought by him is detailed; and he is thus shown to be very God. His passion and death upon the cross are described; and he is thus shown to have borne for us the curse of a broken law. His resurrection from the grave and his assumption of universal sovereignty are recorded; and he is thus shown to have completed redemption work, and to have become 'Head over all things to his church.'

Every fundamental doctrine of Christianity is embodied in this Gospel:—human depravity, repentance, faith, the incarnation, substitution, and sacrifice of Christ, the trinity, the judgment, heaven and hell. Every duty we owe to God, to ourselves, and to others is unfolded:—worship, prayer, Sabbath observance, implicit obedience to God, honour to parents, love to the brethren, charity to mankind, holiness of life and language, purity of thought. Matthew records the institution of the sacraments, baptism and the Lord's supper. He relates the appointment and commission of a gospel ministry, and he closes his Gospel by that solemn charge given by our Lord to his church:—'Go ye and teach all nations, . . . teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.'

It is well to note that the word gospel (with its Greek equivalent) is not used in the text of the New Testament in the same sense in which it is used in the title of this book. In the Greek text the term Ευαγγέλιον is confined to the 'glad tidings' of the Messiah's coming, and the salvation preached in his name. Thus in Mat. 11. 5, 'The poor have the gospel preached unto them;' that is, the advent and doctrine of the Messiah. So in Ro. 1. 1: 'Separated unto the gospel of God.' We also read of the 'gospel of salvation,' Ep. 1. 13; the 'gospel of peace,' Ep. 6. 15; the 'gospel of glory,' 1 Ti. 1. 11. Early ecclesiastical writers used the word in a more strictly technical sense, namely, as a proper name of the Lives of Christ. Justin Martyr is the first, so far as we now know, who employs it in this sense. The sacred narratives of the life and sufferings of Christ were then called 'Gospels,' and their authors 'Evangelists.'

Matthew was son of Alphæus, Mar. 2. 14; and as it is probable that James, the son of Alphæus, was a son of Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and sister of the mother of our Lord, Jn. 19. 25, Matthew was thus a near relative of Jesus. He was a native of Galilee; and his family must have been poor, as otherwise he would not have accepted the office of publican. From the time of his call he remained a close attendant upon Jesus, and witnessed nearly all the great events of his life. After the ascension he appears to have confined his ministry chiefly to the Jews, and to have laboured in Palestine. His Gospel was specially adapted to the wants of those among whom he laboured; and the fullest and most recent researches show that it could scarcely have been written before the year A.D. 60. P.]

Ver. 3. A considerable difference in the spelling of several names will be observed—e.g., Yudas is spelled Judah; Phares, Pharez, Ge. 46. 15; Thamar, Tamar, Ge. 38. 16; Esrom, Hezrom, Ge. 46. 12, &c. &c.—This copy presents to the attentive reader of the Scriptures no serious inconvenience. It would, however, have been well had the translators studied uniformity.—Only four women out of forty-two are mentioned in the register—Thamar, Rahab, Ruth, and Bathsheba, against each of whom there lies some charge, either of personal sin, heathenism, or poverty. These facts are, most probably, thus educed to obviate the cavils of the Jews against the poverty of our Lord's mother, and, historically, to show that he came to save both Jew and

Ver. 23. Considerable distance of opinion exists as to the mode of interpreting this and many kindred passages in the New Testament. The passage quoted in Rom. 15, 7, 14, and a glance at the context shows that the prophet Isaiah, under divine guidance, speaks of an event about to occur in his time, and which would be a sign to the Israelites; whereas the words of Isaiah interpreted as prophetic of the Messiah. The solution of the difficulty is this, that while the words of Isaiah did refer directly to an event soon about to take place, yet that event was itself typical of another and greater—namely, of the incarnation. Such being the case, the language of the prophet applies as fully to the anti-type as to the type. There is no straining of the meaning therefore, no accommodation, in Matthew's application of Isaiah's words. The inspiring Spirit designed them to be applicable to our Lord. P.

ours may much exercise our patience, they do not in the least weaken his promises. Full and convincing is the evidence that our Jesus is the true Messiah, the Saviour of Jews and Gentiles, males and females, of sinners, even the chief. Marvellous was the providence of God that he should prepare him his holy manhood through and from such abominable persons and acts. But strange alterations take place in the temporal condition and moral qualities of families in a few generations. How miraculous was our Saviour's conception and birth, and how honourably testified! With great wisdom and prudence God conducted every circumstance thereof to his honour and to the happiness of those concerned. Yet they who receive remarkable honours from God may expect remarkable trials; but if we keep a good conscience, God will maintain, or, in due time, vindicate our honour. It is very comely when piety towards God, fidelity towards man, and tenderness of our reputation, go together. And in suspicious cases we should always hope the best, and depend upon God for such solution of our doubts as may enable us to proceed with freedom and comfort. But nothing can more enliven a perplexed mind than

IN THE TIME OF OUR SAVIOUR

VIEW OF BETHLEHEM. [MATTHEW, ii:1].—Six miles south of Jerusalem is Bethlehem. When Jesus was born here, in the days of Herod the king, it was only a village. Its history dates back to the time of Jacob, who buried his wife Rachel near this place. Bethlehem was the home of Boaz, who married Ruth, and whose son was Obed, and whose grandson was Jesse, the father of David. Here David tended his father's sheep, and here he was anointed by Samuel as King of Israel and Judah.—I. Samuel, xvi:11-13. From this place went up the triumphal song, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." There are some 6,000 people here now, and they make their living by carving scenes in the life of our Savior out of mother-of-pearl, and by pressing flowers, which they sell to tourists.

art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule^s my people Israel.

7 Then Herod, when he had ^{privily} called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem; and said, Go¹ and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that ^I may come and worship him also.

9 ¶ When they had heard the king, they departed: and, lo, the star,⁴ which they ^{saw} in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10 When they saw the star, they ^{rejoiced} with exceeding great joy.

11 ¶ And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and ^{worshipped} him: and when they had opened their treasures,⁵ they presented⁶ unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12 And ^{being} warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, ^{they} departed into their own country another way.

13 And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord ^{appeareth} to Joseph in a dream, saying, ^{Arise}, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod⁷ will seek the young child, to destroy him.

14 When he arose, he took the young child⁷ and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt:

15 And was there until the death of Herod, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, ^{Out of Egypt have I called my son.}

There is some difficulty in the interpretation of this quotation. Bethlehem was a town of Judah; Rachel was mother of Benjamin, and Ramah was one of the chief cities of that tribe; how then can it be said that Rachel was weeping for her children? The solution is this—Rachel died and was buried on the southern border of Benjamin, and within half a mile of Bethlehem. Herod slew the children not in the town merely, but in all the coasts thereof; and consequently in that part of Benjamin around Rachel's sepulchre. The sepulchre was, and still is, mocked of the wise men, was ^{exceeding} wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children⁸ that were in Bethlehem,⁹ and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had ^{diligently} inquired of the wise men.

17 Then was fulfilled¹ that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet,² saying,

18 In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping³ for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.⁴

19 ¶ But when Herod was dead, ^{behold}, an angel of the Lord ^{appeareth} in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20 Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead⁵ which sought the young child's life.

21 And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

22 But when he heard that Archelaus⁶ did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, ^{being} warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of ^{Galilee}.

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called ^{Nazareth}: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.⁸

CHAPTER III.

1 John preacheth: his office, life, and baptism. 7 He rebuketh the Pharisees: 13 he baptizeth Christ in Jordan, and receiveth a witness from heaven.

IN those days came ^{John} the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea,

2 And saying, ^{Repent} ye: for the kingdom of heaven¹ is at hand.

3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, ^{The voice} of one cry-discoveries of Jesus Christ as the great God-man, who effectually saves from sin and wrath.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. Wise men. Magi. These were originally Persian philosophers and priests; but the name was applied to such men of other countries as applied themselves to the study of astronomy, theology, &c. Daniel was set over the Babylonian college of the Magi; Da. 5. 11, whereby we may learn the purity of their scientific pursuits and original religious principles. These visitants were probably Jews; but from what country east of Jerusalem does not appear. C.

Ver. 2. Tacitus and Suetonius testify that, throughout the whole East there was, about this time, a general expectation of the birth of a king in Judea who should reign over the whole world. This opinion would naturally arise from the prophecies concerning the birth of Christ, which, by means of the Septuagint translation, and the dispersion of the Jews, had now been extensively diffused through all that had once been the Greek, and now was the Roman empire. C.

Ver. 4. Chief priests. The heads of families in the twenty-four courses, 1. Ch. 24. 6, and all that were members of the Sanhedrim, or Jewish senate, Mat. 26. 3; Jn. 18. 3.—Scribes. Literally writers, because they were chiefly employed in writing copies of the law, and, because of their familiarity with it, in giving interpretations. From 1. Ch. 24. 6; 2. Ch. 24. 13; Exr. 7. 11, 12, it is evident that the scribes were exclusively of the tribe of Levi. C.

Ver. 15. This prophecy has been interpreted as a mere accommodation of the words of Hosea to our Lord. But the doctrine of accommodation is such that, if once admitted, it must introduce a constant uncertainty of interpretation, unless the accommodation be expressly declared. Here there is no such intimation. The words were therefore originally intended for Christ, and were never fulfilled, except in type and shadow, till Christ the Son of God was literally 'called out of Egypt.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—How deep was the debasement, and early the sufferings, of our Redeemer! and yet attended with the honours of an extraordinary star directing to him; the devout visit of the wise men; and the repeated directions of God concerning him. How early the Gentiles begin their gathering to Shiloh! and often they who live farthest from the means of grace are first converted. Even in extraordinary appearances of nature we ought to inquire after God's mind and will; and if we be earnestly desirous to know and find Christ, neither pains nor perils will hinder us. Nothing produces so great a hatred of Christ and his kingdom as ignorance of their nature and design. And it is awful when repeated directions concerning him do but make men the more deceitful and desperately murderous. Adorable is the providence of God, which disappoints the devices of his crafty, powerful, and cruel enemies, and turns them into means or occasions of verifying his predictions and executing his purposes. He takes delight to encourage and direct young converts who are ready humbly to give to Jesus themselves and all that they have. And the more nearly any are connected with Christ, the more divine protection and direction they may expect; and the more readily and cheerfully must God be obeyed. Into what monsters of wickedness has sin transformed some men! And wicked rulers will never want wicked instruments to act by. Children, life, lands, and all other created enjoyments, are certain sorrows, but very uncertain comforts. Let my care be to have God as my portion, and to live with him as my Father and Companion, go where I will!

CHAPTER III. Ver. 2. The kingdom of heaven often denotes the gospel dispensation, but sometimes the heavenly glory, or the work of grace in the heart. 7–10. Ye hypocritical Pharisees and irreligious Sadducees, who, like your father the devil, are full of malignant enmity to all real goodness, who hath instigated you to apply for my baptism as a mean of escaping the temporal and eternal judgments to which ye are so exposed? Bring forth therefore good works in heart and life, suitable to the nature and evidential of the sincerity of your repentance, or else my baptism will do you no service. Imagine not that your not being profane Gentiles, but descendants of Abraham, will secure you from God's justice; for he will rather raise up a seed of believing and obedient followers of Abraham out of these Gentile soldiers, or even these stones, than save any of you who persist in your sins. God is now giving you the last trial. If ye reject the Messiah and his gospel offers which shall soon be presented to you, his judgments, which are now waiting, shall quickly destroy your nation, and cast you into temporal and eternal miseries, on account of your wickedness. 11, 12. By my baptism I am but attempting to prepare you for the infinitely more worthy Messiah, who will pour out upon you his Holy Spirit in a miraculous manner, and whose operations

THE TREE OF THE VIRGIN AT MATARIYEH. [Matthew, ii:13-15.]—Out about six miles from Cairo, and in the suburbs of the ancient city of On, where Moses was educated, is the village of Matariyeh, where Mary and Joseph with the infant Jesus spent the time of the sojourn in Egypt. There is an old tree here, enclosed, as you see in the picture, that is said to be the identical tree under which the holy family rested. Nearly all tourists who go to Egypt make a pilgrimage to Matariyeh. Near this place was the Temple of the Sun, where Potiphera, the father-in-law of Joseph, acted as priest, and here Joseph and Asenath, his wife, lived. The holy family could have spent the time of the sojourn in Egypt at no more fitting place than in the neighborhood where Joseph and Moses lived.

SCENE ON THE JERUSALEM ROAD. [Matt. ii:21.]—Upon the death of Herod, Joseph and Mary returned from Egypt to Nazareth. After leaving Egypt they went up by Hebron and Kuryet El Anab, and from thence by the Jerusalem road to Ramleh and then northward to Nazareth. The scene given in the above picture, in the light of all historical statement, was witnessed by the holy family. For this is the road from Jerusalem to Ramleh that has been here in all ages. It is about 12 miles out from Jerusalem and about 4 miles from Kuryet El Anab. Standing at this high point we are in sight of the Mediterranean sea and the Valley of Ajalon and the plains of Sharon.

15 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for ^vthus it becometh us

1 The language is topographically accurate. The Jordan runs through the depressed valley, nearly a thousand feet below the level of the surrounding country. The "richness" of Judea, the undoubted scene of the temptation, was probably the result of irrigation which rose abundantly from the Jordan valley to the level of the country from four thousand feet to P.

The three temptations here recorded are not occupied at the close of the period and were probably more severe than any which had preceded them. REFLECTIONS.—No place on earth can shut us out from the visits of divine grace. And often the sweetest intercourse with God is enjoyed when we are most withdrawn from the world. Ministers should accommodate themselves to the circumstances in which God places them. They who call others to self-denial, mourning for sin, and mortification of it, must show themselves as examples; and they who have experienced spiritual pleasures, must look upon carnal delights and enjoyments with a holy indifference. Thorough convictions of the horrible nature of sin, and of the vanity of earthly things, are good preparations for 4 Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

Ver. 24. Devils should rather be translated demons; for the word devil seems properly to apply to one evil spirit, exercising some authority over his numerous agents of evil. The idea that this demoniacal possession was merely a figurative expression for certain severe diseases, is utterly inadmissible, inasmuch as there is a clear distinction drawn between such possession and ordinary disease; moreover, the demons are represented as speaking—a statement which no violence of figure could apply to any bodily disease. C

CHAPTER V. Ver. 3. Truly happy they are, and shall be, who are sensible of their own ignorance, sinfulness, and insufficiency, and depend on God's free grace for instruction, forgiveness, and supply; and whose hearts are so weaned from the riches, honours, and pleasures of this life, that they readily submit to God's disposals, and part with everything temporal for the gospel's sake; for they have a full and everlasting interest in all the riches and honours of the kingdom of grace here, and of the kingdom of glory hereafter.

4. Happy are they who evangelically mourn under a deep sense of their own sinfulness of heart and life, and the miseries to which they are thereby exposed, and for the dishonour done to God by others, or the miseries inflicted on them; for they shall, in due season, be revived by the comforts of the Holy Ghost, and shall at last enter into the full and everlasting joy of their Lord.

5. Happy are they who, sensible of their own unworthiness, and of God's great goodness, readily submit to his will in all things without murmuring, and who are gentle and patient to their fellow-creatures, hardly provoked and easily appeased; for they, with God's friendship, and with inward satisfaction in their own minds, shall enjoy whatever of the good things of this world are most for their real advantage, and shall have their happy share in the new heavens and the new earth.

6. Happy are they who highly value, and earnestly desire and apply, my complete sacrifice for their justification, and my Word and Spirit for the sanctification of their nature; for their desires shall be granted, and their souls eternally filled with all possible graces and comforts.

7. Happy are they who, from an unfeigned faith in God's special mercy to themselves, are tender-hearted towards others, readily bearing severities, forgiving injuries, pitying and relieving the distressed; for God, in his unbounded kindness, will reward them with mercies inexpressibly more valuable.

8. Happy are they whose religion is pure and undefiled, whose hearts are purified by faith, their consciences washed in the blood of Jesus from guilt, their natures and tempers rendered holy by his Spirit, and who allow themselves in no hypocrisy, pride, or sensuality: for they shall enjoy delightful

WALL OF TIBERIAS—IN SIGHT OF THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST DELIVERED THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. [Matt., iv:25.]—"And there followed him great multitudes of people, from Galilee and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan." The verse quoted above gives us some insight into the wonderful influence of our Lord at this particular part of His career among the masses of Palestine. When He went up into the mountain to deliver the memorable sermon recorded in Matthew's Gospel, He was surrounded by people from all parts of the Holy Land. While on top of the mountain, where, according to tradition, He delivered the sermon, He was in sight of the place where Tiberias now stands. The party who secured the photographs which are found in this work were on top of the Mount of Beatitudes. We came down from the mountain and descended directly to Tiberias.

7 Blessed^c are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

8 Blessed^d are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

9 Blessed^e are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God.

10 Blessed^f are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

16 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

17 ¶ Think not that I am come to destroy fellowship with God here, and the full and immediate vision and enjoyment of him for ever. 9. Happy, and that eternally, shall they be who, being reconciled to God through Christ, have his peace filling their hearts, and rendering them earnestly diligent to maintain and promote peace in every society they are connected with, as far as they can, in a consistency with truth and holiness; for this manifests them to be the children of God, who shall be openly and eternally owned as such, and enjoy all the privileges that belong to the adoption of sons. 10-12. Happy are they who, with faith and patience, undergo the severest persecutions for their adherence to me, my truths and ways; for they are interested in, and shall enjoy, all the blessings of the gospel and of the heavenly state.—Do ye therefore, my disciples, reckon it a real happiness, and rejoice and glory in it, if, while ye live soberly, righteously, and godly, ye be reproached and persecuted for preaching my gospel, and following my example in holiness; for God will graciously reward you, and make even your troubles work for you an exceeding and eternal weight of glory; and know, for your encouragement, that in this path of persecution all the ancient prophets, those favourites of Heaven, travelled to and obtained their heavenly, their distinguished, rewards. 13. Ye are appointed, by your instructions and example, to spread abroad the savour of my knowledge wherever ye go, to reform the world, and preserve it from utter corruption and ruin. If therefore your hearts be gracious, your doctrines sound, and your lives exemplary, ye will be the blessed means of purging out corruptions in faith and manners, and of making multitudes of converts acceptable to God and useful to man. But if ye degenerate into unfaithful, cold, and carnal tempers, corrupt notions, and licentious lives, ye will become the most unprofitable, worthless, and contemptible of men. 14-16. Ye are appointed, in the most public manner, to spread abroad the light of my gospel in a dark world, and, by your instructions and example, to direct sinners into the way of salvation. Take care, therefore, that your doctrine and conversation shine with such lustre and purity before all men wherever ye go, that, by means thereof, they, under the influence of divine grace, may be brought to esteem, acknowledge, and admire the great excellency of real religion, as displayed in you, and to embrace and practise it themselves, to the glory of your heavenly Father. 17, 18. Think not that I am come to abrogate the moral law, or to set aside the writings of the Old Testament, or to teach anything contrary thereto. No, my great aim and work is to confirm them. I am come to explain, enforce, and establish the moral law, as an everlasting rule of righteousness, and to vindicate it from the injurious glosses which have been put upon it. I am come to fulfil all its precepts and its penalty, as a broken covenant, in the room of sinful men; and, in so doing, to answer all the types, accomplish the prophecies and promises, and to fill up all the defects of the Old Testament dispensation. For I assure you, in the most solemn manner, that no part of the typical ceremonies, or of the Old Testament predictions, shall be left unfulfilled, and no obligation of the moral law shall ever be set aside. And as I myself will persevere in the most exact obedience till the last moment of my humbled life, so will I excite and enable my followers to persevere in their obedience till the end of the world. 19. Whoever therefore shall wilfully set aside and transgress even the least of these moral commands, or teach or encourage others to do so, shall be held unworthy to be a subject, and much more an officer, in the gospel church, or of admission into the heavenly glory; and he who, from a principle of faith and love, shall conscientiously respect all these commandments, and teach and encourage others to do so, shall be highly honoured among my subjects and servants. 20. I assure you that, unless ye be interested in my complete fulfilment of the law in your stead, and unless your personal conformity to the law be more excellent, spiritual, and extensive than that of the highest pharisaical pretenders to holiness, ye can never be admitted to the blessings of the kingdom of grace here, or of glory hereafter. 21, 22. For, to give you some specimens of their defective interpretations and observances of the moral law, they pretend that there is no disobedience to the ancient command prohibiting murder, and adjudging murderers to death, but in wilfully and unjustly taking away a man's life. But such is the spirituality and extent of this commandment, that whosoever indulges rash, wrathful, and causeless anger, or a malicious and revengeful temper, is, in God's account, guilty of murder in his heart, and thereby exposed to his righteous judgment; and whoever in pride and passion revile their neighbours as worthless empty wretches, or as profane reprobate brands of hell, involve themselves in still deeper guilt, and ought to be punished by men, but shall not escape the far more severe and everlasting justice of God. 23, 24. Never therefore presume to perform any act of religious worship, or to hope for its acceptance with God, while ye indulge yourselves in causeless and sinful anger, or in evil speaking; but if ye have offended a brother, first humbly confess your fault, ask his pardon, and satisfy him for the wrong you have done him, and then present your devotions to God, in hopes of forgiveness and acceptance. 25, 26. And as both God and your brother are jointly offended, without delay embrace the reconciliation which God offers you in his promises, and be reconciled to your offended brother while ye are in the way of mercy, lest death cut you off in your sins, and drag you to the tribunal of God, that you may be condemned and cast into hell, from whence ye can never be released, since everlasting sin is the complete equivalent of everlasting hell. 27-30. The scribes and Pharisees pretend that nothing else is prohibited by the ancient commandment respecting adultery but a man's actually lying with a woman who is not his wife. But I assure you that, according to the mind of God in this precept, every man who looks upon any woman with unchaste desires after her, and contrives how to accomplish this, is guilty of adultery in his heart, though he has not had opportunity to commit it in fact; and therefore, if this, or any other sin, should be ever so dear, apparently pleasant, or profitable to you, and though it should require great self-denial, and be very painful for you to part with it, yet, as the loving, harbouring, or practising it, would defile and endanger your soul, offend God, and expose you to his everlasting wrath, mortify, detest, and abhor it without delay: it is better to suffer the greatest uneasiness and temporal loss in so doing, than that your whole man should be eternally lost, in hell on account of your indulging and practising it. 33-37. Your scribes and Pharisees pretend that the ancient command relative to swearing prohibits only the breach of such oaths as are sworn by God himself, or the swearing by his name in ordinary conversation; but I assure you that it prohibits the swearing by any creature, and the violation of such oaths as are sworn by them, since God is represented in, and connected with, every creature ye can swear by. Do not therefore swear at all by creatures, or in common conversation, but merely affirm or deny things as they really are; for all other means to gain credit to what you say, in the common affairs of life, proceed from the devil and your own sinful habits or lusts, and imply that yourselves are unworthy to be believed, or that your hearers are unreasonably incredulous. 38-42. The ancient law prescribed only for the direction of magistrates, in the retaliation of injuries done by their subjects one to another, is understood by your scribes and Pharisees as if it warranted private persons to indulge a malicious temper, and revenge themselves in lawsuits or otherwise; but I admonish and charge you never to avenge yourselves by rendering evil for evil; and, in lesser matters, bear even repeated affronts and injuries with patience, rather than retaliate in a contentious, revengeful, and furious manner; and, as far as ye can, without embarrassing your own worldly circumstances, be always ready, by giving or lending, to relieve the necessities of others, especially if they humbly apply to you for help. 43-48. Your scribes and Pharisees have further pretended that the ancient law of loving your neighbours warrants you to hate all those who are not of your kindred and religion; but though ye ought never to approve the wickedness of your enemies, I solemnly charge you to love their persons, as partakers of the same human nature with yourselves, speak good of them as far as ye justly can, and heartily wish them all temporal and eternal happiness; take all opportunities of doing good to them, and earnestly pray for their conversion and salvation who hate, curse, spitefully use, and persecute you, that ye may appear the genuine children of that God, and perfectly conformed to his image, who is so graciously liberal of his providential favours, even to his wicked and unreasonable enemies of mankind; for if ye only love them who are affectionate and kind to you, or be friendly to those of your own kindred, religion, or party, what peculiar excellency is in that conduct, or what gracious reward can ye expect for it? It is no more than even the worst of men think themselves obliged to, by the common ties of gratitude, nature, or society. Study therefore to have your principles and behaviour greatly superior to all this, and rising to the highest resemblance of your heavenly Father, whose tender mercies are over all his works, in the displays of his goodness and all his other moral perfections.

THE HORNS OF HATTIN, WHERE CHRIST PREACHED THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. [MATTHEW, v: 1.]—The fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of Matthew contain the ever-memorable Sermon on the Mount. The Horns of Hattin together make up the Mount of Beatitudes, where the sermon was delivered. Standing on the top of the highest peak of this sacred mount one can survey the whole country where most of the mighty works of Christ were done. To the east, three miles away, is the Sea of Galilee, and rising beyond is the Gadarene country. To the west is Cana of Galilee, and to the north is Mount Hermon. The Horns of Hattin, or the Mount of Beatitudes, stands about half a mile distant from the road leading from Nazareth to the Sea of Galilee. The sides of the Mount are covered by a thick growth of prickly pears and briars.

25 Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not ³⁴that thy whole body should be cast and valuable properties. Maurel declares that when, in the Valley of Salt, near Gebul, he broke a piece that had been exposed to the rain, sun, and air, though it retained the sparkling appearance of the salt, it had totally lost its savor, in conformity to our Lord's description.—Note. The disciples were commissioned by the salt of truth, by the example of self-denial, purity of life, and piety, to counteract the corruption of falsehood, covetousness, licentiousness, forgetfulness of God, and idolatry.

But if the salt Christians themselves have lost its savor, wherewith shall it the salt itself be salted? C.

Ver. 17. Neither to abrogate nor repeal the moral law, to which it is evident he refers; for he proceeds to vindicate it from the false glosses of the scribes and Pharisees. But neither did he formally abrogate or repeal the ceremonial law, though it he also fulfilled. The ceremonial law ceased among the Jews when Providence rendered its observance impossible. Upon the Gentiles it was never binding. See Ac. 21:20-26; 15:1, 23-29. C.

Ver. 18. Till the types be fulfilled by the antitype; till the end be attained by Christ in his righteousness; and till the predictions with which all is illustrated and enforced shall be fulfilled—first, in the dispersion, and afterwards in the restoration, of Israel. C.

Ver. 19. Shall be called the least. Of all men the least pleasing to God; one who knew the law, but was at once a teacher and example of disobedience. See ver. 20.—Note. The kingdom of heaven does not mean the kingdom of glory, but the gospel dispensation. See Mat. 13:24-30, 47-50, 80. C.

Ver. 20. Your righteousness can never mean personal righteousness in an acknowledged sinner, for the two ideas are utterly incompatible: see Ro. 3:20. There is no righteousness but that of God through faith, Ro. 3:22. This righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees—1. In its Origin and Author—God in Christ. 2. In its perfection—having the excellency of God's work in the flesh. 3. In its efficacy upon the conscience, to purge it; and upon the heart, to write the law on it, He. 9:14; 8:10-12. C.

Ver. 22. In this verse allusion is made to well-known Jewish customs. Various degrees of guilt received from them various degrees of punishment. The fundamental principle here is, that sins of thought or wish are, in the sight of God, virtual transgressions of his law. The man who cherishes causeless anger breaks the sixth commandment, and is liable to the judgment—a Jewish tribunal which inflicted death by stoning. The man who in his anger gave utterance to the contumelious epithet raca was liable to the council, which inflicted death by stoning. The man who said to a brother fool was liable to the Gehenna of fire; i.e. to die the death of a malefactor, and to have his body thrown into the valley of Hinnom, there to be burned. The punishment in every case was death. So in regard to every sin; whatever its kind or degree it is worthy of death, though that death may be inflicted in different ways, and accompanied by different trials. P.

Ver. 26. The adversary signifies, in the original, an opponent at law. He detains his prisoner till he has paid 'the uttermost farthing' of a limited pecuniary debt—diminishing by every payment. How much more shall a righteous God adjudge to 'everlasting punishment' (Mat. 25:46) impenitent and obstinate sinners, whose guilt has been daily increasing through time (2 Ti.
3:16) and whose profligacy and rebellion will abide through eternity! Re. 22:11. C.

Ver. 34. Swear not at all. This prohibition does not extend to 'an oath for confirmation, which is an end of all strife,' He.
6:16, but to profane swearing in ordinary conversation. See ver.
37. The lawfulness of a solemn oath in judicial controversy cannot be questioned by any that consider the moral character of the judicial law of the Jews, and the still more solemn example of God himself. See Ge. 26:3; Ex. 22:11; De. 29:12; 1 Ki. 8:33;
Mat. 5:33; Ac. 2:30; He. 6:17; 7:28. C.

Ver. 36. These were all common forms of swearing. Some of them are so still in the East. In fact, easterns can scarcely utter a sentence without some form or other of imprecation.
Their language is polluted with oaths and blasphemy. It was probably in consequence of this pernicious practice that our Lord administered the rebuke. P.

Ver. 38. These quotations were just rules for judges deciding between man and man; but more than dangerous if applied to sanction and measure out private revenge; which perversion of them our Lord here forbids. C.

Ver. 47. The publicans, as the original Greek intimates, were the tax-farmers; and the name seems also applied to their collectors. They seem to have been adopted as the lowest standard of character, both on account of their rapacity and the popular odium attendant upon them as agents of the Roman despotism. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Carnal men have very mistaken views of real happiness; it is vain to expect it without being made truly holy. But what a rich variety of blessings the gospel provides for the followers of Christ, under their numerous sorrows, persecutions, reproaches, fears, and dangers, to animate and encourage their holy desires, faith and hope, meekness and patience, humil-lity, love, self-denial, peace, and joy! And marvellous is their happiness in the full enjoyment of God. Delightful are the hints of gospel grace given by our Saviour, which were to be more clearly manifested after his ascension to heaven. And great glory to God, honour to themselves, and profit to their neighbours, do professors, and especially ministers, bring forth when they act in due character. How indispensable and broad, how holy, just, and good, are all the commandments and oracles of God! And great is his grace, and excellent his righteousness, who magnified and made them honourable in the room of guilty men.
It is highly necessary to be clothed with his righteousness, endowed with his grace, and conformed to his pattern, in every good word or work. But base is their temper, criminal their conduct, and fearful their danger, who attempt to relax the obligation or contract the obedience of God's law. And it is impossible to have fellowship with him, or have our services accepted by him, while we indulge hatred of brethren, or any other sinful lust. Yea, great reverence of God, and his name and ordinances; great chastity and purity of heart and life; universal mortification of indwelling lusts, and dominion over our appetites and passions; a sacred guard upon our speech, and forbearance under injuries; a diffusive beneficence to mankind, and imitation of our heavenly Father; are necessary to manifest us Christians indeed! Are these, my soul, the laws of the great God my Saviour, and I so unlike them? Are these the laws by which I shall quickly be judged, and do I so little regard them? Let these considerations quicken my soul, and animate me to more serious attention and exact conformity.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 7, 8. Though in prayer ye may very properly repeat some important and affecting terms to express the fervent requests of your hearts, and, on some occasions, enlarge your supplications or thanksgivings, yet never multiply words merely to spin out your prayers, or as if ye were praying to heathen idols, which are inattentive, unable, or unwilling to understand or answer your requests; for your heavenly Father, who loves you, and takes pleasure in blessing you, is thoroughly acquainted with all your wants and desires. 9-13. Therefore draw near to him with reverence and confidence, as children to a Father, infinitely kind and exalted, able and ready to help you and others around you, and acknowledge your own unworthiness, weakness, sinfulness, wants, and dangers; entreat and plead that he would, by his grace, enable you and others to glorify him in all things whereby he makes himself known; and that he would dispose all things in the church and world to his own glory; that Satan's dominion in the world and the hearts of men may be destroyed, and the kingdom of grace set up in the gospel dispensation, and daily advanced, by the bringing of multitudes into the church, and into a state of real fellowship with Christ, helping them therein, and increasing their knowledge, comfort, and holiness, till at length they be admitted to an eternal triumph in the kingdom of glory; that, by his grace, ye and others may be enabled to know, obey, and submit to his will in all things, as glorified saints and holy angels do in heaven; and that of his free gift, even in the most perilous times, ye may receive a competent portion of the good things of this life, and his blessing with them; and that, for Christ's sake, he may freely pardon all your sins of omission and commission in heart and life, by which ye have forfeited all enjoyments, and owe a debt of obedience to his injured law and justice, especially as his mercy is so infinitely superior to yours, whom, by his grace, he has enabled, from the heart to forgive the injuries done to you; and that he would either keep you from being tempted to sin, or support and deliver you when ye are tempted.
And take all your encouragement in prayer from God's own perfections, characters, and promises; and in all your prayers praise him for what he is, what he has done, is doing, or will do; and let both prayers and praises be offered up with earnest desire, and in full assurance of being acceptably regarded. 14, 15. And remember that your hearty forgiving of injuries done you is of inexpressible importance in your supplications; for if God's grace enable you to do this, it is a certain evidence of your being his children, whose ini-quities he is engaged, by grace and promise, to for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

31 It hath been said, 'Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

32 But I say unto you, That 'whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication,⁸ causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery.

33 ¶ Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old 'time, 'Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

34 But I say unto you, 'Swear not at all: neither by heaven; for it is God's 'throne:

35 Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is 'the city of the great King.

36 Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

37 But* let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these, 'cometh of evil.¹

38 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, An^e eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

39 But I say unto you, 'That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.²

40 And 'if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also.³

41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.⁴

42 Give^a to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.⁵

43 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou^b shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy:

44 But I say unto you, 'Love your enemies,

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.⁹

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our daily bread:

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you.

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16 Moreover, when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces,² that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

17 But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face;

18 That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

19 Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

20 But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

7 Ec. 5. 2, 3, 6. 1 Ki. 18. 26-29.
9 Our Lord does not condemn long continuance in prayer, but the vain expectation of being heard on account of much speaking. Solomon's dedication service is the longest public prayer recorded in Scripture, and it can leisurely be read within ten minutes. C.

THE WILD FLOWERS OF JUDEA. [Matthew, vi:28.]—No more appropriate place can be found for calling attention to flowers than in Palestine. It must have been in the spring of the year, when the flowers are in their glory in the Holy Land, that Christ, from the Mount of Beatitudes, said: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, and yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." There is a depth of color, a joyousness and gayety of bloom about the flowers of Palestine not to be seen in any other part of the world. They hide the soil and light up the mountains with their multitudinous hues. In the springtime the beauty of the flowers makes one forget the desolation and poverty of the people.

84 Take¹ therefore no thought² for the morrow:³ for the morrow shall take "thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ ending his sermon in the mount, reproveth rash judgment, 6 forbiddeth to cast holy things to dogs, 7 exhorteth to prayer, 13 to enter in at the strait gate, 15 to beware of false prophets, 21 not to be hearers, but doers of the word; 24 like houses builded on a rock, 26 and not on the sand. 28 Christ endeth his sermon.

JUDGE not,^a that ye be not judged.

2 For^b with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3 And^c why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

4 Or^d how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote¹ out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam² is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the 'beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.³

6 ¶ Give^e not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

7 ¶ Ask,^b and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you:

8 For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.⁴

9 Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then, being 'evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more

3 There is a sound principle in this proverbial lesson. The man who himself indulges in any form of sin is not qualified, either intellectually or morally, to reprove or advise others addicted to similar offences. But, on the other hand, the man who has been tempted, and has successfully resisted, or who has been addicted to sin, and has renounced it, is rendered by his own painful experience more capable of instructing others.

j Prayer is an essential part of the divine scheme of grace. No speculations about God's decrees should be permitted to interfere with it. The laws of God are unchangeable, but man is saved through faith in Christ. There is really a necessary connection between the heartfelt desire of man, expressed in prayer, and the bestowal of blessings. The husbandman who refuses to plough or sow has no more reason to expect a harvest than the prayerless man has to expect divine favours.—P.

shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

12 Therefore¹ all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

13 ¶ Enter² ye in at the strait gate: for "wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

14 Because³ strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it.

15 ¶ Beware⁴ of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

16 Ye⁵ shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 Every⁶ tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

21 ¶ Not every one that saith unto me, 'Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father⁷ which is in heaven.

22 Many⁸ will say to me in that day,⁹ Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And "then will I profess unto them, I never knew¹⁰ you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24 ¶ Therefore, "whosoever heareth these say-tence of zeal against sin? If therefore ye would be able with judgment and conscience, with decency, authority, and success, to reprove and reform others, begin with reforming yourselves. 6. And never unreasonably throw away the best counsels and reproofs, say more than the seals of God's word, upon hardened, profane, and incorrigible sinners, who will pour contempt upon them, and outrageously hate and persecute you on account of them. 7, 8. But in order to qualify you for these and all other duties, be much employed in fervent, importunate, and persevering prayer for direction and assistance. Thus shall you receive from God your heavenly Father whatever blessings he has promised. 9-11. For if none of you, however wicked or hard-hearted, would give a needy and importunate child that which is useless or destructive, how is it possible that your infinitely gracious God and Father can withhold what is good and needful from his fervently supplicant children? 12. And if God be so incomparably gracious to you, see that, in all your dealings with men, ye act in the same upright, just, and kind manner, as ye would reasonably wish them to act towards you if they were in your circumstances and you in theirs. 13, 14. And if you would be holy and happy members of my kingdom of grace or glory, ye must enter in at the strait gate of repentance, faith, and regeneration, however self-humbling and self-denying it be; for as the entrance into, or progress in, sin and self-seeking, which leads to everlasting misery, is agreeable to the corrupt inclinations of men, multitudes follow after it to their eternal perdition; but the entrance into my kingdom by the new birth being painful and difficult, and the way of true gospel holiness, which leads to everlasting life, being disagreeable to flesh and sense, and beset with manifold tribulations, there are few that enter into and persevere in it. 15-20. Beware of false teachers, who pretend to lead you by an easy and wide path to everlasting happiness, and who, under a mask of sanctity, meekness, and concern for your welfare, remain under the power of their own lusts, and labour to make a prey of you to their own carnal ends and your everlasting destruction. By the evil tendency and influence of their doctrine, and by the pride, covetousness, or sensuality of their practice, ye may discern them from my faithful servants. For according as men's inward and reigning principles are good or bad, such are, and must be, their designs and actions; and however fair men's professions and appearances be, yet, if their inward principles of action are unsound, their doctrines erroneous, and their lives immoral, they are but plagues to the church, and shall, in the righteous judgment of God, be cut down by death, and cast into everlasting despair. 21-23. It is not even the highest professions of regard to me as their Lord and Master, or a seeming fervency in calling on my name, that can manifest men real subjects in my kingdom of grace, or heirs of my kingdom of glory, but a cordial faith in my person and character, and unfeigned obedience to my heavenly Father's commands. In that awful day in which I will judge the quick and the dead, many who have preached as my ministers, and even wrought miracles in my name, shall have their hypocrisy and wickedness publicly exposed; and shall, as objects of my judgment, be, for their iniquities, banished from my blissful presence into everlasting misery. 24-27. Whoever therefore hears, seriously considers, embraces by faith and love, and acts according to the doctrines which I have been delivering, shall have my unchangeable person and character for his foundation; and whatever temptations and persecutions, doubts, fears, and dangers, may assault him in life or in death, his hope in me shall never make him ashamed. But he that hears them without cordially believing and uprightly practising them, having nothing to support him in a time of temptation, danger, death, or judgment, but his empty hypocritical profession of religion, shall, to his dreadful disappointment, inevitably and miserably perish for ever. 29. He spake with surprising majesty and authority, and with an evidence of truth and importance which could not be contradicted.

Ver. 1. Judge not. The words do not forbid a 'righteous judgment' of men's characters and actions, but a curious and inquisitorial search into men's failings and faults, for the purpose, not of reforming them, or admonishing ourselves, but for the purpose of enabling us to condemn them, and, by the comparison, to magnify ourselves. C.

Ver. 6. This caution is not to encourage either cowardice or reserve in proclaiming the gospel, but that prudence which 'rightly divides the word of truth,' and that godly discipline in the church that distinguishes between the 'clean and the unclean.'—Note. Though things holy may not be given to dogs, nor precious pearls cast before swine, yet mercy will feed the one with crumbs, and the other with husks; and where the faithful church-ruler will not admit the profane to fellowship, he will instruct, exhort, rebuke, with all long-suffering and doctrine;

ings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock:

25 And^v the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

27 And^b the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

28 ¶ And^c it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine:

29 For he taught them ^{as one} having authority, and not as the scribes.⁹

CHAPTER VIII.

2 Christ cleanseth the leper, 5 healeth the centurion's servant, 14 Peter's mother-in-law, 16 and many other diseases: 18 sheweth how he is to be followed: 23 stilleth the tempest on the sea, 28 driveth the devils out of two men possessed, 31 and suffereth them to go into the swine.

WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

2 And^a, behold, there came a leper¹ and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3 And^c Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will;² be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man;³ but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for^a a testimony unto them.

5 ¶ And^b when Jesus was entered into Caper-

9 The teaching of the scribes was based upon Scripture and tradition. In case of a difficult question they sought an answer from those who were sole sources of their knowledge. What-ever wisdom they possessed was derived, it was not inherent. Christ, on the other hand, gave judgment at all points by inherent right. Both as an independent lawgiver, and as interpreter of the written Word, he claimed infallibility. In this respect he was distinguished from all mere creatures.—P.

30 And there was a good way off from them "an herd of many swine, feeding.

31 So⁴ the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, "suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32 And he said unto them, "Go.⁴ And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

33 And⁵ they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

34 And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they "besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

CHAPTER IX.

2 Christ curing one sick of the palsy, 9 calleth Matthew from the receipt of custom, 10 justifieth himself for eating with publicans and sinners, 14 defendeth his disciples for not fasting, 20 cureth the bloody issue, 23 raiseth from death Jairus' daughter, 27 giveth sight to two blind men, 32 healeth a dumb man possessed of a devil, 36 and hath compassion on the multitudes.

AND he entered into a ship, and "passed over, and came into his "own city.¹

2 And² behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed:² and Jesus seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, "be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

3 And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, "This man blasphemeth.

4 And Jesus "knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

5 For whether is easier, to say,³ Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?

6 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power "on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) "Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house.

7 And he arose, and departed to his house.

8 But "when the multitude saw it, they mar-faith, and in the gathering of the Gentiles to himself. But (awful thought) our calling is balanced with the tremendous and lasting rejection of the long favourite people of God! Let us then not be high-minded, but fear! Let us never take up with external privileges in the church, nor aim at any secular advantages in our following of Christ. For if such be our temper, we shall be excluded from the joys of heaven, and cast into all the darkness and horrors of hell! Base are their hearts who form excuses to keep them from his service, and who prefer their swine, their sordid gains and traffic, to him. But it is the truest wisdom, in all our sorrows, our fears, and our dangers, to apply to him, as able and willing to save us. And never shall such meet with a disappointment.

* CHAPTER IX. Ver. 5. Is it not as easy to remove the sinful cause as to remove the punishment? 12, 13. It is only they who are plagued with the guilt and corruption of sin that need the Physician of souls; and the more sensible they are of their sinfulness and guilt, there is the more hope of doing them good.—God has declared, that acts of compassion to others, and especially to their souls, in turning them from their sins, is more acceptable to him than the most costly observance of his own positive institutions. I am come into the world to reform and save, not righteous persons, but guilty and polluted sinners, even the chief; and that by convincing them of their sinfulness and danger, and their need of righteousness and grace. 15-17. Since, as your master John hath testified, I am the Bridegroom of the church, and consequently my disciples guests of the marriage-feast, who are to rejoice with me, it would be very absurd for them to practise abstemious and mournful severities while I am with them. But when I shall be taken from them by my death and ascension, the hardships and dangers to which they shall be exposed will render fasting and mourning seasonable for them. Such occasional duties must be proportioned to the circumstances of persons and things, otherwise they do more harm than good; and are rather attempts towards a legal and pharisaical righteousness, than any part of real religion.

Ver. 10. Sinners. Most probably, men notoriously guilty of some public sin, and who had neglected or refused to offer the sacrifices of the law. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Quickly Jesus leaves them in wrath who would drive him from them! and readily relieves the wants of those who seek to him. But how manifest is his supreme Godhead: he knows men's secret thoughts, forgives their sins, heals their souls, removes palsies, unstops the ears of the deaf, opens the eyes of the blind, looses the tongue of the dumb, heals all manner of diseases, casts out devils, and raises the dead, with all the power, wisdom and grace, the majesty and authority of a God! Nothing is too hard, and nothing too great or good for him to effect. None that apply to him for relief, whether high or low, whether more or less wicked, are ever cast out. To sanctify and save the most notorious sinners is his peculiar delight. Tenderly he suits the duties of his disciples to their circumstances and strength, and vindicates them when they cannot answer for themselves. The stronger our faith in him is, the more profitable is it to ourselves, as well as honourable to him. And the more of fervent prayer, and the less of carnal contrivances, are employed for a gospel ministry, the more faithful and successful is it likely to prove. Let me therefore, in every distress, however desperate, employ him as my helper and healer. Let me never scoff at his words, never envy him his honours, nor his people the liberties and privileges which he bestows upon them. Let me never imagine that my importunity can trouble him, or my sins debar me from him as a Saviour. Let neither shame nor death keep me from him. And if my poverty be deep, and my case deplorable, let my faith be the stronger; so shall my deliverance be glorious. Let me admire his mighty works, glorify God velled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

9 ¶ And^k as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, ^lsitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow^a me. And he arose, and followed^k him.

10 ¶ And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many ^mpublicans and sinners⁵ came and sat down with him and his disciples.

11 And when the Pharisees saw ⁿit, they said unto his disciples, ^oWhy eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?

12 But when Jesus heard ^pthat, he said unto them, ^qThey that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what ^rthat meaneth, I^r will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, ^sbut sinners to repentance.

14 ¶ Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, ^tWhy do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can ^uthe children of the bride-chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom ^vshall be taken from them, and then shall they ^wfast.

16 No^x man putteth a piece of new cloth⁶ unto an old garment; for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles,⁷ else⁸ the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.⁸

18 ¶ While⁹ he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler,⁹ and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: ^ybut come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

19 And Jesus arose, and followed him, and ^zso did his disciples.

20 ¶ And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an ^{aa}issue of blood twelve years, came behind ^{ab}him, and ^{ac}toucheth the hem¹ of his garment:

21 For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

22 But Jesus turned him about; and when he saw her, he said, ^{ad}Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole.² And the^h woman was made whole from that hour.

23 ¶ And ^{ad}when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw ^{ae}the minstrels⁸ and the people making a noise, 24 He said unto them, Give place;⁴ for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth.⁵ And they laughed him to scorn.

25 But when the people ^{af}were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And the ^{ag}fame hereof⁶ went abroad into all that land.

27 ¶ And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, ^{ah}crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, ^{ai}Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then touched he their eyes, saying, ^{aj}According to your faith be it unto you.

30 And⁴ their eyes were opened: and Jesus ^{ak}straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know ^{al}it.⁷

31 But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

32 ¶ As⁵ they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, the ^{am}dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, ^{an}It was never so seen in Israel.

34 But the Pharisees said, ^{ao}He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

35 And⁶ Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.

36 ¶ But⁷ when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they ^{ap}fainted, and were scattered abroad,⁹ as sheep having no shepherd.

37 Then saith he unto his disciples, ^{aq}The harvest truly ^{ar}is plenteous, but the labourers ^{as}are few;

38 Pray⁸ ye therefore the ^{at}Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

CHAPTER X.

1 Christ sendeth out his twelve apostles with power to do miracles, 5 giveth them their charge, teacheth them, 16 forewarneth them of persecutions: 40 and promiseth a blessing to those who should receive them.

AND when^a he had called unto ^bhim his twelve disciples, he gave them power ^cagainst¹ unclean spirits, to ^dcast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are on their account, and obey his calls to work or warfare; but never manifest my emptiness by boasting of my external devotions. And while I follow Jesus myself, let me study to bring all my friends into acquaintance with him, and labour to have the whole earth filled with his glory.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 16. I send you forth as meek, harmless, and unable to defend yourselves, among furious and implacable men. Behave therefore with the utmost prudence, never giving any causeless provocation, nor needlessly exposing yourselves to danger; and be inoffensive, sincere, and meek, that ye may win upon some, and turn away the wrath of others. 17. And, after all, never trust yourselves with wicked men, nor expect from them anything better than persecution. 18. Your sufferings, on account of your professing and preaching my gospel, will be a public testimony to the truth of my doctrines, and of the these: 'The first, Simon,² who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother;

3 Philip,⁴ and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; 'James the son of Alphaeus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus;⁵

4 Simon 'the Canaanite,⁵ and 'Judas Iscariot,⁶ who also betrayed him.

5 ¶ These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, 'Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not.⁷

6 But⁸ go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And, as ye go, 'preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.

9 Provide⁸ neither gold, nor silver, nor brass, in your purses;

10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves,⁹ for⁸ the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy;¹ and there abide till ye go thence.

12 And when ye come into an house, 'salute it.

13 And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it;² but if it be not worthy, let your peace return³ to you.

14 And⁴ whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

15 Verily I say unto you, 'It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah⁴ in the day of judgment, than for that city.

16 ¶ Behold,² I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless⁵ as doves.

17 But⁴ beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues;

18 And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles.

19 But⁷ when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak.

20 For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.⁶

Since ye must be partakers of my sufferings and glory in due order, never let anything which your adversaries can do terrify you from, or discourage you in, your work: for your whole doctrine, and your integrity in professing and preaching it, shall be openly manifested to your honour as well as mine, in the spread and success of the gospel, and in the last judgment. FLOCKS OF GOATS NEAR JERICHO. [MATTHEW, x:15.]—"Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city." We give the picture above because it illustrates a region close to the land of Sodom and Gomorrah. The whole plain of the Jordan between Jericho and the Dead Sea is now a desolate and barren waste. The soil is exceedingly rich and fertile, but in order to bring forth abundantly, as in ancient times, it is necessary to irrigate it. In the immediate neighborhood of the Dead Sea, where the cities of the plain are supposed to have stood, there are many and abundant evidences of volcanic activity. The account of the destruction of these cities by fire looks very reasonable to one as he rides over the plain of Jericho to the Dead Sea.

38 And¹ he that taketh not his cross,⁸ and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

39 He that findeth his life, shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it.

40 ¶ He^a that receiveth you, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

41 He^o that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous man's reward.⁹

42 And^p whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones¹ a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

CHAPTER XI.

2 John sendeth his disciples to Christ. 7 Christ's testimony concerning John. 16 The opinion of the people, both concerning John and Christ. 20 Christ upbraideth the unthankfulness and impenitence of Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum: 25 and praising his Father's wisdom in revealing the gospel to the simple, 28 he calleth to him all such as feel the burden of their sins.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence, to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ¶ Now^b when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

3 And said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?

4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again^a those things which ye do hear and see:

5 The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.¹

enjoyments of it, through his conscientious adherence to my truths, shall find real happiness and comfort therein, and be graciously rewarded with everlasting life in the world to come. 40-42. Whatever kind reception your persons and doctrines meet with, shall be accounted as given to me and my Father: and whatever kindness is done to any of my ministers or disciples, as such, from faith in and regard to me, shall be richly and graciously rewarded in the present, and especially in the eternal state.

Ver. 1. He gave them power. This is one of those many instances in which the Deity of Christ is established by a fact, and not by a doctrine. 'He gave them power.'—Who but God manifest in the flesh could give such power as this! C.

Ver. 2. The twelve were evidently chosen and consecrated to their specific apostolic office before this time. The event is not recorded, but it is here taken for granted. Their names, and the work intrusted to them, are now first mentioned. There are four distinct lists of the apostles will serve to explain a few obscure passages. It will be observed that Peter stands first in all. This does not imply that he held a higher rank, or had any special privileges; but merely that, as in all companies and bodies of men some one is always found to take a more prominent part among his equals, so it was with Peter. In character he was adapted for leading. He was bold, energetic, sometimes even rash. In the list here given he is called 'first,' partly because of the prominent place he took and occupied among his brethren; partly because he was the first called to office. P.

Ver. 5. They were restrained, for the present, from visiting either the Gentiles or Samaritans, that they might not excite the prejudices of the Jews. Neither were the disciples themselves yet prepared to preach the gospel to the world. They were, as yet, but children, and therefore confined to feeding babes. C.

Ver. 9. Provide neither gold, &c. This direction prohibited the apostles themselves from waiting till they had got money, but by no means exonerated others from providing for their support. C.

Ver. 10. Nor scrip for your journey, &c. That is, Let none of you take more than the sandals that he wears, or the staff in his hand, lest you encumber yourselves with unnecessary baggage, and tempt the cupidity of the covetous and the robber. C.

Ver. 16. Wise as serpents—that lie humbly in the grass, and glide away from danger.—Harmless as doves. That never intentionally provoke enmity. Wisdom, to preserve harmlessness from degenerating into folly; harmlessness, to prevent wisdom from degenerating into cunning. C.

Ver. 34. The gospel of Christ is a gospel of peace. Its leading principles may be embodied in one comprehensive word, love. Consequently division, hatred, and strife are not, and cannot be, the direct results of the gospel. Yet, as an historical fact, they have followed the gospel. They spring, however, from man's evil heart, opposing the gospel: from his ignorance, misapprehending it. P.—The earth. Rather, on the land of Judea, which the Jews expected Messiah would render the seat of prosperity and power; but which he came to destroy, because of the unbelief and wickedness of its inhabitants. C.

Ver. 35. Not that Christ came with the design of producing those evils, but that the envy and malice of Satan and of wicked men would be provoked to inflict them upon the people of God. C.

Ver. 39. He that findeth his life, as a treasure, at the expense of his profession of faith, shall lose it.—And he that loseth temporal life, because he would not deny the faith, shall, instead of it, gain life eternal. C.

Ver. 41. He that receiveth a prophet, &c. Instructions, such as a prophet alone can give; and blessings, such as God bestows as an honour of godly hospitality. See the history of Elijah and Elisha.—He that receiveth a righteous man, &c. He that receives a believer as one made righteous 'through the righteousness of God,' shall receive, through that intercourse, that 'peace with God' which justified men alone can describe and commend. C.

1 Whatever may be said about miracles by modern philosophers and sceptics, our Lord evidently regarded them as sufficient proofs of his divinity and divine mission. He told John's disciples simply to observe and report; that he knew would be enough to satisfy and convince any thoughtful man.—P.

k Or, is gotten by force, and they that earnest men take, &c.—ch. 3. 5. Lu. 1. 16.

l The sense of this verse seems to be this:—Previous to the coming of the Baptist, the kingdom of heaven, or the gospel kingdom, could only be viewed in the light of prophecy. It was closed to ordinary eyes. John partially opened it. The consequence was an immediate effort to the part of anxious, earnest souls to rush in to it. They pressed forward with an ardour which resembled violence. They appeared as if they would seize it by actual force. The words are used in a good sense.—P.

m The sense of the passage is that the Old Testament economy, which is here comprised under the two heads, the prophets and the law, continued in force until the time of John. His time was the connecting link between the Old and the New.

n The old continued in force until John preached the kingdom of God—the Gospel. He was the forerunner of the Messiah; consequently the Messiah had already come. Our Lord makes a somewhat similar use of this expression in Lu. 16. 16.

o The Jews for adhering to the old dispensation when the new was proclaimed.—P.

7 ¶ And, as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

8 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

20 ¶ Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

21 Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you.

23 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

25 ¶ At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27 All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28 ¶ Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

confinement, and the low figure which Christ made in the world, were great trials of John's belief of his being the true Messiah, yet it was probably more for the satisfaction of his disciples than for his own that he now sent them to Christ; and Christ refers them to the works which they saw him do as unanswerable proofs of his true Messiahship. 6. Blessed only is he who, upon the evidence I give, is so well satisfied of my Divinity and Messiahship, that no prejudices nor discouragements can make him reject or disown me. 7-13. John, whom ye heard preach in the wilderness of Judea, was no unstable pleaser of men, no delicate gentleman, but an inspired prophet, and greater than all his predecessors, since he pointed me out as already come in the flesh; and yet every gospel minister will be still more honourable, having much clearer views of my person, obedience, and sufferings, grace and glory, and of the spiritual design of my kingdom. Since John began to preach, great multitudes have crowded to hear the gospel; and many, even publicans and other notorious sinners, have, with eagerness and vehemence, sought after the gracious and saving blessings of it; and my coming, and blessings, represented by Moses and the prophets as future and distant, are now considered as present. 16-19. The body of the Jews, now living, are so senseless, peevish, and perverse, that they relish no form of instruction, whether mournful or cheerful. John Baptist recommended his doctrine of humiliation and repentance by a severe and solitary life of fasting and self-denial; and they, instead of mourning with him for their sins, reproached him as a sullen unsocial man, possessed by the devil. And when I, the Messiah, recommended my glad tidings of salvation by a more free, friendly, and social conversation, they reproached me as a gluttonous and drunken companion of the vilest miscreants. But let envy and malice suggest what they will, the wisdom of God in these doctrines, and in the manner of manifesting them, and I, as the Messiah, are, and will be, approved, attested, and vindicated in and by every true believer. 20-24.

Christ does not affirm that the extremely wicked inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and Sodom would have repented after a godly sort, but so as to prevent the fearful judgments which came upon them. 25, 26. In thy high dignity, and that none may glory in himself, thou hast savingly manifested the doctrines and blessings of the gospel, not to men famous for learning and worldly policy, but to the lowest, plainest, and weakest of men. 27-30. Since my Father, who alone fully knows my nature, character, and work, and whom I fully know, and savingly manifest, has intrusted to my care and management all persons and things relative to the redemption of men, I invite and call every one that labours in or is laden with guilt, corruption, burdensome ceremonies, or attempts after legal righteousness, to receive me and my full salvation by faith, as the only effectual means of rest and relief. And since I am gracious, gentle, and condescending, yield yourselves to my instructions and influence, and follow my example, that ye may find refreshment and satisfaction to your souls. For my service is perfect freedom; my commands, particularly under the gospel dispensation, are not grievous; and I will lay no burdens upon my disciples which I will not enable them to bear.

Ver. 3. Not as if John retracted the testimony he had already given to Jesus as the 'Lamb of God,' or that he doubted the mark of the descending Spirit—but that he might turn the eyes of his disciples from his own light, which he knew to be about to expire, and fix them upon Jesus, the true and inextinguishable Sun.—Note. 'He that should come' was a title of Christ. See Ps. 50: 3; 118: 26.

Ver. 5. The poor. A characteristic of Messiah, peculiarly suited to impress John—who was so remarkable for austerity of life and renunciation of the world. C.

Ver. 9. What the prophets saw at a distance John saw nigh at hand; what they saw by faith, he, as the apostles did, 'saw, looked upon, and handled,' of the manifested Word of life, 1 Jn. 1: 1, 2.

Ver. 11. Greater. Not greater in dignity or power—for that is inconsistent with the brotherhood of disciples, Mat. 23: 8; not greater in working miracles—for that gift was not universal in the primitive church—but greater in the prophetic office, not in the department of predictions, but in that of exposition. And in that, truly, the weakest believer knows more of Christ than John did. C.

The connection between the last clause of ver. 27 and the first of ver. 29 is equally important. The Son is the only revealer of the Father; there fore learn of me. Fullness of wisdom and fulness of power are his; and these he employs for the salvation of his people.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Christ reproveth the blindness of the Pharisees concerning the breach of the Sabbath, 3 by scriptures, 10 by reason, 13 and by a miracle. 22 He healeth a man possessed of a devil, who was blind and dumb. 31 Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall never be forgiven. 36 Account shall be made of idle words. 38 He rebuketh the unfaithful, who seek after a sign; 49 and sheweth who is his brother, sister, and mother.

AT that time Jesus went on the sabbath-day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

2 But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath-day.

3 But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did when he was an hungered, and they that were with him;

4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat the show-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests?

5 Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath-days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

6 But I say unto you, That in this place is one greater than the temple.

7 But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

Ver. 19. Wisdom, owing to different circumstances of time, place, rank, society, and health, will dictate different courses, either in the temperate use of, or in total abstinence from, worldly comforts; and hypocritical and worldly men will be sure to condemn, no matter which line is followed. The wisdom of these several courses, when the circumstances and motives are weighed, will be acknowledged by candid and impartial men, and approved by Him who 'sees not as man sees,' and who judges 'righteous judgment.' C.

Ver. 21. Then why did not God thus lead men to repentance? 'Nay, but who art thou, O man, that repliest against God?' That they would have repented is certain—for the Lord has said it; but that their repentance would have been unto life, he has not said, and no man can tell. From ver. 23 it is evident that the repentance contemplated was merely that which, by arresting the progress of luxury and dissipation, would have retarded or averted national judgments and destruction. C.

Ver. 25. Did these things. As a just judgment on men, who, 'professing themselves wise, had become fools'—'and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Graciously God raises up one minister when he has removed another. And all faithful preachers lead their hearers only to Christ and his truths. Yea, Jesus takes delight in honouring them who honour God; and in satisfying a humble though doubting faith, while wilful obstinacy is confounded. It is not outward splendours, but eminent gifts, graces, and faithfulness, that truly commend preachers. And it adds to their honour if by their means poor sinners be cast into the mould of the gospel, or multitudes awakened to an earnest concern about their salvation. But let faithful ministers behave as they will, they must expect reproach and persecution. Nor can the best qualified and most diligent effectually convert their hearers. But, alas! tremendous and infinite is their danger who obstinately rebel against the light and grace of the gospel, stumble at the Redeemer, abuse the means of his grace, and insolently reproach him and his servants! Redoubled sorrow must be their everlasting portion. Let Britain, let my soul, think and tremble! But O how delightful and unbounded are the fitness and fulness of Christ to save sinners, even the chief! And that not by natural qualifications, or by works of righteousness, but according to his own

VIEW OF TYRE. [MATT., xi:22.]—It must have grieved the Son of God beyond the power of expression when his own people and the cities of his own Galilee did not repent and turn away from their sins while daily witnessing his mighty works. Speaking of Bethsaida and Chorazin, He said: "It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you." It is a curious thing that even to-day there are some remains of Tyre and Sidon, but not a single vestige of Chorazin and Bethsaida. Tyre was the great city of the Phoenicians. It was once the capital and center of the world's commerce. Tyre was leveled to the ground by Alexander the Great, but was afterward rebuilt. It is no longer a place of commercial importance. It was here that Jesus wrought a cure, and said to the woman: "O woman! Great is thy faith."

8 For the 'Son of man is Lord' even of the sabbath-day.

9 ¶ And¹ when he departed thence, he went into their synagogue:

10 And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, 'Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-days?' that they might accuse him.

11 And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

12 How much then is a man better than a sheep? wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath-days.

13 Then saith he to the man, 'Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

14 ¶ Then the Pharisees went out, and held a council⁶ against him, how they might destroy him.

15 But when 'Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence: and 'great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all;

16 And⁷ charged them that they should not make him known:⁷

17 That 'it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

18 Behold⁸ my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased: I⁹ will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall show⁹ judgment to the Gentiles.

19 He¹⁰ shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A¹¹ bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax⁸ shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory.

21 And¹² in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

22 ¶ Then¹³ was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23 And all the people were amazed, and said, 'Is not this the son of David?

11 What particular sin constitutes the unpardonable sin against the Holy Ghost, has been the subject of much and anxious inquiry; and by the usual marginal references to 1 John 5.16, which has no relation whatever to the subject, the perplexities of many have been greatly increased.

The following suggestions, it is hoped, may serve to obviate the difficulties of the question.—Our Lord declares, 'No man cometh to the Father, but by me,' Jn. 14.6. And again, 'I go unto the Father; and, 'I am the way,' Jn. 14.12. and, 'I am the light of the world,' Jn. 1.9. Now, let it be recollected that all forgiveness of sins lies in Jesus.—See Mar. 2.28. Ep. 1.7. Ac. 3.1. Re. 1.5.—and that the Father dispenses it only for his name's sake, 1 Jn. 2.12. Wherefore, if it shall appear, that no man can come to Jesus but by the Holy Ghost (see Jn. 3.5; 1 Co. 12.3; 1 Jn. 5.9),

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 26-30. If devils weaken their common cause among men, and work for the confirmation of my doctrines of holiness, which are so directly contrary to all their interests and designs, how can their power in the world stand? And if ye will pretend that I cast out devils by a diabolical influence, by what do your own applauded disciples undertake to cast them out? They shall therefore be witnesses, and give judgment against your partial and unjust accusation of me. And if it be incontrovertibly evident that I cast them out by the almighty invitation of God's Spirit, it is then plain that I am come with divine authority to destroy the kingdom of the devil, with power dislodging him from men's bodies and souls, and to set up a spiritual, merciful, and holy kingdom among you: and whoever will not own and join me in my opposition to him, and in gathering sinners out of his kingdom into mine, must be held as an enemy to me and to the conversion of mankind. 31, 32. Whatever blasphemous reproaches ye utter against me in my present debasement, may be pardoned; but if, in this approaching dispensation of the Holy Ghost, ye blaspheme his marvellous gifts and operations as devilish, and contrary to his remarkable convictions, wilfully and maliciously oppose the method of redemption which he comes to apply, it shall never be forgiven you, but the most fearful judgment shall overtake you, both in this world and in the next. 33-37. Nay, your present words manifest the inward wickedness and malice of your heart, and that ye are indeed the children of the devil; for as men's hearts are good or bad, so will be their words and actions. And know, that even your trifling and unprofitable talk, and much more your blasphemous reproaches, must be reckoned for, to your condemnation, in the day of judgment. 41, 42. Christ's divine dignity and authority were manifest; his wisdom was infinite; his preaching frequent, plain, powerful, and long continued; his doctrines were confirmed by miracles unnumbered, and at last by his resurrection and the effusion of the Holy Ghost. 43-45. This parable means, that Satan, being frequently baffled by the miracles of Christ and his apostles, and by the light and power of the gospel among the Jews, should, in great vexation, retire to the Gentile world, hoping to meet with less disturbance among them; but finding himself quickly pursued thither by the still more remarkable influences and success of the gospel, and more abundantly harassed and defeated, he should return to the Jews: and finding most of them destitute of grace, notwithstanding all their pretences to purity and religion, and more ready to resign up themselves to him than before, he would seduce them more powerfully than ever; and by filling them with more obstinate hardness of heart, render their wickedness and ruin altogether remediless.

WALL OF THE SYNAGOGUE AT CAPERNAUM—SCENE OF THE MIRACLE OF THE HEALING OF THE HAND. [Matthew, xii:9-10.]—

The site of the ancient city here photographed is covered with a rank growth of bushes and weeds. But lying half covered by the rank vegetation are pillars wrought out of the indigenous limestone, and decorated with beautiful Corinthian capitals, hewn architraves, elaborate friezes and pedestals. In the picture is presented a view of a part of the wall of the ancient synagogue. It was in Capernaum that Christ performed more of His miracles than in any other city, and in this synagogue it is supposed He performed the miracle of healing the man with the withered hand, referred to in Matthew, xii:9-10. Here, also, Christ is supposed to have appeared to the disciples after He arose from the dead.

38 ¶ Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee.

39 But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas:

40 For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

41 The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

45 Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The parable of the sower and the seed: 18 the exposition of it. 24 The parable of the tares, 31 of the mustard-seed, 33 of the leaven, 44 of the hidden treasure, 45 of the pearl, 47 of the draw-net cast into the sea: 53 and how Christ is contained of his own countrymen.

THE same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea-side.

2 And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

3 And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow:

4 And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way-side, and the fowls came and devoured them up.

5 Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth; and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them.

8 But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred-fold, some sixty-fold, some thirty-fold.

9 Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶ And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

during all Saturday, and rose early on the Lord's-day; but this, according to Jewish computation of time, was 'three days and three nights.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Be content, my soul, to endure hardships or hunger, and to live on coarse fare, and to put up with ignorant reproaches in following Christ. And in all let me rejoice that he is my advocate and justifier, and the Lord of the Sabbath, who can prescribe the work of it at his pleasure, and has appointed it as his great opportunity of distributing blessings to sinful men. If either diseases or devils plague me, let me cast my burden on the Lord. And if my heart or hand be withered, let me stretch it forth at his power-conveying call. Let me copy his example of constant and humble activity in doing good, or of meekly bearing the vilest reproaches. And let me never check them by passionate returns or by revengeful recrimination, but by unanswerable, and especially practical refutation. Empty professors are very prone to carp at things trifling or lawful, while they indulge an ignorance of the oracles of God. But full of blindness, prejudice, and malignity against Jesus Christ and the gospel, must they be, and fearful is their guilt, and dreadful their danger, who, contrary to strong evidence and deep convictions, blaspheme Jesus Christ and his Spirit. No heathens can sin so heinously, nor be damned so dreadfully! There is an absolute necessity of almighty power and grace to convert men from Satan to God; and to have gracious principles implanted in our hearts, in order to practical holiness. No gracious acts can ever take place till gracious qualities be cultivated by ourselves. But surely we should be very careful to act always as under God's eye, when our final account is to be so strict, and the issues of it so infinitely important! Near relations, or even real saints, are often Satan's instruments to hinder Jesus or his faithful servants in their work. Yet great is his love to, and care for, such as truly believe and obey him: and if I be spiritually related and conformed to him, let the world condemn and reject me as they please. But it is very desirable and honourable that all the lovers of Jesus should be as united in promoting the interests of the gospel, as Satan and his subjects are in their opposition to it.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 10-15. Our Saviour taught much in parables. (1) That he might fulfil Old Testament predictions, Ps. 78. 1, 2; 49. 3, 4; ver. 34, 35. (2) That, in manifesting the spiritual turn of his own mind, he might set us an example to improve everything as a mean of spiritual instruction, Jn. 3. 12, 13. (3) That he might the more effectually reprove the Jews, without putting them into a rage, ch. 21. 28-46. (4) That he might the more easily instruct the attentive and thoughtful in a manner, much used in the East, delightful to the mind and helpful to the memory, Ho. 12. 10. (5) That he might sadly permit the blindness and ruin of such as hated instruction, ver. 13. 3-9, 18-23. The parable of the soils or sower represents the different issues of the gospel ministrations on different sorts of hearers, and the causes of them. The sower is Jesus Christ, by himself and his ministers, painfully, carefully, and faithfully preaching gospel truths, which, like good seed, are precious, uncorrupted, and calculated to produce fruits of faith and holiness, glory to God, and eternal happiness to men. The wayside denotes careless hearers, who never seriously regard or think about those divine truths which they hear; while the devil and his agents divert their mind with other thoughts, to make them entirely forget them. The stony ground denotes them who hear the gospel with some delightful conceptions of its glories, sudden flashes of joy in their affections, and some slight purposes and desires towards that which is good; but, their hearts never being savingly renewed, they do not receive it by faith and love, as an abiding and governing principle of action; and hence, whenever they meet with violent and lasting temptations or persecutions for the

THE SEA OF GALILEE. [Matthew, xiii:1, 2.]—The Sea of Galilee is about six miles wide and about fifteen miles long. There are only a few little boats found upon its waters to-day. In the time of our Savior, however, there were upon it great fleets. When the forces of Titus, the Roman general, besieged the City of Tiberias, large numbers of the people flocked into the boats; and at this time an engagement took place in which as many people perished in the sea as on the land. According to Josephus, 6,500 thus perished. There are a great many fish in this sea, but they are caught from the shore alone. The above picture was photographed from a point on the shore where the walls of Tiberias stand. On the shore of this sea was a favorite place of our Savior for teaching the people.

12 For¹ whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Thereforeⁿ speak I to them in parables: because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not, neither do they understand.

14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, °By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.³

16 But^p blessed are your eyes, for they see:
and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, ^aThat many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

18 ¶ Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth ^{the} word of the kingdom, and ^{understandeth} it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was ^{sown} in his heart. ^{This} is he which received seed by the way-side.

20 But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon ^vwith joy receiveth it:

21 Yet hath he not ^{root} in himself, but dureth for a while; ^{for} when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.

22 He^b also that received seed among the sake of religion, they apostatize from it. The thorny ground denotes them who hear the gospel with remarkable attention; and are so affected by it that, for a considerable time, they appear to make progress in the knowledge, profession, and practice of religion; but at last their cares about worldly things, and expectation and desires of happiness in them, and their eager pursuits after riches and pleasures, so entangle, deceive, and overset them, that they never attain to any true holiness of heart or life. The good ground denotes those hearers who receive the truths of the gospel into their hearts, renewed by the Spirit of God, and, through the daily influences of his grace, improve them to their spiritual fruitfulness in holy dispositions, thoughts, words, and actions, in different degrees.

24-30, 36-43. The sowing of the good seed represents Christ as planting his grace in the hearts of men by the ministry of the gospel, to render them true members of his church; these, in due time, discover themselves by their open profession of their faith, and by their holy practice. The tares denote hypocritical professors or ministers; these Satan, especially in a time of prosperity, and when ministers and people are unwatchful, secretly raises up in the church, and causes gradually to discover themselves. It is a grief to the faithful servants and people of Christ to see the gospel so perverted and abused by any of its preachers or professors, to the introducing of errors and immoralities into the church or world; and yet, till the harvest of the last judgment, such can never be wholly separated from the truly and faithful. 31. 32. The marvellous growth of the grain of mustard-seed represents Christ's gospel and church in the world, and his grace in the soul; extremely small and obscure in their beginnings, but gradually increasing, till they fill the heart, and even the earth; so that both Jews and Gentiles find refreshment and rest in them. 33. The hidden leaven, affecting three measures of meal, represents Christ's gospel and grace implanted in the hearts of men, and secretly working with such divine efficacy as to sanctify all the faculties of the soul and members of the body, and gradually spreading themselves through all nations, to captivate them to the obedience of faith. 34. The TREASURE hid in the field, &c., represents Christ and the rich blessings of the gospel as lying hid in the oracles of God from carnal men; but when manifested by the Spirit, eagerly apprehended, and joyfully received into the heart, and an interest in them esteemed so valuable that a man is ready to part with all things in the world to enjoy fellowship therein through the Word. 45, 46. The PEARL of great price denotes Christ and his inestimable blessings, which, being once discovered by earnest seekers after true happiness, renders them willing to part with all the riches and enjoyments of this world rather than not obtain a property therein. 47-50. The NET cast into the sea, &c., represents the gospel as laboriously and faithfully preached in this confused, wicked, and unquiet world, and as being the mean of gathering multitudes, some saints and some hypocrites, into a visible church state, in which they shall remain connected till the angels make an awful separation between them in the last thorns, is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the 'deceitfulness of riches choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

23 But^a he that received seed into the good ground,⁴ is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred-fold, some sixty, some thirty.

24 ¶ Another^e parable put he forth unto them, saying, ^aThe kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed ^bgood seed in his field:

25 But while men ¹slept, his ¹enemy came and sowed ²tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

28 He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, "Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?"

29 But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both ^ogrow together until the harvest:
and in the ^ptime of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles ^{to} burn them; but gather the ^{wheat} into my barn.⁵

31 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed,"⁶ which a man took, and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and ^{it} becometh a tree, so that the birds judgment. 52. The HOUSEHOLDER represents preachers treasuring up divine truths in their minds and hearts, that, out of the Old and New Testaments, and out of their new and old instructions, observations, and experiences, they may seasonably and profitably bring forth doctrines suited to all persons and cases.

Ver. 3. The parables of our Lord are short descriptions of natural objects or events; the several parts of which are employed to illustrate some corresponding spiritual truth. With one single exception—that of the rich man and Lazarus—all are confined within the limits of this world. Our Lord commenced his preaching by plain exposition of the Word, and unsparing correction and reproof of the Pharisaic perversions of Scripture. This method gave offence; wherefore he, who 'knew what was in man,' changing his manner of address, to which his preaching was less excited, attention secured, and truth insinuated by the aid of curiosity, &c.

Ver. 11. Mysteries are not truths beyond the reach of the understanding, but something hidden or withheld and therefore unknown in whole or in part. Here, and elsewhere, 'a mystery' denotes something disclosed to certain persons prepared to comprehend and receive it, but withheld from the multitude, whose prejudices would have been excited by a plainer exposition, and would consequently have been driven from the means of instruction. C.

Ver. 29. Catcheth away, &c. The simplest illustration of this satanic robbery may be seen in the attempts to seduce our Lord, ch. iv. : (1) By appetite. (2) By false quotation and perversion of Scripture. (3) By ambition. And as water poured into a vessel of oil will soon expel it and occupy its room, so any of these infused into the mind will soon expel the word of truth from the attention, the memory, the understanding, and the affections. C.

Ver. 27. Tares. The word zizania, erroneously translated tares, does not occur elsewhere in Scripture, nor in any ancient Greek writer. The most probable interpretation is 'darnel,' the Lolium temulentum of Linnaeus. Forskal says it grows abundantly at Aleppo; and that if the seed remain mixed with the wheat, the bread causes dizziness and sickness. The darnel is honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.

58 And^y he did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief.⁹

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Herod's opinion of Christ. 3 Wherefore John Baptist was beheaded. 13 Jesus departeth into a desert place: 15 where he feedeth five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes: 22 he walketh on the sea to his disciples: 34 and landing at Gennesaret, healeth the sick who touched but the hem of his garment.

AT that time 'Herod' the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus;

2 And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist: he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works do show forth themselves in him.²

3 ¶ For^b Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias's sake, his brother Philip's wife.

4 For John said unto him, 'It is not lawful for thee to have her.

5 And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet.

6 But when 'Herod's birthday was kept,⁴ the daughter of Herodias danced before them,⁵ and pleased Herod.

7 Whereupon 'he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.

8 And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, 'Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

9 And the king was 'sorry: nevertheless, for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

10 And he sent, and 'beheaded John in the prison.

11 And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.⁶

12 And^d his disciples came and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

13 ¶ When^a Jesus heard of it, he departed⁷ thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.⁸

14 And^e Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

17 Our Lord went away in a ship, and the people followed him on foot. How is this explained? Christ appears to have been at or near Capernaum when he heard of the murder of John. Capernaum was situated on the northwestern shore of the Sea of Galilee. Christ took a boat there and crossed the lake to the north-eastern shore. The northern shore of the lake sweeps round in the form of a semicircle. The people could see the course of the boat; by running along the beach they could keep pace with it; and they would arrive at the point of debarkation almost as soon as our Lord himself. The scene of the miracle was the steep grassy slopes on the western declivity of the great plateau of Bashan.—P.

24 Perhaps no other nation on earth could have produced twelve baskets upon such an occasion. But 'the basket-carrying Jews'—literally pedlars, as they are called by Juvenal (Sat. 6. 542), could readily furnish one for each apostle—one for each tribe. The incidental mention of so many baskets is a curious, and not unimportant evidence of the truth of the narrative.—C.

15 And^p when it was evening,⁹ his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.

16 But Jesus said unto them, 'They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

17 And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

18 He said, Bring them hither to me.

19 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass; and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to 'heaven, he blessed,² and brake; and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

20 And they 'did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets³ full.

21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

22 ¶ And^a straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.

23 And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up 'into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening⁴ was come, he was there alone.

24 But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary.

25 And in 'the fourth watch⁵ of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

26 And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they 'were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

27 But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, 'Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.

28 And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be 'thou, 'bid me come unto thee on the water.

29 And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But 'when he saw the wind 'boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me!

31 And 'immediately Jesus stretched forth unwilling to part from their Lord, or timorously shrinking from going to sea without him. Bloomfield, however, has shown that the original may well be translated 'caused,' which would intimate no reluctance in the disciples, but merely a direction on the part of Jesus, the more readily to induce the multitude to disperse, by the sight of the previous departure of the disciples. C.

Ver. 26. A spirit. Rather, 'an apparition.' The idea of the spirits of the dead, or rather unembodied spirits, appearing by night, seems to have been, and to be, common to all nations. The idea of such apparitions is said to be exceedingly prevalent among sailors, who look upon them as ominous of shipwreck, which feeling may have produced such terror in the disciples. And though such dread may be largely the effect of misdirected education and superstition, the prevalence of the opinion proves, either that the belief of a spiritual world and immortality is natural to man, or that it proceeds from some original fact or doctrine communicated at the very fountain-head of human life. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's faithful ministers are great tormentors to them who, like devils, continue impenitent under awful convictions. Faithful reproofs, especially of great men, often procure the most inveterate resentment; in the prosecution of which, all bonds of humanity, honour, justice, or gratitude are trampled under foot; and profane swearing, cruelty, and murder are combined to resent the distinguished kindness. Never are the lusts of sinners more ready to rage than when intoxicated with carnal mirth; and none are more cruel and bloody monsters than abandoned women. But if friends die, and enemies rage, let us go to Jesus, and pour out our complaints to him; and if he withdraw, let us follow him the more eagerly. In so doing we may be reduced to straits, but never to ruin. His compassion is as unbounded as his power. And none need ever depart from him to seek happiness or subsistence from the creature. It is his to feed the hungry, to save the drowning, and to heal the diseased, when brought to the utmost extremity. Let me, then, cast all my care upon him, rest contented with my lot, and readily distribute to others. None ever lost, but gained, by prudently giving to the Lord and the poor. His blessing multiplies provision, but never allows to make waste. Yea, the truly liberal will be the best economists. After sermons and miracles, as well as before, let me give myself to solemn prayer. Let me never be stumbled if I meet with terrible storms in the way of my duty; never dread Christ's hatred of or unconcern about me; nor ever start back from my mercy, as if I took my Saviour for Satan. If he comfort me, cheerfully should I trust in and cry to him; but never tempt his providence, even through desire to be with him. My staggering though unfailling faith will quickly bewray my rashness, and draw out his sharp but kind rebuke. Thrice happy are they who live near to Jesus, and employ him in

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, SAMARIA—WHERE JOHN THE BAPTIST WAS BEHEADED. [Matthew, xiv:2].—Samaria is the capital built by Omri, the King of Israel, which suffered like Shechem, both being pillaged by John Hyrcanus. It was restored by Gabinius, but nothing remains of the ancient city now. There are many pillars and columns forming a colonnade around the brow of the hill upon which the ancient city was built, but these date from the time of Herod, and are a part of the remains of the temple he built in honor of Augustus. The Church of St. John it is claimed was built over the place where John the Baptist was beheaded. For a long time, it is contended, John was a prisoner here. The weight of historic opinion sustains the claim that this is the identical place where he was beheaded.

THE SEA OF GALILEE, FROM THE WALL OF TIBERIAS. [Matthew, xv: 29.]—The Sea of Galilee has a charm for people above any body of water on earth. It is well known that nearly all the wonderful works of our Savior were performed in sight of this sea. Wherever he journeyed into the surrounding country, the Sea of Galilee was the place to which he returned. He was upon every side of it, and doubtless looked into its blue depths from the top of every hill that stands above and around it. So much do people love the waters of this sea that they gather the shells and the pebbles from its shores to distribute as souvenirs all over the world. The waters are perfectly clear and are always in motion. Storms sudden and terrific arise, falling rather from the surrounding mountains, but they are soon over.

carnal imaginations, contrivances, and designs; hatred, malice, and murder; wanton desires, words, and actions; adultery, fornication, and every other form of uncleanness; covetousness, injuries, cheats, and thefts; lies, falsehood in bearing witness, all evil-speaking, or calumny against men; and blasphemies and profaneness against God and religion. These are the abominable things which render a man unclean and odious before God, unfit for his service, and for communion

30 And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed,⁴ and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them:

31 Inasmuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel.

32 ¶ Then¹ Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days,⁵ and have nothing to eat:⁶ and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.

33 And his disciples say unto him, Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude?

34 And Jesus saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes.

35 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground.

36 And he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

37 And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets full.

38 And they that did eat were four thousand men, beside women and children.

39 And he sent away the multitude, and took ship, and came into the coasts of Magdala.⁸

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The Pharisees require a sign. 5 Jesus warneth his disciples of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees. 13 The people's opinion of Christ, 16 and Peter's confession of him. 21 Jesus foresheweth his own death, 23 reproving Peter for dissuading him from it: 24 and admonisheth those that will follow him, to bear the cross.

THE Pharisees^a also with the Sadducees came, and tempting, desired him that he would show them a sign from heaven.¹

2 He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather; for the sky is red.

3 And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day; for the sky is red and lowering.² O ye hypocrites! ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs³ of the times?⁴

eth after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas.^a And he left them, and departed.

5 ¶ And when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

7 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread.

8 Which when Jesus perceived, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread?

9 Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

10 Neither the seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

11 How is it that ye do not understand, that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?

12 Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

13 ¶ When Jesus came into the coasts of Cesarea Philippi,⁶ he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?

14 And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

18 And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter;⁷ and upon this rock⁸ I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

19 And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and with or enjoyment of him. 24-26. My commission to exercise my personal ministry and perform my miracles was not designed for the immediate benefit of the Gentiles, but of God's covenant people the Jews, who are gone astray and in perishing circumstances; my special blessings belong to this peculiar people; and therefore it is not proper to grant such favours to the Gentiles, who are without the pale of the covenant, and deserve to be treated with neglect and disdain for their impurity and wickedness. 27. I am indeed vile, worthless, and undeserving; yet, as there are blessings enough for the Jews, and to spare for us Gentiles, let me have this one so necessary mercy.

REFLECTIONS.—The contempters of God's laws are ordinarily mad with zeal for the traditions and ceremonies of men.—A certain mark of detestable hypocrisy! All human inventions in religion invade the authority and pollute the worship of God, and mislead the hearts and corrupt the practices of men. May God root them out of his church and out of our heart, that we ourselves may not, on their account, be excluded from his kingdom! How certainly sinners shall be lost and false teachers push themselves and followers hastily into the depths of hell! Yea, none are farther from the light of God's truth than implicit votaries of profane ministers, and especially preachers who are puffed up with a conceit of their own wisdom. How dull, how slow of heart, to conceive the things of practical religion are even real saints! And, alas! what a sink, what a source of abominations, is the human heart! Dreadful and extensive is the defilement which it spreads abroad into the life! And infinitely important and necessary is the purification from it, by the Word, the Spirit, and the blood of Christ!

Kind and honourable are those parents who bring their children to Jesus, and will not be denied his blessings. Graciously he travels to meet distressed sinners; and yet he often tries those most for whom he has the strongest affection, and for whom he intends the most speedy deliverances and most distinguished honours. Strong is the power of faith when he animates and strengthens it under trials. It breaks through every discouragement, and lays hold on the most indirect hints of mercy. And great is the honour it gains in thus honouring Christ. His repeated apparent disregards do but usher in the most advantageous fulfilment of all its requests. And since this world is so full of miseries and wants, let us bring all to Christ, that, to his own glory, he may heal the former and supply the latter.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 3. What amazing blind-

ENTRANCE TO CÆSAREA PHILIPPI. [Matthew, xvi:13.]—Cæsarea Philippi has a population now, perhaps, of a thousand people. These are mostly Turks and Arabs, but there are a few Greeks and Druses. This city is upon the declivity of Mount Hermon. The region here is very fruitful, as well as the plain which lies before it. There is a dense growth of trees. The whole district which is so fertile extends for about two miles west of the town, and is thickly dotted with ruins, stone walls, pillars, capitals, and pedestals—these all, perhaps, coming down from the time of the Romans. On the northeastern side of the present village there is one of the streams which go to make the River Jordan. In the picture we see a part of this stream passing under the stone bridge we cross in going to Cæsarea Philippi.

20 Then^a charged he his disciples, that they should tell no man^b that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 ¶ From that time forth began Jesus to show unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke¹ him, saying, Be it far from thee,² Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, 'Get thee behind me, Satan;³ thou art an offence⁴ unto me; for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 ¶ Then^a said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

25 For^a whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.

26 For^a what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

27 For^a the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

28 Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The transfiguration of Christ. 14 He healeth the lunatic, 22 foretelleth his own passion, 24 and payeth tribute.

AND after^a six days Jesus taketh^b Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart,¹

2 And^a was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

3 And^a, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias, talking with him.²

4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

5 While^a he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and, behold, a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

6 And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

5 There are some points worthy of special note in the persons present at the transfiguration. They were representative men. Moses represented the law; Elias the prophets; Peter, James, and John the apostles, and every section of the Christian church. The two first were typical: both fasted forty days; both had visions of glory in the holy mount; both were removed from earth in a way different from ordinary mortals. Here type and antitype appeared side by side.

ness and obstinacy hinders your discerning, from the ancient prophecies fulfilled in me, and from my numerous miracles, that the Messiah is now come to set up his kingdom among you, and that your ruin is hastening apace for rejecting him! 18, 19. Upon this my person, and the truth which you have confessed concerning it, will I establish my gospel church, in all its ordinances, and believing members, as upon a sure, immovable, and everlasting foundation; and neither the policy nor force of devils or men, nor the power of death, can remove them from it, nor root my interest out of the world. And I will authorize you and your fellow-disciples, and other faithful ministers, in my name, to declare what practices are lawful and what not; and so to charge men with, or acquit them from, guilt in your preaching; and to inflict censures on the scandalous, and absolve the penitent. And whatever is done agreeably to my laws shall be ratified in heaven and confirmed in the last judgment. 20. He prohibited them from declaring that he was the Messiah, lest his enemies should be too early provoked to destroy him; lest his carnal admirers should tumultuously attempt to make him a king; and lest the Jews should beforehand be prejudiced against the testimony of the disciples. 23. In this, actuated by Satan, and serving his interest, you act the part of an adversary to me, from a regard to carnal honour, ease, or pleasure, attempting to rob me and my Father of our intended honour in the salvation of sinners. 24-26. And as I must be perfected by sufferings, every one that heartily resolves to be my disciple must deny his own carnal interests, wisdom, and will, and with faith and patience, and resignation to God's will, readily submit to whatever losses and persecution he may meet with in following my example and obeying my commands; for he that attempts to preserve his temporal enjoyments or life by sinful compliances and apostasy, shall thereby plunge himself into endless destruction; and he that, on account of his faith in or obedience to me, readily parts with his temporal life, shall obtain everlasting life in heaven as his gracious reward; for what could all the riches, honours, and pleasures which this world affords avail a man if, through his inordinate affection to them, he should lose the welfare, peace, and happiness of his immortal soul? or by what could he redeem his soul from the damnation of hell? 27, 28.

For I, who am now attended with all the mean circumstances and sinless infirmities of human nature, will, in the last day, gloriously appear, and adjudge men to eternal life or death, according as their works shall manifest them righteous or wicked; as an earnest of which some of you present shall, before you die, see me appear gloriously transfigured, and powerfully erecting my gospel church in the abolition of ceremonial ordinances, and awfully destroying the city, temple, and nation of the Jews, for their obstinacy and unbelief.

Ver. 4. No sign. That is, such as they demanded; and which, after attributing his heavenly miracles to diabolical agency, they would, with equal infidel effrontery, have certainly rejected.—Note. Rational evidence every man has a right to demand; but he who rejects one rational evidence has no right to require more. C.

Ver. 18. Gates of hell. That councils were often held, and laws administered, in the gates of cities, is unquestionable. The phrase 'gates of hell' has therefore been generally interpreted of the malice and plots of Satan and his agents against our Lord and his church. It seems, however, more natural to understand by it literally the gates of death of the grave, which, though they should apparently conquer and inclose our Lord first, and afterwards all his members, would yet be utterly unable to prevail against his resurrection, and afterwards that of his mystical body, the church, Ep. 1:22. C.

Ver. 19. I will give unto thee the keys. This was a personal promise to Peter, and not extending to the other apostles. He received keys, and not simply a key; because there were two gates to be opened—the Jewish and the Gentile. And the word of our Lord was literally fulfilled when Peter applied the key to the Jewish gate, Ac. 2:14-41; and afterwards when he applied it to the Gentile gate, Ac. 10:1-18; 11:1-18; which opening being once completed, Peter's personal commission to that work necessarily ceased; see Re. 3:7. The remaining part of the commission was common to Peter and the other apostles. See ch. 18:18, where the address is not to Peter alone, but to all the apostles. C.

Ver. 28. The difficulty in this verse will be greatly removed by considering that our Lord does not say 'they will see the Son of man come,' but 'coming in his kingdom'; that is, beginning to 'reward every man according to his works'; which work commenced at the siege and destruction of Jerusalem, his first signal act of visible retribution, when some of his disciples were still alive to witness. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wicked men of every sort heartily unite against Jesus, his interests, and people. And men who condemn sufficient evidence of divine truth generally insist upon more. The wisest with respect to temporal concerns are often quite blind and stupid with respect to what is plain, but spiritual. And it is just that Christ should quickly abandon men who remain obstinate in their unbelief. It is very absurd for the children of God to indulge carnal fears about the necessaries of this life, when his remarkable former interpositions have outdone every expectation or wish. Alas! what diversified and ignorant conceptions of Christ prevail with many church members! But happy are they who are divinely enlightened, united to, and built on him as their sure foundation. No plots, no attempts of hell or earth, can ruin them. All the powers, all the ordinances or officers, which he has granted to his church, concur to their establishment and happiness. His sufferings secured it, and his glories secure it. God lifts up his people and casts them down again. And never are they more ready to stumble than after they have been highly honoured by God. Left but a moment to themselves, they bend under the power of the devil. Maxims of carnal policy, and desires of temporal ease and honour, strongly tempt them to shun hardships in religion. But self-denial and obedient submission to crosses are principal articles in the following of Christ. If we hope to live and reign with him in his kingdom of glory, we must be ready to endure tribulation and death for his sake. To ruin our soul in denying our Redeemer is infinitely criminal and foolish; nor can created enjoyments ever balance or retrieve our loss. Let me then never barter my soul for a few trifles! for if it be once lost, it is lost—it is ruined—for ever! And even the glories of a Saviour will but secure and aggravate my eternal misery.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 17. He here rebukes the father and his disciples for their weakness of faith, and the audience for their obstinate unbelief and readiness to reflect upon him in the weakness of his disciples. 20, 21. By a sincere faith in my power and promise, and through my assistance, ye shall be able to discharge and approve your office in doing things seemingly impossible. But such kind of faith must be exercised in the use of much fervent prayer and humiliation, without which you cannot expect to dislodge devils of so powerful and obstinate a kind as this is.

Ver. 1. Tabor, in the south of Galilee, has been regarded from an early period as the mount of the transfiguration. But it is more probable that it took place in the north of Galilee, as the narrative (comp. ch. 16:13; 17:20) evidently seems to refer to some mountain not far from Cæsarea Philippi, which lay towards the range of Hermon (comp. ch. 16:13; 17:20); and after the transfiguration, it is said (Mar. 9:30, 33) that 'they departed and passed

MOUNT HERMON—WHERE JESUS TOOK JAMES, PETER AND JOHN, AND WAS TRANSFIGURED BEFORE THEM. [Matt., xvii:1.]—Banias Castle is about two miles from Cæsarea Philippi. We are looking toward the north in the photograph, and the mountain we see is Hermon, where Jesus took James, Peter and John, and was transfigured before them. The castle seen has stood there from the days of the Phoenicians. Its situation is remarkable. From its broken walls one may look away across the plains of Lake Huleh to the hills of Galilee. The castle is nearly 1,000 feet long by about 300 feet wide, and the walls in some places are 100 feet high. This is in many respects the most remarkable castle in the world, and has been called the Gibraltar of Palestine. It is now totally abandoned.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man,³ save Jesus only.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus ⁴charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.⁴

10 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that 'Elias must first come?

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias⁵ truly shall first come, and restore⁵ all things.

12 But I say unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. ⁶Likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

14 ¶ And⁷ when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

15 Lord,⁸ have mercy on my son; for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

16 And ⁹I brought him to thy disciples,⁸ and they could not cure him.

17 Then Jesus answered and said, ¹⁰'O faithless and perverse⁷ generation! how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

18 And¹ Jesus rebuked the devil, and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

through Galilee, and then came to Capernaum, on the north of the Sea of Galilee. Had the mountain of transfiguration been in Galilee, would the evangelist have said 'they departed and passed through' it? Would he not have said 'they departed and went to Capernaum'? Besides, it is said, they went up to a mountain apart; whereas Tabor was certainly at the period an inhabited town and fortress, and therefore peculiarly unfitted for retirement. C.

Ver. 3. This appearance gives evidence the most decided to the most comfortable doctrine of recognition of Christian friends in a future state. For if Moses and Elias, who had been utter strangers to them, were yet made known to the disciples, why should the identity of any dear child of God be lost in the multitude of the redeemed? C.

Ver. 15. He is lunatic. That the moon exercises a powerful influence upon some nervous disorders is unquestionable. This effect is generally attributed to her attraction, which is seen to be so powerful as to influence the tides. It is, however, rather more probable that her influence upon disease is merely that of her brilliancy during the night, which irritates the nervous system, produces sleeplessness, and thereby aggravates the symptoms. The symptoms mentioned, Lu. 9. 39, indicate a disease resembling epilepsy; but both there and in ver. 18 the disease is declared to be under the control of a malignant spirit. At this infidels and sceptics may scoff; but what pretensions have they to know anything of the invisible world? When they can cure the disease with a word of rebuke, they may question the Scripture account of its origin. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How mixed was the lot of our Redeemer in this world! How quickly lifted up and cast down again! Now he shines in glory; anon he is plunged into sufferings and death. Now devils and distempers flee before his infinite power and grace; anon he is discredited, or ill understood, by weak disciples, and despised by faithless and perverse Jews. Possessed of all the fulness of Godhead—of all the riches of heaven and earth—he humbly, but miraculously, borrows his tribute-money from a fish, to avoid giving offence. But his resurrection from the dead wiped away all his reproach, and rendered illustrious his deepest debasement. If Moses and Elias have, in solemn manner, resigned to him all their powers and honours, let me hear him as my great, my only divine prophet! Let me rejoice in his dearness to God, and exalted dominion over men! Let me lift up my heart, and retire from the world, to hold fellowship with him, and prolong his visits to the utmost! Let no danger, no guilt, terrify my heart, while I enjoy the great Propitiation and Saviour! If the choicest saints forsake me, it is enough that Jesus remains to comfort me. Ravishing discoveries of him on earth are indeed but short-lived; and suffering is the certain fate of all his followers. I must return to depths of temptation, desertion, and trouble, in which my fellow-Christians have often laboriously struggled with stubborn devils and indwelling lusts. But if I or my friends experience their uncommon cruelty, let me, with fervour and humility, supplicate Jesus for relief. And let want or weakness of faith, which mar my duty and obstruct my mercies, be the grief, the burden, the detestation of my heart. And while through manifold tribulations I follow him to his kingdom and glory, let me carefully avoid whatever could prejudice others against him, his doctrines, or ways. It is better to waive my right and open my purse than dishonour my Redeemer.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1-6. His disciples having contended which of them should be preferred to the highest places of honour and trust in the temporal kingdom, which they imagined he would quickly set up, Jesus presented a little child before them, and told them that unless their minds were graciously weaned from such carnal ambition, and rendered truly humble, after the appearance of that child, they could neither be members nor honoured officers in his gospel kingdom, nor be admitted into the glories of the heavenly state; and that whoever of them affectionately regarded any of his humble, however mean, disciples, as such, should be esteemed as honouring himself; and that whoever should dishearten such weak but humble believers, and cause them to stumble into sin, should be exposed to the most certain and fearful punishments. 7-9. Dreadful hurt shall the world sustain through the corrupt opinions and practices by which Satan and his instruments will attempt to discourage, injure, and insare weak believers; but most dreadful shall be the punishment of that man whose sinful and mischievous behaviour perverts and draws others into evil. If therefore anything, however useful or dear to you, tend to make you injure the cause of truth, peace, and holiness, to the grieving or tempting of my people, it would be much better for you to part with it, by the most self-denying and painful mortification, than, by indulging it, to hazard your own eternal damnation. 10-14. It is infinitely criminal and dangerous to condemn or discourage weak believers, whom the angels of God, on all occasions, watch over and minister unto; whom the Son of God came to save from the depths of ruin, and takes an especial pleasure in preserving and recovering when they have gone astray; and whom the Father, with all means of grace, seeks to make eternally happy. 15-17. If any of your fellow-professors of the true religion, by any sinful conduct, grieve or tempt you to sin, deal freely with him in a secret manner, in order to render him duly sensible of and penitent for it; and if he appear so, with joy renew your affection, and conceal his transgressions from others. If he appear obstinate, take one or two pru-

MILL NEAR THE WATERS OF MEROM. [Matt., 18.]—As Jesus returned from Cæsarea Philippi He would come down on the western shore of the Jordan, and thus would pass the scene we give in the above photograph. An old mill is always picturesque, and when we take this in connection with the water, the cattle standing in it, coupled with its great historic significance, the effect is greatly height-ended. And then when, in addition to the elements which go to make a good picture, we remember that it is a spot our Savior witnessed and in the historic country where He lived, the interest is increased. In the region where this mill is situated the Bedouins live, and these cattle belong to them. The Bedouins are the wild children of nature, and are often kind and hospitable to strangers. Many of them are rich.

2 And Jesus called ^aa little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

3 And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 Whosoever^d therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And ^ewhoso shall receive one such little child² in my name, receiveth me.

6 But^f whoso shall offend³ one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone⁴ were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 ¶ Woe^h unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come:⁵ but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!

8 Wherefore,⁶ if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than, having two hands or two feet, to be cast into everlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enterⁱ into life with one eye, rather than, having two ^jeyes, to be cast into hell-fire.

10 ¶ Take^k heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven ^ltheir angels do always behold the ^mface of my Father which is in heaven.⁷

11 Forⁿ the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 How^o think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

13 And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he ^prejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even ^qso it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones⁸ should perish.

15 ¶ Moreover, ^rif thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in ^sthe mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell

² This is an evident allusion to the constitution and discipline of the Jewish synagogue, as is testified by the Talmud. This discipline was specially applied in cases where the law made no direct provision—of which, amongst other cases, Manu-nials gives the following:—'If any refuse to feed his children, they reprove, they shame, they urge him—they make proclamation against him in the synagogue:—"A. B. is a cruel man, and will not feed his children—more cruel than the unclean birds, for they nourish their young ones."—C.

⁵ A regular assembly of believers, was to be consulted in such cases, and its decision, solemnly and prayerfully come to, was to be considered final.

23 Therefore is the kingdom of ^gheaven likened unto a ^hcertain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ⁱten thousand talents.⁵

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, ^jhis lord commanded him to be sold, and his ^kwife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

26 The servant therefore fell down, and worshipped him,⁷ saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant ^lwas moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants which owed him an hundred pence;⁸ and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

29 And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, ^mHave patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

30 And he would not: but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry,⁹ and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, ⁿO thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

dent Christians along with you, and deal earnestly and plainly with his conscience, to render him penitent. If he still continue obstinate in his sin, lay his case before that church judicatory to which he is immediately subjected; and if, notwithstanding all they can do to convince and reclaim him, he still continue obstinate, let him be solemnly cast out of the church by excommunication; and let all her members avoid all unnecessary fellowship with him, even in civil things, that he may be ashamed, and made to consider his conduct. 18–20. And that the censures may be confirmed and ratified by me and my Father, it is necessary that they be regularly passed in my name, and carried on with much fervent prayer. 23–35. The scope of this parable is to represent that nothing is more base, criminal, and dangerous than for such as profess to believe God's remission of all their high crimes against him to resent the petty injuries done to themselves; and that, though the revengefulness of believers shall not be punished with eternal damnation, it will expose them to fearful chastisements in this life.

1 Christ healeth the sick: 3 answereth the question of the Pharisees concerning divorce: 10 sheweth when marriage is necessary: 13 receiveth little children: 16 instructeth a young man how to attain eternal life, 20 and how to be perfect: 23 telleth his disciples how hard it is for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God, 27 and promiseth great rewards to those that forsake anything to follow him.

Hence 'the bowels' denoted compassion; 'the heart,' love; 'an evil eye,' envy (Mat. 20.15), covetousness, or other unlawful desire, 1 Jn. 2.16. Hence 'the hand' and 'the foot' were used to signify all the powers of walking and of movement. 'To cut off,' or 'pluck out,' is, therefore, to mortify, through the Spirit, those several 'deeds of the body,' that we may live to God. C.

Ver. 25. There does not appear in Scripture any instance of a man sold for payment of his debts. A man, however, might sell himself, Ex. 21.2, 6; Le. 25.47; and if a debtor could not pay, the creditor might appropriate his service, but could not sell him. The sale authorized (Ex. 22.2) is not of a debtor, but a thief who could not pay the legal fine. Unless, therefore, the law imply that the right which a creditor acquired over the person and services of his debtor he might transfer to another, as he might his other properties, this case must be understood not as an illustration taken from the law of Moses, but from the practice of eastern monarchs, whose will is the only law. And this last supposition is rendered probable, if not confirmed, by our Lord's reference to 'the kings of the earth,' ch. 17.25. C.

REFLECTIONS.—An eager ambition after worldly honour is very unlike the disciples and kingdom of Christ. And there is great need of a daily conversion to God from the errors of our way. What tender care Jesus takes of his saints, especially if weak and humble! His angels watch over, protect, and minister to them. At his Father's commandment he died for them, and seeks them out when they wander. He hears their prayers, and attends their societies. It is inexpressibly dangerous to grieve their hearts or to make them stumble into sin, or for them to indulge any darling corruption. But it is very base and criminal for Christians to pay so little regard to their God and their Saviour's rules for removing of scandals; and to be more careful to render an offender infamous than to bring him to repentance. Thrice happy are the churches where these rules are attended to without passion or prejudice, and with a readiness to forgive. Awful are church censures when regularly passed; and heinous is their guilt, and infinite their danger, who dare wilfully incur, or profanely despise, what is ratified in heaven. How inconceivably great and many are our offences against God! He keeps an exact account of them all, in every circumstance of them! And infinite is the mercy of a reprieve, and especially of a redemption, from their awful consequences in hell. But detestable both to God and men is a revengeful temper or conduct in a professed Christian; and such may expect great plagues and sorrow because of sin in eternity.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 17. Why do ye call me good in this emphatic manner when you conceive me to be a mere man? There is none good in and from himself but God alone. But if you desire to work righteousness in order to procure a title to eternal life, you must perfectly keep all the commandments of God. 21. To mark your perfect love to your neighbour, and that your affections are weaned from earthly enjoyments, go sell your whole estate, and give it to the poor in these distressing times, and come and follow me in my poverty and sufferings. 22-30. Ye who, through the regenerating influences of my Spirit, have attended and assisted me in my attempts to reform the nation, and introduce the gospel dispensation, shall, upon my ascension to heaven, be honoured with the distinguished effusion of the Holy Ghost, to render you leading officers in founding the gospel church; and in my appearing to destroy Jerusalem your predictions shall be fulfilled and your characters vindicated. In the latter days your Jewish brethren shall be converted by your doctrines; and in the last judgment ye shall be most honoured approvers of the sentence which I shall pass according to my gospel dispensed by you. And all they who conscientiously suffer losses in their temporal interests or enjoyments for my sake, shall in this life have their losses graciously compensated, to their unspeakable advantage, in inward contentment and divine consolations and hopes, if not in other external comforts, and in eternal glories in the future state. And yet, to manifest the glory of redeeming grace in all this, many Jews who are first called, and apparently more fitted to receive me, shall be rejected, for their unbelief; while the Gentile strangers to the covenants of promise shall, through faith, be admitted to all the blessings of my kingdom of grace and glory. And even some Jews, more early converted, shall have less honour or usefulness in my church than some Gentiles who shall be afterwards influenced to believe.

Ver. 3. About the time of our Saviour there arose two famous schools of the law at Jerusalem—those of Hillel and Shammai. That of Shammai taught that divorce was unlawful except for adultery; while the more popular school of Hillel authorized divorce for any cause, even the mere will of the husband. C.

Ver. 8. Moses, in the law, did not command a dissatisfied husband to divorce and put away a wife, as the Pharisees insinuate, but merely suffered it to be done, saying, 'let him'—not as an authoritative sanction and indulgence to caprice or passion, neither as an approval of the act or pardon of the sin, but as a mere temporary reprieve or stay of judgment, that happily might eventually, through grace, in softening the hardened heart. C.

Ver. 9. As Moses (De. 24.1) suffered the dissatisfied husband to put away the wife, so (De. 24.2) he suffered the divorced wife to marry again, saying, 'she may.' Our Lord, however, having denied expressly the existence of any command in favour of the husband, equally denies it in favour of the wife, and pronounces both equally guilty in the sight of God; while to the wife is extended neither approval of the act nor pardon of the sin, but the mere temporary reprieve and stay of judgment previously conceded to the hard-hearted husband. C.

Ver. 17. Why callest thou me good? You call me 'Master,' thereby showing you believe me a mere man. Why then call me good, a title that legitimately belongs to God alone? If, therefore, I be really good, I must be 'God manifest in the flesh.' But Jesus calls himself 'good,' Jn. 10.14, therefore, by his own argument, he must be God. C.

Ver. 21. If thou wilt be perfect in character, renounce the world which you love, and your legal righteousness wherein you trust, and 'follow me'—the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. C.

Ver. 24. Some, for camel, read camel, the Greek words differing but in one letter; but this change is without any sufficient authority. The meaning is simply this: The matter is naturally impossible while the camel lives. To effect it by artificial means were the camel dead would not, to the chemist, be a task of difficulty. Even so while the rich man lives in the love of the world his entrance into the kingdom of heaven is a natural impossibility.

him, Good Master, 'what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: 'but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou^a shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness;

19 Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

20 The young man saith unto him, 'All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?¹

21 Jesus said unto him, 'If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me.

22 But when the young man heard that saying, 'he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, 'That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24 And again I say unto you, 'It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25 When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With^a men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.²

But as soon as 'by the cross of Christ he is crucified (and thereby dead) to the world,' his entrance into that kingdom is not only possible but secure. See ver. 26. C.

Ver. 28. A change in the punctuation, which the original warrants, and the sense seems to demand, would render the passage thus: 'Ye who have followed me, in the regeneration (the time of final restoration to glory) when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit on twelve thrones,' &c. That some eminent expositors understand by 'the regeneration' the present gospel state, is not to be forgotten; but that it refers to a state still future seems certain from the fact that, in 'the regeneration' described, the apostles are, in some sense, to be changed from witnesses to judges, and, as such, to sit on twelve thrones hitherto fulfilled, and for the accomplishment of which we must therefore look to futurity. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Indefatigable was the gracious Redeemer in doing good wherever he came; prudent in avoiding the snares of his malicious enemies; careful to honour, regulate, and perpetuate every divine institution which related to the raising up of a holy seed in his church; and delighted with the early and earnest dedication of children to himself. It is cruel, then, to deprive young subjects of his kingdom of the seal of his covenant; and criminal to pretend that his incarnation, labours, and glory abridge the privileges of his people. Very important and necessary is a deep concern about the true way to everlasting life; nor can it be obtained but by a perfect righteousness, answerable to the whole law of God; and where can this be found but in Christ? Alas! that multitudes should hope to find it in their own works! and yet those who highly extol and heartily trust in their good works very seldom remarkably abound in them. And their defect quickly appears if they be tried in what lies opposite to their carnal inclinations and interests. The riches and love of this world are most powerful hindrances to our care about or progress towards heaven; and only almighty grace can conquer the heart and remove the difficulty.—In faithfully following Christ, we must expect manifold losses and troubles in this world. But if we undergo them from love to him, his truths and ways, his blessings here and glory hereafter will inexpressibly more than compensate. And whether we be first or last in time or in dignity, all must be regulated by the exceeding riches of his grace.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 1-16. The vineyard here is the church, formed by infinite wisdom, power, and grace, from the world that lieth in wickedness, and furnished with divine oracles, ordinances, and officers; hedged about by God's special protection, government, and discipline, and cultivated by his Spirit, ministers, and people. The 3d, 6th, 9th, and 11th hours, may represent the patriarchal, Mosaic, apostolic, and millennial periods of the church; or the periods of human life, childhood, youth, middle, and old age, in which different persons are called and converted to Christ, that they may serve him in his church. But as the kingdom of heaven chiefly denotes the gospel church, the 3d, 6th, and 9th hours chiefly denote those periods in which the Jews were called and converted by the ministry of John and Christ, or of his apostles for some years after his ascension. The 11th hour may denote that period in which the Gentiles have, or shall be, converted to Christ by the apostles and other gospel ministers, after they had been for many ages abandoned to idolatries, and destitute of the ordinances and calls of the gospel. The penny of reward denotes all the privileges of the gospel church, and all the blessings of grace and glory. At God's giving these to the Gentiles equally as to themselves, who had been long the peculiar people of God, and who had long served him in burdensome ceremonies, the Jews, and even the real converts among them, exceedingly murmured—not considering that all the favours of God spring entirely from his own free grace; and that many are outwardly

1 Here is the spirit of formalism which prevailed so largely among the Jews fully developed. By conformity to the outward requirements of the law the young man had almost succeeded in deceiving himself: yet conscience was not satisfied. He felt he lacked something more; hence his question: 'What good thing shall I do?' Our Lord's first object was to convince him of the inherent sinfulness of his heart; and in this he succeeded.—P.

8 The grand fundamental doctrine, salvation by grace, is here declared by our Lord. By man's power the corrupt heart cannot be renewed, the worldly disposition cannot be overcome, the dead soul cannot be revived; but with God all things are possible: 'You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins.'—P.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Christ, by the similitude of the labourers in the vineyard, sheweth that God is debtor unto no man: 17 foretelleth his passion: 20 by answering the mother of Zebedee's children teacheth his disciples to be lowly: 29 and giveth two blind men their sight.

FOR the^a kingdom of heaven is like unto^a a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire^a labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when^a he had agreed with the labourers for a penny¹ a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the third² hour, and saw others standing idle³ in the market-place,

4 And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right, I will give you. And they went their way.

called by the ministry of the gospel, and made members of the visible church, who fall short, through their self-conceit and unbelief, while few are chosen of God to eternal life, because few continue faithful to the end. 21-23. Let my sons, who are now thy constant favourites, be next in honour and authority to thyself in that kingdom which thou art about to erect. Jesus replied that they appeared quite ignorant of the nature and honours of his kingdom, and that they must expect terrible persecutions, reproaches, and distresses, as he himself had or should suffer; but that all the honours of his kingdom would be conferred by him upon those who were faithful in life and work. 24-28. The other ten apostles being filled with envy and resentment against the two brothers for attempting to procure a pre-eminence above themselves, Jesus meekly reproved them altogether, and told them that a carnal and heathenish ambition for lordly dominion over others was very contrary to the nature and design of his spiritual kingdom; and that their only proper way to become truly great and honourable in his church was to be most humble, self-denied, and active in doing even the meanest services for the benefit of others; even as he himself, notwithstanding his infinite glory, had come into this world to submit to the meanest services, and even an ignominious death, for the redemption of the race of poor sinners.

Ver. 20. The mother of Zebedee's children. Her name was Salome, as appears from Mat. 27.56; comp. with Mar. 15.40. She is not called Zebedee's wife; he was therefore most probably dead. Her sons were James and John, Mar. 10.35. She presents the character of an ambitious but affectionate mother, who seems to have trained her sons to her own high aspirations; for they evidently join with her (ver. 22) and assert their ability to fulfil the conditions of their elevation, though as yet totally ignorant of their nature, and, as their own experience demonstrated (Mat. 26.56), sadly unfitted for the task.—Note. Men of ardent and aspiring minds, when subdued by grace, do not altogether lose

FOUNTAIN OF THE APOSTLES—WHERE CHRIST PASSED, RESTED AND DRANK. [Matt., xx:17.]—"And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way and said to them, Behold we go up to Jerusalem." When Jesus uttered these words he was on His way to Jerusalem. He was beyond the Jordan and was to come through Jericho. The Fountain of the Apostles is between Jericho and Jerusalem, and about four miles from the Holy City. It is one of the places that we may be absolutely sure Jesus passed, for the road from Jerusalem to Jericho has not changed, and this fountain is so necessary as a place to get water in the Judean mountains that we may know that Christ not only passed here, but often rested and drank water here. Here the sheik furnishes a guide to conduct travelers to Jericho.

6 And about the eleventh hour⁵ he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, 'Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, 'Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when 'even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the 'eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more: and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they 'murmured' against the goodman of the house, 12 Saying, These last 'have wrought but one hour,' and thou hast made them equal unto us, 'which have borne the burden and heat of the day.

13 But he answered one of them, and said, Friend,⁶ I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and 'go thy way: I will give unto this last even as unto thee.

15 Is⁷ it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? 'Is thine eye evil, because I am good?⁸

16 So⁹ the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.¹⁰

17 ¶ And Jesus going up to Jerusalem, 'took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 Behold, 'we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, 19 And shall 'deliver him to the Gentiles, to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 ¶ Then¹¹ came to him the mother¹² of Zebedee's children, with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou?

9 Crotius and other highest authorities allow that ἐλλὰς, when, as in this case, it is not followed by a verb, but by a noun or pronoun, is equivalent to ἐμὴ, ex-cepti, unles, save.

Thus, ἐλλὰς in Mar. 9.8-11. ἐμὴ in Mat. 17.8. The meaning therefore is:—'To sit on my right hand and my left it is not mine arbitrarily to confer upon any favourites, but judiciously upon those who are worthy of grace for whom it is prepared by my Father.' C.—The words ought to be translated, 'is not mine to give, except to those for whom it is prepared of my Father.'—P.

She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left,⁴ in⁵ thy kingdom.

22 But Jesus answered and said, 'Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink 'of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, 'We are able.

23 And he saith unto them, 'Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with; but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them 'for whom it is prepared of my Father.⁵

24 And⁶ when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 But⁷ it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;⁸

27 And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant:

28 Even⁹ as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom⁷ for many.⁸

29 ¶ And¹ as they departed² from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

30 And, behold, 'two blind men, sitting by the way-side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, 'O Lord, thou Son of David!

31 And¹ the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David!

32 And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What 'will ye that I shall do unto you?

33 They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened.

34 So¹ Jesus had compassion on them, 'and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

their original character, but have their desires and energies directed to new and better objects. Hence these ambitious sons of an ambitious mother became faithful apostles and glorious martyrs. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Free and constant is the redeeming grace of God; the most unlikely are often converted because God in his mercy seeks to save all. And the latest called and converted often attain the highest privileges of grace and glory; while others, who seemed to stand fair for them, fall short. But all have the same opportunity, it is a gift of free grace! Gospel hearers have great need to take heed, and to strive to enter in at the strait gate, when the conditions are such that all must strive who enter in! While I enjoy my life, and have the offers of salvation, let me flee to the once suffering but now exalted Redeemer for relief! In old age I may perhaps be converted; but after death it is impossible—all is then lost for ever! Alas! that the followers of the lowly and suffering Jesus should so indulge themselves in carnal imaginations and worldly ambition; and that clergymen, by their pride, should so plague that church which he hath secured by his blood, and taught humility by his example! Let me vie with others in humility, holiness, and usefulness, and in patient suffering, in hopes of a crown of life. Deeply sensible of my malady, let me always apply to Jesus Christ for relief. Confident faith, deep humility, and fervent prayer never return from him without a gracious answer. And the more he does for me, let me cleave the closer to his Word, his Spirit, his person, his example, his ordinances, and cause.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 13. By their merchandise in the temple they robbed God of his due honour, and at the same time they defrauded their neighbours in their dealings with them. 19-22. This tree represents the Jews, who made great professions of their regard to God, and readiness to receive the Messiah, but nevertheless brought forth no good fruits of faith or holiness; wherefore our Redeemer, by his curse, quickly ejected them from their church state, and rendered them fearfully miserable. 28-32. The first of these sons represents the notorious sinners of the Gentiles, who, after long professed rebellion against God, their Creator and Preserver, did at last repent and turn to the Lord by the gospel: and the second represents the Jews, who, notwithstanding their high professions of readiness to serve God, did not believe in his Son, nor bring forth good works. 33-41, 43. This vineyard denotes the church state given to the Jews, furnished with God's oracles, ordinances, protection, and privileges. After withdrawing from them the cloudy pillar and other miraculous tokens of his presence, he sent his prophets to remind them of their duty, direct them

VIEW OF JERICO—WHERE OUR SAVIOR HEALED THE TWO BLIND MEN. [Matt., xx:30.]—No place on earth has had more changes than Jericho. Here the Israelites first came under Joshua when they crossed the Jordan from their wanderings. Under Pompey Jericho was destroyed. At the time of Herod and Cleopatra it was rebuilt as a magnificent city of palaces, castles and theaters. It was again destroyed by Vespasian, and subsequently rebuilt as a garrison city for the tenth legion. Here resided the Byzantine bishops, and here were churches and convents under the reign of the Emperor Justinian. Here the Christian Crusaders came, causing the gardens to bloom and again become fertile. Here our Savior healed the two blind men that were sitting by the way as He passed, and here John the Baptist lived.

THE GOLDEN GATE—THROUGH WHICH OUR SAVIOR PASSED. [Matt., xxi:1.]—The Golden Gate is in the eastern wall of Jerusalem. It looks toward the Mount of Olives. In the first verse of the 21st chapter of Matthew, we have an account of the triumphant entry of our Savior from the Mount of Olives through this gate. It is now closed up. The Mahometans have a tradition to the effect that foreigners will some day capture Jerusalem and enter the city through this gate. Two columns of this gate are said by Moslems to have been brought on her shoulders by the Queen of Sheba as a present to King Solomon. Through this gate the Moslems think the good at the last day will pass on their way to the houris of Paradise after having safely crossed the Kedron on that bridge which is sharper than the sharpest sword.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Christ rideth into Jerusalem upon an ass, 12 driveth the buyers and sellers out of the temple, 17 curseth the fig-tree, 23 putteth to silence the priests and elders, 28 and rebuketh them by the similitude of the two sons, 33 and the husbandmen, who slew such as were sent unto them.

AND when^a they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage,¹ unto the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples,

2 Saying unto them, Go into the village over against you,² and straightway ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her: loose them, and bring them unto me.

3 And if any man say ought unto you, ye shall say, 'The Lord hath need of them,'³ and straightway he will send them.

4 All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying,

5 Tell^c ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.⁴

6 And^d the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them,

7 And brought the ass, and the colt, and put on them their clothes, and they set him thereon.⁵

8 And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way.

9 And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: 'Hosanna in the highest!'

10 And^e when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this?

11 And the multitude said, This is Jesus, the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

12 ¶ And Jesus went into the temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

13 And said unto them, It is written, 'My house shall be called the house of prayer; 'but ye have made it a den of thieves.'⁶

14 And^f the blind and the lame came to him in the temple; and he healed them.

have stood close to-seems probable that they were names for different quarters of from its palm-trees;

the other Bethphage,

'house of figs', from ancient village—this is doubtless the place here referred to where the ass was 19 In this miracle is embodied a solemn lesson. The disciples had just witnessed the sad effects of a cold and heartless formalism. While men frequented the temple of God, and professed to perform sacred duties, while they made those duties the occasion of fraud. Our Lord

drew the dishonest dealers out of the temple. He wished to show that such acts could not be tolerated; and to impress more deeply the lesson of the disciples and of mankind, he cursed the fig-tree which had leave but no fruit.

This miracle was in fact an acted parable.—P.

THE MOSQUE OF OMAR, JERUSALEM. [Matt., xxi:28.]—The square upon which the Mosque of Omar stands contains thirty-five acres. Here stood the court, the palaces and the temple of Solomon, the temporary and inferior temple built by Nehemiah, and the gorgeous and magnificent temple built by Herod. The rock, sixty feet one way and fifty feet the other, over which rises the dome of the Mosque of Omar, is the most interesting spot in the world. Here Melchizedek offered sacrifice; here Abraham was about to offer Isaac; here Jacob saw the ladder leading up to heaven; here was the threshing floor of Araunah, the Jebusite; here was the site of an "Altar for the burnt offering of Israel," upon which David sacrificed, and here was the altar of the temples of Solomon. Zerubbabel and Herod.

29 He¹ answered and said, I will not; ²but afterward he repented, and went.

30 And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir; and went not.

31 Whether of them twain did the will of his father? ¹They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, ²That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.

32 For ¹John came unto you in the way of righteousness, ²and ye believed him not; but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, ³when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, ⁴that ye might believe him.

33 ¹Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, ²which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, ³and went into a far country:

34 And when the time of the fruit drew near, he ¹sent his servants to the husbandmen, that ²they might receive the fruits ³of it.

35 And ¹the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, ²and killed another, and stoned another.

36 Again, he sent other servants more ³than the first: and they did unto them likewise.

37 But, last of all, he ¹sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

38 But ¹when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39 And ¹they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41 They say unto him, ¹He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and ²will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him ³the fruits in their seasons.

g Two classes are represented: 1. Those who simply neglected the truth. They were occupied with the world. They preferred business to religion. Whatever their occupations were, whether merchants, politicians, soldiers, literary men—they deemed them more important than the service of God. 2. Those who opposed the truth. The truth did not accord with their prejudices; it condemned their vicious habits; it tended to overthrow their tyranny; they therefore met it as open enemies, and tried to crush it by open force. The sequel shows the final triumph of God's cause in spite of neglect on the one hand, and persecution on the other.—P.

read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is 'marvellous in our eyes?'

43 Therefore say I unto you, 'The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The parable of the marriage of the king's son. 9 The vocation of the Gentiles. 12 The punishment of him that wanted the wedding-garment. 15 Tribute ought to be paid to Caesar. 23 Christ confute the Sadducees, who questioned him touching the resurrection: 34 answereth the lawyer, which is the first and great commandment: 41 and proposeth to the Pharisees a knotty question concerning Christ.

AND Jesus answered ¹and spake unto them again by parables, and said,

2 The¹ kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

3 And sent forth ¹his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.

4 Again, he sent forth ¹other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage.

5 But ¹they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise:

6 And ¹the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.¹

7 But ¹when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wedding serve God—but who repented at the preaching of John, and believed in our Lord for salvation. The second, the 'chief priests and elders,' ver. 23, who, from their youth, had been professors of religion, but who, 'counting themselves righteous,' rejected 'the righteousness of God,' and denied and crucified the Lord of life and glory. C.

Ver. 44. Whosoever shall fall upon this stone (as the Jews stumbled at the humiliated condition of Christ, and so rejected him) shall be broken rather, bruised: but on whomsoever it shall fall (when the long-suffering of God comes to an end, and he rises terribly to judgment), it will grind him to powder—rather, 'he shall be driven away as chaff from a winnowing-fan.' See Ps. 1. 4. All which things were fulfilled on the Jewish nation, who were first bruised in their own land, then utterly dispersed throughout the earth. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Let me at once behold in Jesus the omniscient, the all-commanding, the temple-purifying, the miracle-working God; and the weak man, pinched with poverty and hunger! Yea, the true Messiah riding on an ass, attended with shouts of salvation in order to die for the people! But what ignorant and diversified views men have of him! And how is the church of God often corrupted, and her ordinances profaned, while they, who ought to reform others, hate to be reformed, or to hear of others more devout than themselves, or to see God perform his promises to, and glorify his Son! Yea, careless clergymen are apt to oppose every faithful administration of the truth, unless shame or fear restrain them. And the most ignorant and notorious sinners are frequently turned to the Lord and his ways, when forward professors draw back unto their everlasting perdition. But if God bestow his means of salvation upon men, he will demand their careful improvement of them. And if his ministers be contemned and persecuted, he will unchurch the persecutors at last, and put others in their room. Yea, let men trample the Redeemer under foot as they may, God will cause him to be highly exalted, and made the Connector and glory of his church. If men will not bow to the outstretched sceptre of his grace, they must, self-condemned, fearfully perish under the weight of his wrath. And awful is the prospect when faithful reproofs do but exasperate the reprov'd: and when God must make the awe of inferiors restrain the rage of persecuting superiors.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 1-14. The marriage-feast denotes the gospel dispensation, in which Jesus Christ, as the Bridegroom of souls, and all the rich fulness of God in him, are offered by God to sinful men. The servants are John Baptist, Christ, and his apostles and ministers, who invite and encourage men to receive the same. All things were ready when Christ had suffered, risen again, and ascended to glory, and the Holy Ghost was poured out in a plentiful and miraculous manner. The refusers and contemners of the feast, and murderers of the messengers, are the Jews, who not only rejected the offers of the gospel, but persecuted and murdered the preachers of it; and on that account their cities and temple were soon afterwards burned, themselves murdered in multitudes, their land desolated, and their constitution, in both church and state, miserably broken to pieces. Those called from the highways are the sinful Gentiles of every rank and condition, or greater and lesser sinners, who, by the preaching of the gospel, are invited and converted to Christ and his church. The man without the wedding-garment denotes hypocritical professors, who take their place as members of the church without receiving Christ and his righteousness, or being renewed in holiness after his image; and whose end will be redoubled and everlasting destruction. 20, 21. Since, by your using the Roman em-is ready, but 'they which were bidden were not worthy.

9 Go^d ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 So^d those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11 And when the king 'came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on aⁿ wedding-garment:

12 And he saith unto him, 'Friend, 'how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding-garment? And he was 'speechless.

13 Then said the king to the servants, 'Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him unto outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 For^d many are called, but few are chosen.³

15 ¶ Then^d went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples, with the 'Herodians, saying, 'Master, we know that thou art true, and 'teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men.

17 Tell^d us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?

18 But 'Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why 'tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?⁴

19 Show me the tribute-money. And they brought unto him a penny.⁵

20 And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription?⁶

21 They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, 'Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's.

22 When they had heard these words, they marvelled,⁷ and left him, and went their way.

23 ¶ The^d same day came to him the Sadducees, which say that there is no resurrection, and asked him, 24 Saying, Master, 'Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

25 Now there were with us seven brethren:

Jesus Christ: by others, as 'the believer's robe of personal righteousness.' While others 'see no reason for clothing either.' Now that it must include 'the righteousness of God, which is unto and upon all them that believe,' is certain: but before it can be understood of the personal righteousness of any believer, it is necessary to inquire what 'personal righteousness,' as distinct from 'the righteousness of God,' can possibly mean. In truth, it has neither meaning nor existence. The only righteousness of a believer is the righteousness of God. The personal righteousness of a sinner, like the personal riches of a pauper, is an absolute contradiction in terms.—C.

and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother:

26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh.

27 And last of all the woman died also.

28 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, 'not knowing the scriptures, 'nor the power of God.

30 For 'in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.

31 But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, 32 I^d am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

33 And 'when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

34 ¶ But^d when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

35 Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, 36 Master,^a which is the great commandment in the law?

37 Jesus said unto him, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart,⁷ and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

38 This is the first and great commandment.

39 And the second is like unto it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

40 On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.⁸

41 ¶ While^d the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, 42 Saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, 'The son of David.

43 He saith unto them, How then doth David 'in spirit⁹ call him Lord, saying, 44 The^d LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool?

45 If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?¹

peror's money, ye have acknowledged yourselves his subjects, therefore ye ought, in civil concerns, to return him the tribute of that which, by the authority and protection of his government, ye receive from him; as well as in religious concerns to render unto God the homage and acknowledgments which are due to him as Lord of all. 31, 32. God's calling himself the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, after they had been long dead, plainly imported that they continued still the sons of God, waiting for the redemption of their bodies; and that their bodies, which still remained in covenant with him, as well as their souls, could not be suffered always to abide in a state of death. 40. These two commandments include the substance of the whole moral law, which is fundamental to all true religion. They include the whole natural law, which was originally written in the heart of man;

the obligation of which can never be dissolved, and which all the revelations of God are founded on, and designed to enforce. 46. The scribes and Pharisees were either ignorant or unwilling to acknowledge that the Messiah, who, in his human nature, was a descendant of David, in his divine nature was God over all.

Ver. 3. 'The carnal mind,' in its 'enmity against God,' is here represented (ver. 3, 5, 6) under four aspects:—1. They would not—the human will being set up against the will of God. 2. In levity and neglect, they made light of it, ver. 5. 3. In preference of earthly to heavenly things, ver. 5, they went 'one to his farm,' &c. 4. In rebellious persecution of God's servants, ver. 6. All which things were not only exemplified by the Jews, but have continued among the Gentiles till this day. C.

Ver. 16. The Herodians were certain political partisans of Herod, to whom, as an Idumean and Sadducee, the Pharisees were directly opposed. But in opposition to Christ these extremes are made to coalesce.—Note. Thus in these very days Popery and infidelity—implicit faith and no faith—are seen to unite in determined opposition to evangelical truth! C.

Ver. 28. The object of the Sadducees is to show the absurdity of a future state, by producing what they conceive an insuperable difficulty—a difficulty which our Lord solves with a readiness that humbles their pride of intellect, though it does not soften the hardness of their heart. C.

Ver. 32. Our Lord's argument is this: You admit the being of a God—a living God—the God of living men. But God called himself the God of Abraham, &c., long after Abraham's body was dead, therefore the soul of Abraham must have been still alive, since the living God continues to acknowledge him for his servant and friend. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinite is the mercy of God in making a new covenant and New Testament dispensation of his grace for sinners of mankind; and that his invitations to partake of it are so unlimited, earnest, and so often repeated! Fearful then is their guilt, and dreadful their punishment, who decline his offers, persecute his ministers, or presume to be Christians without the saving power of Jesus and his grace 46 And^a no man was able to answer him a word; neither durst any man, from that day forth, ask him any more questions.

CHAPTER XXIII.

¹ Christ exhorteth the people to follow the good doctrine, not the evil examples, of the scribes and Pharisees. ⁵ His disciples must beware of their ambition. ¹³ He denounceth divers woes against their hypocrisy and blindness: ³⁴ and prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem.

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, ¹The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat:²

3 All^a therefore whatsoever they bid you³ observe, that observe and do; ^bbut do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

4 For^a they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But^a all their works they do for to be seen of men: ^athey make broad their phylacteries,⁵ and enlarge the borders of their garments,

6 And^a love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7 And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.⁶

8 But^a be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father⁷ upon the earth: ^afor one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters:⁸ for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But^a he that is greatest among you, shall be your servant.

12 And^a whosoever shall exalt himself, shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself, shall be exalted.

13 ¶ But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ^aye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses,¹ and for a pretence make long prayer:² therefore ye shall receive the ^agreater damnation.

15 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, implanted in their souls. Why should we dissemble before the all-seeing Redeemer? Rather let us tremble to reflect, that all men are called to salvation, yet so few heed the call—that many, instead of believing the gospel, should occupy themselves in disputes against the truth, or endeavour to entangle its preachers. And all, but especially ministers, have great need to answer captious questions with caution; and duly to connect our duty to magistrates with that which we owe to God. And it is no wonder that men are embarrassed who are ignorant of God's power and Word.—Happy is that spiritual relation to God, which secures blessedness here and to eternity, when all the fashions and connections of this world shall be no more! But how extensive is our duty to God and to men—and how delightful to a renewed heart! Love to my God and my neighbour is the fulfilling of the law. Great is the mystery of godliness—God made manifest in the flesh! What think I of this Christ? Is he my Saviour and my ALL IN ALL? Let me then in holy diligence, in cautious prudence, and in readiness to render a reason of the hope that is in me, follow him while I live: and endeavour to turn every perplexing question into important and useful hints and inquiries for my real instruction.

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 32–37. Go on then in your fathers' wicked courses, persecuting and murdering me and the apostles and other ministers whom I will send to preach the gospel among you, till, by your malicious wickedness, ye have rendered the approaching ruin of your nation inevitable; and have, by your approbation of it, rendered yourselves chargeable with all the blood of righteous men shed from the founda-

1 Ch. 2:4; ver. 13, 15, 23, 27, 29. Mat. 2:7. 7. 8. 8.4. De. 33:5. Perhaps it means, that they were civil governors as Moses was.

2 They were the public and recognized expounders and administrators of the Mosaic law. As such they were to be obeyed—whatever they taught out of the law, whatever they ordered in accordance with the law, was to be strictly attended to. This implies a careful examination of Pharisaic teaching. The people were commanded to obey, but not blindly.—f.

¶ Strain at a gnat. In the English edition of the Bible, 1568, it is 'strain out a gnat'—which is the correct translation. There can scarcely be a doubt that the translators of the authorized version intended to retain this rendering; but the word of having crept in, by a natural typographical error, has ever since continued to be copied.—C.

¶ Swallow a camel. A proverbial expression for a great sin sanctioned by a conscience that pretends to great scrupulousity. The Jews would not defile themselves with going into Pilate's judgment-hall (Jn. 8:58); but they scrupled not to buy, and shed the blood of the Lord of glory! The inquisition would not defile themselves with blood, but they condemned the innocent as a heretic, delivered him over to the secular arm, commended him to mercy, and knew he would be burned!—C.

hypocrites! for ye ^acompass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him twofold³ more the ^achild of hell than yourselves.⁴

16 Woe unto you, ^aye blind guides, which say, Whosoever⁵ shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold⁶ of the temple, he is a debtor.

17 Ye^a fools, and blind! for whether is greater, the gold, ^aor the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

18 And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty.⁷

19 Ye fools, and blind! for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that ^asanctifieth the gift?

20 Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon.

21 And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by ^ahim that dwelleth therein.

22 And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by ^ahim that sitteth thereon.

23 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! ^afor ye pay tithe of mint, and ^aanise, and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

24 Ye^a blind guides! which strain⁸ at a ^agnat, and swallow a camel.²

25 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! ^afor ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee! cleanse³ first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

27 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are ^alike unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.

28 Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

tion of the world to this time. Ye persecuting rulers and inhabitants of Jerusalem, how often have I, by myself and servants, attempted, in the most earnest and gracious manner, to call you to a state of salvation and comfort in fellowship with me; but ye obstinately refused. Behold, therefore, in a little time your city, temple, and nation shall be consigned to utter destruction! And when I am enthroned with my Father, dreadful shall be the state of your nation, cast out from the church of God, and abandoned to miseries unnumbered; till at last they shall be glad to welcome me into their hearts, and be ready to triumph in my praise: and many of you shall never see me, after my death, till I come in the clouds at the last day.

Ver. 4. Heavy burdens. These were the traditions of the elders—in many things making void the law of God, and imposing the intolerable authority of man. C.

30 And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.

31 Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets.

32 Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

33 Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers! how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

34 ¶ Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city:

35 That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

36 Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.

37 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!

38 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

39 For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.⁵

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Christ foretelleth the destruction of the temple: 3 what and how great calamities shall be before it: 29 the signs of his coming to judgment. 36 And because that day and hour is unknown, 42 we ought to watch like good servants, expecting every moment our Master's coming.

AND Jesus^a went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to show him the buildings of the temple.

^a Greek word signifying to keep or guard: are said to have originated from the literal understanding of Ex. 13. 9. They were little rolls of parchment, on which were written certain portions of the law, and were worn on the forehead or wrist of the left arm. The passages written on them were Ex. 13. 2-10, 11-16; De. 6. 4-9; 11. 13-21.—Borders. The fringes required by the law. See note on Nu. 15. 38. C.

Ver. 7. Rabbi is derived from a word first signifying great, and, by consequence, superior, master. The Jews have its origin as a personal title, no farther back than the time of the famous Hillel, or rather of his son Simeon, supposed to be the same who took the child Jesus in his arms in the temple, Lu. 2. 25-32. There were three gradations of the title—Rab, Rabbi, and Rabban—which latter title was bestowed upon no more than seven, all the descendants of Hillel—among whom were this Simeon, and Gamaliel, the instructor of Paul. C.

Ver. 23 Mint. A well-known plant, both of the field and garden, of various species, generally possessing an agreeable aromatic odour—upon account of which it was strewed on the floors of the synagogues, besides being used for culinary and medicinal purposes.—Anise. This should not have been translated anise, but aniseed, an umbelliferous plant, the seeds of which are used both for culinary purposes, as are the seeds of the caraway, and also as an agreeable addition to several medicines.—Cumin. Another umbelliferous plant, resembling fennel, but smaller. Its seeds have a bitterish pungent taste, accompanied with an aromatic flavour. The title of these plants was not mentioned by Moses; but the Pharisees, in proof of their righteousness by the law (see ver. 28; Ro. 10. 3, 5), insisted much upon these trifles, while the weightier matters of justice, humanity, and fidelity they frequently overlooked or violated. C.

Ver. 35. Zachariah, the minor prophet, is called the son of Barachiah, Zec. 1. 1; and the Zachariah mentioned 2 Ch. 24. 20, 21, is called the son of Jehoiada. But as there is no record of any violence having been offered to Zachariah the prophet, it seems more natural to understand the reference of Zachariah the priest, whose violent death was inflicted by a wicked king and idolatrous people, on account of his faithfulness to the worship of Jehovah. His being called the son of Barachias, instead of Jehoiada, is easily accounted for, as Barachias may have been a second name of Jehoiada. C.

Ver. 38. Your house. Your temple, in which you trusted as the residence of God, and earnest of your protection. C.

Ver. 39. Ye shall not see me again, till, being converted, as a nation, to the faith of my gospel, ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh (to save us) in the name of the Lord. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The highest offices, in both church and state, are often filled up with the worst of men, who are apt to make others stumble at the ordinances or truths of God for their sake. Yea, they who make the greatest noise about morality and virtue, and its influence, to recommend us to God, are in general extremely destitute of it. Rigid imposers of human invention are rarely strict in their own lives. Let then the servants of Jesus Christ always endeavour to manifest their utmost humility, uprightness, and contempt of this world. Let them practise the doctrines they preach, and never attempt to lord it over their hearers or brethren in office. With what pitiful pretences do men varnish over their neglect of real godliness, their dishonesty, persecution, and murder! And fearful are the discoveries which shall be made in the last judg-

21 These words are rendered more solemn and emphatic by the circumstances under which they were uttered. Our Lord had frequently, especially of late,
taught in the temple.
He had set forth the truth: he had besought, warned, and threatened. It was all in vain. The infatuated people, assembled in the temple courts professedly to worship God, would not hear God's Son.
Now he turns away from the temple for ever. He would enter it no more. In words of deepest tenderness he pronounces judgment on an impenitent and infatuated people.—P.

24 The most com-temple and its courts was obtained from the side of the Mount of Olives, where Jesus sat when he uttered the words of this terrible prophesy. He saw across the narrow glen of temple stood, at this mit ran the stately columns of Solomon's porch. The naos, or shrine itself, with its encircling chambers, was raised on an inner platform so as to overtop the porch, and it seems all the buildings of the city. With such a magnificent structure before their eyes, the words of Jesus must have fallen with painful force upon the ears and hearts of the disciples.—P.

16 Then let them which be in Judea⁷ flee into the mountains.⁸

17 Let⁹ him which is on the house-top⁹ not come down to take any thing out of his house:

18 Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.

19 And¹⁰ woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days!

20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day.¹

21 For² then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.

22 And³ except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

23 Then⁴ if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.

24 For⁵ there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it ^{were} possible, they shall deceive the very elect.

25 Behold,⁶ I have told you before.

26 Wherefore if they shall say unto you, ^{Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: Behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not.}

27 For⁷ as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shippeth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

28 For⁸ wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

29 Immediately⁹ after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken,

30 And¹⁰ then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory.

⁴ Alford's view of the meaning of this passage is worthy of note. He supposes that Matthew and Mark, writing mainly for Jews, give the inner or domestic sign of the approaching calamity—a sign which would appear within the temple: while Luke, writing for Gentiles, gives the outward state of things (Lu. 21. 20). Alford thinks the inner sign may have been some abnormal, definite and well-marked, committed by the party of the Zealots. On seeing ¹ There cannot be a doubt that the immediate and direct fulfilment of this prophecy is to be sought in the events which occurred in the Roman empire between the years A.D. 60 and 70, and which culminated in the destruction of Jerusalem and the final overthrow of the Jewish polity.

The coming of the Son of man is his coming to judge and punish sinful nations. The sun, moon, stars and powers of heaven, are emblems of earthly potentates. A glance at the history of Rome from the death of Nero till the triumph of Titus and Vespasian, after the fall of Jerusalem, will fully illustrate the words of the prophecy. Yet still the shadow of the passage shows that another and still greater event is here shadowed forth—not directly, perhaps, but typically: namely, the destruction of the world, and the coming of the Son of man to judgment.—P.

31 And¹¹ he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet;² and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.³

32 ¶ Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh:

33 So likewise ye,⁴ when ye shall see all these things, know that it⁵ is near, even at the doors.

nations adjacent, ver. 14. The Roman army invaded and laid siege to Jerusalem, and the Christians fled with the utmost haste to the mountains around Judea, ver. 15-20. That destruction was terrible, ver. 21; especially to mothers, ver. 19; threatened ruin to the whole Jewish nation, ver. 22; and was universal through the whole country, ver. 27, 28. It was foreboded by signs in the heavens, and quite dissolved the constitution of the Jewish church and state, and it occasioned terrible anguish to the carnal Jews to be thus punished by the Messiah, ver. 27-30. It took place while that very generation among whom Christ taught partly survived, ver. 32-35; and was followed by a remarkable spread of the gospel and conversion of lost sinners to Christ, ver. 30, 31. Many of the wicked Jews were preserved for the sake of children who were in their loins, and who were to descend from them after many generations, ver. 22. Ver. 27, 28 may denote the spread of the gospel among the Gentiles, and the gathering of multitudes to Jesus to feed on his flesh and blood; but rather that the Roman army, beginning at the north-east, would, with fire and sword, desolate the whole country of the Jews, and hunt out and destroy them, be where they would; 29, 30 represent the terrible appearances of Jesus' power, in destroying the Jewish church and state, while his ministers should, by the gospel trumpet, gather multitudes of sinners to him; and also his terrible appearance to judgment, while his angels shall gather together his people, and bring them to their honourable seat on his right hand. 37-41. The destruction of Jerusalem, as well as the last judgment, will take place while most men are indulging themselves in sensuality and carnal cares, and are no way provided for it; and of persons in seemingly equal danger, some will be miserably destroyed, and others graciously preserved. 42-51. Since therefore you are so uncertain of the time of this destruction and the last judgment, ye need always to be watching over your hearts and lives that ye may be ready for it, especially as great shall be the gracious and honorary reward of such as are then found faithful and diligent in their proper work; whereas, if any one become carnally secure, and indulge himself in persecuting his fellow-ministers and professors, and in immorality and profaneness, Jesus will surprise him by death or judgment, and he shall be most miserably wretched forever in hell, in company with the most detestable sinners.

Ver. 1. The buildings of the temple. Josephus states that some of the stones of the temple were 45 cubits (that is, between 60 and 70 feet) long, 5 cubits high, and 6 broad; while 162 enormous and splendid pillars adorned the porches.—C.

Ver. 2. While Titus was besieging Jerusalem he was most anxious to preserve the temple. But when it was consumed, and the city taken, he ordered the foundations both of temple and city to be utterly razed. And the Jews themselves acknowledge that Terentius Rufus actually ploughed over the place where they stood—hereby fulfilling Mi. 3. 12. C.

Ver. 14. In all the world. Freely throughout the world, and not, as now, confined to Judea.—For a witness to all nations, both that Jesus was the Christ, and that the cup of Jewish iniquity was now full.—Then shall the end (of the Jewish polity) come. C.

Ver. 15. The holy place. Bloomfield understands it to mean the temple—citing, for the use of the phrase, Ac. 6. 13; 21. 38, with the parallel passage, Mar. 13. 14. But the parallel passage in Lu. 21. 20 seems clearly to point to the investment of Jerusalem, and not to the time when the temple had been taken; wherefore 'the holy place' must mean 'the holy city.' See Ps. 46. 4. C.

Ver. 21. The sufferings of the Jews during the siege of Jerusalem, as detailed by Josephus, an eye-witness, are certainly without parallel in human history. A cruel enemy without—more cruel factions within—gnawing famine, and wasting pestilence! And all this horror of darkness without one gleam of relieving light, beyond the desperate, the ferocious courage with which the factions assailed one another, and defended their devoted city against their irresistible enemies. C.

Ver. 22. Shortened—by the conquest of the city, before pestilence had acquired more malignity, and the Romans had been provoked to exterminate rather than to enslave. 1,700,000 Jews perished miserably in the siege, besides the uncounted multitudes destroyed in other cities.—For the elect's sake. That remnant, according to the election of grace, Ro. 11. 5, for whose sake the sparing mercy of God is extended to a rebellious generation. C.

Ver. 30. Coming in the clouds. The import of this coming may be gathered from Is. 26. 21; 35. 4; 66. 15, 16; Mal. 3. 1, 2, 3, in all which it is a coming by national judgments upon them that forget God. C.

Ver. 31. Angels. Literally, messengers, whether human or spiritual. These angels are, in the commencement of the prophetic series, his ministers, with the gospel trumpet warning men to flee from the wrath to come, Eze. 33. 7, gathering the elect into one in Christ Jesus, Ep. 1. 10. But that they and their work may be also typical of other angels, and another gathering to another and greater judgment, is not to be denied. C.

46 Blessed^a is that servant, whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

47 Verily^a I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But^a and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin^a to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken:

50 The^a lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

51 And shall cut him asunder,^a and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

1 The parable of the ten virgins, 14 and of the talents. 31 Also the description of the last judgment.

THEN shall^a the^b kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten^c virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth^a to meet the bridegroom.

2 And^a five of them were wise, and five¹ were foolish.

3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

4 But^a the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5 While^a the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered^a and slept.

6 And^a at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.^a 7 Then^a all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out.^a 9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut.

3 Jewish marriages were generally conducted as follows:—

After the marriage had been solemnized, the bridegroom, in a procession as brilliant as his circumstances permitted, conducted the bride to his dwelling, where all his young female friends were assembled, and waited with lamps, prepared to go out and receive her. After which the whole train entered the house together.

When the train had entered the bridegroom's house, the doors were shut to exclude strangers.

The marriage customs of the modern Hindoo are almost identical with those above described, and all admittance is most peremptorily refused when once the door has been closed. See Ward's History of the Hindoo.—Note, What a solemn rebuke does this parable minister to the visionary fig-ment of purgatory;

and what an awful warning does it present to careless and procrastinating sinners!—C.

7 The principle or moral of this parable is identical with that of the preceding—the necessity for con-part of the Chris-the neglect arose from thoughtlessness —Christ's duty was considered so easy that the future was not cared for. In this parable the sin sprang from another cause—discontent.

Christian duty was considered too hard, and was abandoned as something beyond the reach of ordinary effort.—P.

14 ¶ For^a the kingdom of heaven⁶ is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.⁷

15 And unto one he gave five⁸ talents,⁹ to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

16 Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After^a a long time, the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents, came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents; behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

Ver. 34. This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. The subjection of this statement immediately after the prophecy by three evangelists (see Mar. 13.30; Lu. 21.25) puts the idea of any dislocation of the narrative totally out of the question. Nor is it possible, upon any Scripture authority, to interpret 'this generation' of the Jewish nation, or the Christian church, in continuance. Wherefore the conclusion seems inevitable that the previous prophecy describes directly the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish state, even should that be considered typical of other and greater events. C.

Ver. 35. Knoweth no man, &c. Consequently, not even 'the Son of man' as such; for being truly man, He. 1.14, 16, 17, he was as such ignorant of all future events but such as the Father was pleased to reveal to him; see Ac. 1.7. Our Lord, having 'two distinct natures in one person,' could truly speak of himself under the character of either, or of both, as united in one person, just as, with perfect truth, we can speak of ourselves and say, in respect of one nature (the body), 'we shall die,' and, in respect of another nature (the soul), 'we shall never die;' yet, in all this, each man so constituted is one person. C.

Ver. 40, 41. From comparing ver. 40 and 41 with 43, it will be evident that the coming foretold in ver. 39 is a coming to national judgment. May not the meaning therefore of ver. 40 and 41 be elicited thus:—1. The judgment, sudden and unexpected as the flood of Noe, will sweep over the fields, or rural districts, which had escaped in former judgments, as well as over the cities, which had hitherto been the principal scenes of destruction; see 2 Ki. 24.10-14; 25.11, 12. 2. It will extend to the female as well as to the male population, which is not generally the case even in the most sanguinary wars. 3. It will not be confined to the rich, the political, and military classes, but will extend to the poor in the pursuit of the most peaceful avocations. 4. The two descriptions it seems impossible to refer, as some do, to the final judgment, in which 'all nations' are to be gathered before the Son of man; whereas in these descriptions 'one is taken and another left,' which will not accord with ch. 25.46, in which all are alike judged according to their works. 5. The general use of μαρτυρία in Matthew is to 'take along with' the taker; see Mat. 4.5, 8; 12.45; 17.1. Does not the prophecy therefore foretell that fully one-half of the most peaceable male and female population will be taken away captive by their invaders, while the remainder shall be left friendless and destitute, the victims of poverty and pestilence? C.

REFLECTIONS.—Even real saints are often puffed up with the external and quickly fading glories of religion. But how manifest is the omniscience of our Redeemer, who could so circumstantially foretell the events which befell the Jews and the nations around! And wonderfully has God proved him the Messiah by fulfilling his predictions upon his opposers. Yea, for the confirmation of our faith, Josephus, one of them, was almost miraculously saved, and inclined to give us the history of the fulfilment. Novelities in religion are always to be suspected; and inconceivable are the arts by which Satan and his instruments labour to deceive men, pervert the gospel, and dishonour Christ. But great is the mercy that leads God to watch over and guide his people. What an awful scene of misery hath sin made our earth! Even men, more savage than ravenous beasts, unnaturally hunt out and destroy one another. How dreadful then must hell be, where men meet in all the rage of their lusts! It is a great mercy that, though we must never flee from duty, we may and ought to flee from danger. What time my heart is overwhelmed, Lord, lead me to the Rock that is higher than I! And since the same preludes and descriptions can serve for both, let all the noted catastrophes of nations lead me to the serious consideration of, and preparation for, the last judgment! Thrice happy are they who, in times of trial, are preserved in Christ, and kept faithful and lively when iniquity abounds and the love of many waxes cold; and happy are they who discover greater regard to God's ordinances than to their own ease. For graciously shall they at last be crowned with glory and honour. But dreadful will it be, if, after we have been intrusted with offices and gifts, we should be found, in death or judgment, unfaithful in using them: none shall share a more certain or deeper damnation. There is great need of constant watchfulness, constant acting as under Christ's eye, constant readiness for eternity! How slothful is my heart if Jesus' repeated admonitions do not awaken me!

CHAPTER XXV. Ver. 1-13. This, and the sub-

24 Then he which had received the one talent, came, and said, 'Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man,¹ reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed.²

sequent parable, may have some relation to the time of Christ's coming to destroy the Jewish nation, but especially to his coming to the last judgment. As the Jews had ordinarily their weddings at night, and seldom fewer than ten bridesmaids, that custom is here alluded to. Christ, who betroths and unites sinners to himself in the day of his power, is the glorious bridegroom. His tarrying denotes his deferring the Jewish destruction, and death, and the last judgment till the due season. His coming at midnight, and with a great cry, denotes how unexpected and alarming his coming is, in common calamities, at death or judgment. The ten virgins denote multitudes of professing and apparently real Christians. Their slumbering and sleeping denote their common sloth and security while Christ withdraws his presence. The foolish virgins, who had only lamps, but no oil in them, represent nominal Christians, who have a profession of gospel truth, but no real grace; and who, when awakened by death or judgment, shall find their profession come to nothing: gladly then would they be in the condition of sincere Christians, and derive help from them; but their cares of salvation will be then too late, and they themselves shall be eternally excluded from fellowship with Christ. The wise virgins are true believers, whose external profession of Christ arises from real grace in their hearts, and who are, notwithstanding occasional sloth and slumberings, in a habitual readiness to meet with Christ, in death or judgment, upon his call; these, though they have no grace or good works to be imparted to others, shall be graciously admitted to eternal fellowship with him in the heavenly mansions. 14-30. The Master is Christ, who, in his ascension, travelled into a far country, who bestows gifts and graces on ministers and people, and will return at the last day to require an account of their improvement of them. The servants are ministers and people. The talents are offices, gifts, and opportunities, given by Christ to men in different degrees, for the good of the church, to be improved for his glory, and to be accounted for at the last day. Such as improve what they have received, whether more or less, in a faithful and diligent manner, shall be graciously rewarded. But such as, through unbelief of God's kindness and mercy, neglect to improve their gifts, shall at last be deprived of them, and undone for their abuse of them. 32, 33. He will fully and exactly separate the righteous from the wicked, never more to be mixed. The former, or those who accepted Christ as their Savior and throughout all their lives walked in him as they received him, he will honourably set at his right hand in the air; but the latter will be forever cast out, dishonoured and disgraced as filthy and abominable creatures, who loved, lived, and died in their sins. 34-40. They are called to receive the kingdom, not as any proper reward of their works, but as the inheritance which they are entitled as faithful children of a gracious God through faith. Their works are not mentioned as grounds of the sentence, but as proofs that they are God's children, who love the brethren. Their objection denotes their viewing whatever they did as unworthy of so honourable a reward. 41-45. They, in sinning, departed from God and followed the devil. Now their punishment is answerable. Their want of charity to the saints is at once a mark of their being full of unbelief and haters of Christ and his people, and also a ground of their fearful sentence.

Ver. 29. For unto every one that hath (valued his privileges and employed his means) shall be given: but from him that hath not (employed nor valued them) shall be taken away that which he (now) hath.—Note. Do these talents represent grace? and, if so, then may not a believer fall from grace? The answer is scriptural:—the believer is 'born again, not of corruptible, but of incorruptible seed,' 1 Pe. 1. 23. Of his sheep, Jesus says, 'I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish,' Jn. 10. 28. Therefore these talents represent not inward grace, but the outward means of grace, the various privileges and ordinances of the Christian church. C.

Ver. 35. Our Lord here enumerates six heads, under some one of which every possible form of human misery may be found. Hunger—thirst—a stranger—nakedness—sickness—imprisonment: one, as it were, for each day of the labour and sorrow introduced by the first transgression; and for which the knowledge of Christ crucified, risen, reigning, interceding, and coming again, can afford the only remedy.—Note. The introductory for, ver. 35, cannot be tortured, contrary to the uniform testimony of Scripture, into any proof that the entrance into 'the kingdom prepared' was purchased or deserved by the merit of the 'good works' enumerated. See De. 9. 4-6; Mat. 1. 21; 26. 28; Ro. 3. 20; whether temporal or spiritual, is traced to the fountain of sovereign grace alone. But the great purpose of final judgment being first to exhibit Christ in glory, and secondly to explain and vindicate the equity of the divine government, the 'fruit of the Spirit' is displayed in all its beauty and variety, as the evidence that the Judge decides not upon any principle of favouritism, but in righteousness; and bestows his rewards upon none but such as have been 'made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is absurd to esteem any as Christians who have not the appearance of real saintship. And inestimable is the worth of real grace exercised in the heart by a new creation in Christ. It makes a wide difference between true believers and mere nominal professors. Safe is their meeting with Christ, and certain their admission to glory, who have it: but dreadful their exclusion from Christ, and deep their sorrow in hell, who die without it! No intercession of saints, no mercy, can save them. In diversified forms and degrees Jesus bestows gifts, offices; and opportunities on men for the service of his church. And he will take an exact account of the improvement. Happy are they who, with diligence, use whatever they receive to his glory; inexpressibly great shall be their honour and their reward: but miserable are they who, through unbelieving hard thoughts of God, take up with a mere hypocritical profession. Every plea of innocence, prudence, or of wanted assistances, will issue in their confusion.—How certain—how sudden—how awful—how glorious—will be the appearance of Jesus to judgment: exact and final shall be his separation of the righteous and wicked; and impartial his trial of human works. Gracious and heart-ravishing will be his last invitation to saints: high his regard to them, and every kindness showed to them! But awful indeed his dismissal of sinners from him, whom they now so hate and condemn. And how fixed—how important—how lasting—is men's future state! May these awful, these eternal realities, sink deep into my heart!

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 26-28. Christ conjoined the passover and supper to intimate that the former, having been long a type, should now be fulfilled in his death; and that the other should succeed as a memorial of his finished sufferings till the end of the world. The bread represents him as God-man, chosen, appointed, and furnished by his Father, and suffering unto death for the redemption of his people. The wine represents his fulfilling all righteousness for the securing and bestowing all promised spiritual blessings, particularly the full remission of sins to his faithful followers. 29. I will never more feast with you in this manner, never more so indulge you with my bodily presence; but instead thereof, will hold fellowship with you in a far more spiritual and comfortable manner in the gospel dispensation, and especially in the heavenly state.

Ver. 2. Betrayed. Rather, 'Is to be betrayed.' Bloomfield. —More literally, 'delivered up.' C.

Ver. 7. Whether this woman was Mary the sister of Lazarus, mentioned Jn. 12. 3, and whether there were two anointings, one of the head, and another of the feet, has been matter of deep question. Lightfoot, Doddridge, Gill, Guise, &c., may be consulted for the different views and arguments. The more probable opinion seems that of one anointing—the different circumstances being related by different historians, each, as moved by the Holy Spirit, filling up some circumstance omitted by the other. C.

Ver. 11. But me ye have not always. Therefore the Popish figment of transubstantiation cannot be true; for the wafer which it asserts to be the very body, and blood, and soul, and divinity of Christ, the Romanists have always with them. C.

Ver. 14. Them—or rather, 'about that time.' The cupidity of Judas being probably excited by what he considered the useless waste of so much valuable ointment.—Note. Evil feelings are often stirred up by the sight of what is good. Let believers watch and pray that they enter not into this temptation. C.

Ver. 15. Thirty pieces of silver. Most probably thirty shekels—about £3. 15s.—the price of a slave accidentally torn by a beast, see Ex. 21. 32. 'A goodly price at which they valued him!' But, alas! alas! how often is he sold again, and 'crucified, afresh' for a far inferior price! 'Be not high-minded, but fear,' and 'let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.' C.

Ver. 21. As they did eat. Whether our Lord did eat the passover has been matter of serious debate. The course of the narrative in this chapter is clearly in favour of his eating it (see also Lu. 22. 14). But then, in Jn. 18. 28, when our Lord was already a prisoner, the Jews, it appears, had yet to eat the passover. The solution of this difficulty arises from recollecting that the passover was to commence with first full moon of the month Nisan. But as this day was settled, not by astronomical calculation, but by the actual appearance of the new moon, a difference might readily arise with regard to the exact day on which the feast should commence. And as the Pharisees and Sadducees differed on almost every other point, it is most probable they would differ upon this likewise. And thus our Lord might eat saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, ³Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, ⁴Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

42 For⁵ I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink:

43 I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

44 Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?

45 Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, ⁶Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.

46 And⁷ these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.⁸

CHAPTER XXVI.

³ The rulers conspire against Christ. ⁶ The woman anointeth his feet. ¹⁴ Judas selleth him. ¹⁷ Christ eateth the passover: ²⁶ instituteth his holy supper: ³⁶ prayeth in the garden: ⁴⁷ and being betrayed with a kiss, ⁵⁷ is carried to Caiaphas, ⁶⁹ and denied of Peter.

AND ⁹it^a came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples, ²Ye^b know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

³¶ Then^c assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high-priest, who was called Caiaphas, ⁴ And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

⁵ But they said, ⁶Not on the feast-day,¹ lest there be an uproar among the people.

⁷ There came unto him a woman having an alabaster-box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

⁸ But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation,² saying, To what purpose is this waste?

⁹ For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

⁸ The first of unleavened bread was Thursday, the 14th of Nisan. On that day the Jews put away all leaven out of their houses, and killed the paschal lamb. The lamb was not eaten till after sunset, when according to the Jewish mode of reckoning, the 15th day began. The 15th day (of 24 hours began at sunset; but as the 24 hours was divided into two parts, the one called nigam, the other day, we often find the word day applied to the latter alone. It was on this 14th the disciples prepared for the passover.—P.

I can see no contradiction, no real discrepancy in the two accounts.

Jesus may have used both expressions, following up the more general recorded by Matthew, with the more specific recorded by John. He may have said, 'He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish—' to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped—the same shall betray me.' Jesus and Judas dipped together; Jesus on dipping presented his morsel to Judas, a thing of common occurrence at an eastern banquet. John, who was close to Jesus, heard and saw all.—P.

THE MOUNT OF OFFENSE—WHERE CHRIST WAS BETRAYED. [Matt., xxvi:1, 4].—The Mount of Offense is south of the Mount of Olives, and east of the Hill of Evil Counsel. It bears witness of the perfidy of Judas Iscariot. It is wonderful how every event connected with the trial and death and resurrection of our Lord has found in the neighborhood of Jerusalem some spot, or hill, or monument to commemorate it. The chief interest about Jerusalem to-day is the fact that it forms a kind of monument or concrete expression of the awful tragedy which ended in the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. When one goes to Paris now, it is of Napoleon he is reminded; when he goes to Edinburg it is Sir Walter Scott; but in Jerusalem everything speaks of Christ. Every valley, every mountain reminds us of Him.

38 Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

39 And he went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, 'O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me! nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What! could ye not watch with me one hour?

42 He^o went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

13 It is remarkable to find our Lord under such circumstances speaking of angels. His own power as God was supreme. He frequently pressed this truth on his disciples. Why then speak of angels at all, and not simply declare his own omnipotence? The reason seems to be, that in the mystery of the divine government of this world angels are the regularly constituted ministers for executing God's plans in relation to the whole church.

14 Angels announced the Messiah's advent, counselled the right path, ministered to him in the wilderness; in Gethsemane an angel strengthened him; angels were present at his resurrection and ascension.—P.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, 'Sleep on now, and take your rest; behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude, with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people.

48 Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he: hold him fast.

49 And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; and kissed him.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51 ¶ And, behold, one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high-priest's, and smote off his ear.

52 Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

53 Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?⁹

54 But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?

55 In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

57 ¶ And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high-priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

And in this he agrees with the apostle Paul, who thrice declares that what the communicant eats is simply bread, 1 Co. 11. 26-28. Besides, as our Lord says, Jn. 15. 5, 'I am the vine, ye are the branches'—and yet cannot mean that he was changed into a vine, or his disciples into branches, but merely that he was like the vine, while they were like the branches—so, when he says of bread, 'This is my body,' he means, as in the case of the vine, 'this is (like) my body.' For the use of the verb to be, in which it is put for 'to be like, represent, or signify, or answer to,' see Da. 7. 23; 1 Co. 10. 4. Ga. 4. 24, 25. But if the Romanist still repeat, 'This is my body,' the Protestant replies, 'And so indeed it is—it is his body to faith,' for while sense perceives and uses bread, faith discerns and partakes of 'his body and blood, with all their benefits, to spiritual nourishment and growth in grace.' C.

Ver. 45. Sleep on now. This has been termed 'an ironical reproof,' but surely such a figure is totally unbecoming the unqualified solemnity of the occasion. Is not the meaning this? I left you to watch, but the necessity of it being now past, sleep on, and forget both my sorrows and your own, for the few moments of my time that are yet unexpired. C.

Ver. 50. Friend. Rather, Companion; though as a title, the word Friend, that is, one that has been so named, might still be justly applied to the ungrateful and faithless traitor. C.

Ver. 52. This statement, if taken in a literal and unlimited sense, is not strictly accurate—for many take the sword who do not perish by it. The meaning must therefore be sought thus: 1. The sword is a general name for all weapons and means of warfare. 2. The warfare in the case is a private opposition to public authority. 3. It is a warfare undertaken rashly, and re-vengefully, in defence of or for propagation of religion. Now all who thus take, and continue to hold the sword, shall finally perish by it, either literally, as the Jews soon after did; or spiritually, by making shipwreck of their holy faith. C.

Ver. 61. To speak against the temple was a capital offence, Je. 26. 11, 12, 15, 24, according to the Jewish common law—which, as is evident, both from the case of Jeremiah and of our Lord, meant little else than any decision that pleased the rulers, or any ebullition of the popular will. C.

Ver. 74. To curse. 'To anathematize himself,' to imprecate judgments upon himself, if his denial were untrue.—To swear. To swear by the name of God. So deep, alas! was the fall of Peter! But, oh! what a scale does it furnish whereon poor backsliding sinners may measure out the mercy and love of God!—Cock. The rabbinical writers assert that, 'on account of the holy things,' no cocks were kept in Jerusalem; and therefore it has been asserted that the narrative is untrue, as Peter could not hear what the city did not contain. Let the rabbinical account be admitted for true, so far as Jewish authority extended, and will it follow that no Roman soldier kept a cock for his own pleasure or profit? or will it follow that Peter, from the house of Caiaphas, adjoining the city wall, could not hear one from a distance in the country, where no one has questioned the bird's existence? C.

REFLECTIONS.—Unbounded was the foreknowledge of our Redeemer, and astonishing his delight in the view of his sufferings for the world. Great is his care to vindicate all good conduct, to honour all that honour him, and to direct all to opportunities of doing good to their brethren; and infinite his regard to his Father's oracles and ordinances and the salvation of the world. In view of death—a dreadful death—he joins believers in the seals of the promise, and appoints them a permanent feast for spiritual nourishment: representing all his labours of love, and sealing and applying his person and righteousness to their soul! And faithful and reasonable were his warnings against temptation.—How heavy the weight of our sins lay on him! How fearful his agonies! how fervent his prayers! Yet great was his submission to his Father's will: marvellous his readiness to suffer, and kind his rebukes even to the worst!—But, alas! how was he hated by men—plotted against without cause—envied of his honours—betrayed for a trifle—shamefully discredited and contradicted, even by his saints—presumptuously apprehended—despitefully abused—and basely denied, after the most solemn warning! Let me learn to watch and pray against temptation. I know not whether Satan may drag or my corruption drive me. Let me always honour Jesus whatever be the expense; be liberal to his poor, and always give

ROCK UPON WHICH JESUS LEANED. [Matt. xxvi:36.]—"Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder." After rising from this last prayer tired and heart-broken it is thought that Jesus leaned upon the rock illustrated in the above picture for a moment's rest. Standing here and seeing hundreds of Russian pilgrims, nothing I had ever witnessed before was so deeply pathetic as to see those poor people bend and kiss this rock. The truth is that the rock is actually being kissed away by the lips of devoted saints. The greatest wonder of all the ages is the depth of affection in the heart of the human race for Jesus Christ. A wonder great as His divinity is the fact that people worship Him, and love Him.

CANA OF GALILEE—THE PLACE OF THE FIRST MIRACLE. [JOHN, ii : 1.]—"And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee: and the mother of Jesus was there."—John, ii : 1. Five miles from Nazareth and quietly nestling in the midst of olive and fig trees, is Cana of Galilee, accurately photographed as above. There are about two hundred families here. There is a Greek church, the dome of which you see in the picture, in which it is claimed are the water-pots which contained the water Christ turned into wine, and which was obtained from the spring shown in the foreground. These vessels are preserved with great care because of their historic and religious significance. This village, like many others in Palestine, would have passed from the memory of the human race but for the first miracle of Christ performed there.

58 But Peter followed him afar off, unto the high-priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death;

60 But found none: yea, though many false witnesses came, yet found they none.² At the last came two false witnesses, 61 And said, This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62 And the high-priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? What is it which these witness against thee?

63 But Jesus held his peace. And the high-priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said:⁴ nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then the high-priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, He is guilty of death.

67 Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands,⁷ 68 Saying, Prophesy unto us, thou Christ, who is he that smote thee?

69 ¶ Now Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee.

70 But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

71 And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

72 And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man.

73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus,

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Christ is delivered bound to Pilate. 3 Judas hangeth himself. 19 Pilate, admonished of his wife, 24 washeth his hands: 28 and looseth Barabbas. 29 Christ is crowned with thorns, 34 crucified, 40 reviled, 50 dieth, and is buried: 66 his sepulchre is sealed, and a watch set over it.

WHEN the morning was come,¹ all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death.

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.²

3 ¶ Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself,³ and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

4 Saying, I have sinned, in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in.

8 Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this day.

9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value;⁴

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.⁵

11 ¶ And Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest.⁶

12 And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee?

14 And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15 ¶ Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

to embrace his preached gospel. And, on his demand, gladly let me receive him into my house and heart. A deep sense of my sinfulness should make me always ready to suspect the worst of myself. If I indulge self-confidence, if I disregard a Saviour's warning, I shall quickly fall, fearfully fall, before the slightest temptations. If I indulge one sin, it will quickly plunge me into a worse. If then I have been overtaken in a fault, let me quickly and bitterly repent. It is not the greatness or number of my sins that can ruin me, but my obstinate impenitence and unbelief.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Crucifixion was the most cruel, shameful, and cursed death that could be devised: was not at all used by the Jews; and by the Romans inflicted only upon slaves, and the basest of the people, who were capital offenders. The person was nailed to the cross as it lay upon the ground, through each hand, extended to its utmost stretch, and through both the feet together; then the cross was erected, and the foot of it, with a violent thrust which disjoined the whole body of the sufferer, placed into a hole in the ground prepared to receive it. The whole weight of the body thus hung upon the nails, which went through the hands and feet till the person expired by mere dint of terrible pain.

Ver. 9. By Jeremy. This prophecy is not found in Jeremiah.

THE FIELD OF BLOOD—NOW A PLACE OF TOMBS AND A RESORT FOR LEPERS. [Matt., xxvii:6, 7, 8.]—"And the chief priest took the silver pieces and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood, and they took counsel and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in. Wherefore that field was called the field of blood unto this day."

And so we have with us still the same field a little way outside the walls of Jerusalem. At the bottom of this field, or hill, is the Valley of Hinnom, where children in ancient times were sacrificed to Moloch. It was called the place of fire, and sometimes Gehenna. It is now a place of tombs and a resort for lepers. The earliest mention of the Valley of Hinnom is in Josh., xv:8.

17 Therefore, when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, 'Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?

18 For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

19 ¶ When he was set down on the judgment-seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man; for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.

20 ¶ But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified.

23 And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, 'Let him be crucified.

24 When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.

26 Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27 ¶ Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

29 And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!

30 And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.

32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

33 ¶ And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, A place of a skull,

¶ The word Golgotha is Aramaic, and its Greek equivalent is given by Matthew, Luke, and John. The Latin Calvary has become incorporated in every language of Europe. Different accounts have been given of the origin of the name. Some say it is so called because it was the burial-place of Adam, and his skull was preserved there; others that it was the place where malefactors were beheaded; others that there was a skull-shaped mound at it. There is no reference to any mound or hill earlier than the fourth century. As to the site of Calvary, we have no definite information. We learn from the evangelists, that it was outside of Jerusalem, near some public road, and visible from a distance. Mar. 15.20. Jn. 19.25. Lu. 23.40. The traditional site is most unlikely; in fact, it is scarcely possible it could have been situated where the church of the Sepulchre now stands.—P.

¶ The words of ver. 52.53 must be interpreted literally like other parts of this narrative. The graves were thrown open by the shock of the earthquake at the time of Christ's death. They were rock-tombs, with stone doors. The dead, however, did not rise till the moment of Christ's resurrection. They rose with, or after him; for he was the 'first-fruits of them that sleep.' They appeared unto many, as if to afford visible evidence that He was the resurrection and the life. How long they continued to appear is not stated. What became of them afterwards is not stated. Possibly, as Alfred suggests, they may have remained on earth forty days, and then ascended with Christ to glory.—P.

34 They gave him vinegar to drink, mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink.

35 And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

36 And sitting down, they watched him there;

37 And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

38 Then were there two thieves crucified with him; one on the right hand, and another on the left.

39 ¶ And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, 40 And saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross.

41 Likewise also the chief priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, 42 He saved others, himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him.

43 He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, I am the Son of God.

44 The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth.

45 ¶ Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour.

46 And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for Elias.

48 And straightway one of them ran, and took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50 Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

51 ¶ And behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

52 And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose;

53 And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

but in Zechariah, ch. 11.12.13. This substitution has therefore been pronounced the error of a transcriber, or a lapse of memory in the writer. But the first of these opinions is contrary to the best MS. authority; the second, to the whole idea of inspiration. That Zechariah may also have been called Jeremiah, or that Jeremiah may actually have written part of the prophecy emitted by Zechariah, affords a ready and sufficient solution of the whole difficulty. C.

Ver. 11. Thou sayest. The words may be translated, 'Sayest thou that I am?' See Jn. 18.34. But the affirmation of his being a king (see Jn. 18.36,37) seems as necessary for a witness to the Gentiles as it was to the Jews. C.

Ver. 25. This imprecation, dictated by a ferocious cruelty that would satiate its appetite for blood at any price, has been, alas! most literally fulfilled. After the reduction of Jerusalem by Titus, more than 500 Jews were sometimes crucified in a single day, until, in the words of their own historian, 'there was wanting room for crosses, and crosses for bodies.' And many of these were not doubt the children of those who had uttered this unmerciful imprecation. C.

Ver. 32. Cyrene—the capital of a province in Libya, now part of the kingdom of desert called Barca. It stands in a plain about eleven miles south of the Mediterranean, and was one of the cities called Pentapolis. It was founded by Battus, 630 B.C., and was 55 And^a many women were there, beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him:

56 Among which was 'Mary Magdalene,'² and Mary the mother of James and Josés, and the mother of Zebedee's children.

57 ¶ When^a the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathea,³ named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus' disciple.⁴

58 He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered.

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60 And laid it in his⁵ own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock:⁶ and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed.

61 And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre.

62 ¶ Now the next day, that followed the day^a of the preparation, 'the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, 63 Saying, Sir, we remember that 'that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, 'After three days I will rise again.

64 Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and 'steal him away, and say unto the people, He is risen from the dead: so the last error shall be worse than the first.'

6 There are hundreds of such tombs in the cliffs, gorges, and hill-sides around Jerusalem, and the tombs of the holy city are now, in fact, far more numerous than her houses. Their usual form is that of a small chamber, with loculi for bodies pierced in the rock along the sides. In some there are many chambers connected by doors and galleries. The entrance from without is generally by a low door cut in the vertical side of a rock, and shut either by a massive slab hung upon pivots, or by a heavy circular stone running in a groove.—P.

2 Considerable difficulty is experienced in harmonizing the four accounts of the resurrection given by the evangelists. This arises from a variety of causes.—1. The evangelists wrote independently. None of them appears to have been acquainted with the writings of the others. 2. Each writer records those facts which most struck himself.

3. We have no full account of all the events, so as to be able to supply the connecting links. The time of the resurrection is here indicated—it was at the end of the Sabbath, i.e. after the close of the Jewish Sabbath—not immediately, but, as the succeeding clause more minutely specifies, at DAWN of the day following.—P.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Christ's resurrection is declared by an angel to the women. 9 Christ himself appeareth to them. 11 The chief priests give the soldiers money to say that he was stolen out of his sepulchre. 16 Christ appeareth to his disciples, 18 and sendeth them to teach and baptize all nations.

IN the 'end of the sabbath,'¹ as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre.²

2 And, behold, there was³ a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

3 His^b countenance⁴ was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

4 And 'for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.⁵

5 And the angel 'answered and said unto the women, 'Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

6 He is not here; 'for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

7 And 'go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

8 And^a they departed quickly from the sepulchre, with fear and great joy, and did run to bring his disciples word

9 ¶ And^a as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail! And peopled by a Grecian colony. It was long governed by its own kings; but was finally bequeathed to the Romans. During the prevalence of Christianity in north Africa, it was a place of importance; but was conquered by the Saracens, A.D. 640. Christianity has nearly disappeared, and Mahometanism reigns amidst ruins and barrenness. C.

Ver. 34. Gall. That this was some bitter infusion is all that is precisely known. It is probable, however, that it was a narcotic, 'employed, in 'cruel mercy,' to stupify the sufferers; or perhaps even poisonous, and used to hasten dissolution. Wherefore our Lord, who was resigned to suffer, as appointed to save, 'to the uttermost,' would not drink. C.

Ver. 46. Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? These are not the precise Hebrew words of Ps. 22: 1, but a translation into the Syro-Chaldaic. Why hast thou forsaken me? This is neither the language of expostulation nor impatience; for he came to do, and therefore to suffer, the will of the Father. It is merely a believing recitation of the words of the Spirit (Ps. 22: 1), adduced to show that, in obedience to the Father's will, Messiah behaved to be 'cut off,' and left for a time to the triumphant malice of Satan and of wicked men. C.

Ver. 51. Vail. There were two vails, the one at the entrance of the holy place, the other between the holy place and the sanctuary. This was called 'the inner,' and, in He. 9: 3, 'the second vail.' The vail was the emblem of the flesh of Christ, He. 10: 20, which being rent by death, made patent the way into 'the holiest of all,' He. 9: 8. C.

Ver. 60. He rolled a great stone, &c. It is not likely that Joseph, who had hewn a sepulchre out of a rock, would have a door so unartificial as this is sometimes represented—a mere round stone to be rolled up against the entrance. It is much more probable that it was, what may still be seen in the East, a flat circular stone that was rolled in a groove. C.

Ver. 66. Sealing the stone. How this sealing was effected cannot be precisely ascertained. But tombs are still found in the East in which a hole in the circular stone described in the foregoing note (ver. 60) corresponds to one in the rock when the stone is rolled into its place. This hole, it would appear, was intended for a piece of wood or iron, the head of which, if pushed a little within the outer surface of the stone, could easily be so sealed as to render opening without detection quite impossible. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Men, especially wicked rulers, are awfully set upon mischief. Not only commanded devotion, but even necessary sleep, must give way to it.

But dreadful is the reward of treachery to Christ. And the price of blood, the horrors of conscience, and the sorrows of hell, are closely linked together. Yet no alarming convictions, no pretences to piety, can restrain men abandoned to wickedness.—Dreadful from earth, from hell, from heaven, were the sufferings of our Redeemer. Hypocritical rulers, the lately extolling mob, the inwardly convinced heathen governor, the profane soldiers, concur to abuse and murder him. But, alas! at what expense of misery to themselves and posterity, for many ages, do the hardened Jews, who had witnessed his benevolent miracles and heard his saving doctrines, cry for his blood! In the most dreadful manner they tempt him to abandon his work of redemption. But willingly and steadily he persevered in his saving of sinful men! Yea, the malice of the priests and elders, the treachery of Judas, the insolence and imprecations of the mob, the indulgence and obstinacy of Pilate, the insults of the soldiers, the attempt to imprison him in his grave, were all marvelously overruled to accomplish the oracles of God, and for the honour of Jesus and redemption of his church. With pleasure and triumph he therefore breathed out his last. And the most honourable attestations were given to his death. Thrice happy are they who sleep in Jesus!—Then will God, through his death, bring with him, that they may be glorified together.—Stand in awe, then, my soul! avoid sin, lest it bring thee to a miserable end, and entail a curse on my seed. Never value thyself on popular applause, which may so quickly be turned into contempt, malice, and murder. Let me never account anything too much to be given, or to be suffered, for the sake of my dying Redeemer. While others prefer Barabbas, let me adhere to look on and weep with him in every difficulty and danger. Let me never come down from my cross till I can say, It is finished. And let neither death nor the grave terrify me, since Jesus the forerunner hath for me passed through and entered into his glory.—See now, my soul, the dreadful punishment, and in that the nature, of my sin! What is a drowned world, a burning Sodom, a plagued Egypt, an opened hell, in comparison of the Son of God suffering—troubled in spirit, till he knew not what to say—amazed and very heavy—sorrowful, even unto death—in an agony, sweating great drops of blood—tormented and insulted by men—harassed by devils—deserted by God—groaning and giving up the ghost, under the weight of infinite wrath!—Listen, O my soul, how, by every debasement, every strait, every labour, every reproach, every wound, every groan, every tear, every drop of blood, Jesus charges me to come to him, that I may have life! Behold how my debt is paid, my happiness secured, my peace with God procured and confirmed, and my comfort enhanced! There divine righteousness is honored, transgression finished, the curse exhausted, the law magnified, God reconciled, death vanquished, and hell extinguished—and all for me!

CHAPTER XXVIII. Ver. 8. With fear and great joy. The emotions of the human mind are often of a very mixed character, of which this verse presents a very striking example. C.

Ver. 9. 'All hail!' 'Hail,' in Saxon, was used to signify health, prosperity, and every kind of blessing and good. 'All hail!' means, therefore, All health, &c., be to you! C.

Ver. 13. The statement of the watch contains the proof of its own falsehood. Had they said, 'Some persons unknown have stolen him,' they might have been believed. But when they charge the stealing against the disciples, and yet acknowledge they themselves were asleep when the theft was committed, they are asserting what they could not know, and are therefore entitled to no credence. That this falsehood was diligently dissemi-they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him.

10 Then said Jesus unto them, *Be not afraid: go¹ tell my brethren, that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

11 ¶ Now when they were going, behold some of the watch came into the city,⁶ and showed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

12 And *when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers,

2 The concluding verses of this Gospel are among the most precious in the Bible. Christ's declaration that universal sovereignty is given to him, in his mediatorial capacity, King and Head of his church, is the basis of what follows. 'Go ye therefore; I am your King, and you are bound to obey; I am omnipotent, and you must succeed. Go and make disciples of all nations'—never cease until all mankind become mine. Go and teach them what I have commanded you.—my word is to be your sole text-book. Act thus, 'AND, lo, I am with you always.'—P.

15 So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

nated is evident from Justin Martyr. Traces of it may also be found in the Rabbinical writers. C.

Ver. 18. All power is given unto me—of which he had shown specimens upon earth in repelling Satan, casting out demons, healing diseases, raising the dead, producing food, stilling the tempest, smiting the barren fig-tree, and convincing and converting sinners. This power was given to him as Mediator, God and man in one person, in which character he held it not inherently but derivatively from the Father. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Jesus, who was delivered for our offences, rises again for our justification! In the most solemn and reasonable manner JEHOVAH liberates our Savior when man is redeemed. And great earthquakes, mighty angels, risen saints, suspicious disciples, terrified soldiers, and an empty grave, are made joint witnesses of this leading article of our Christian faith. Yea, even the self-destructive lie, contrived by the Jewish rulers to refute it, indirectly confirms it. But O how great was his kindness in acknowledging those for brethren who had lately forsaken him, and solemnly to visit those who had so shamefully deserted and so sinfully suspected him. Great are the joys which spring from his being; as God-man, made governor of all things in heaven and earth for the good of his church. What extending of her limits! What discipling of the Gentiles! What solemn admission of them into the family and instruction of them in the things of God. We have need then to hold fellowship with him in every ordinance, and obey him in every command; and, even under the best ministry, to try everything by his laws, and to depend on him in every circumstance for his promised presence.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MATTHEW.

Matthew was early called to be a disciple and apostle. From that time forward he was a constant attendant upon our Lord; and so, amply qualified to relate 'the things that he both saw and heard.' The Gospel by Matthew is distinguished by the length at which he has related several of our Lord's discourses. Take as examples, the sermon on the mount, his charge to the apostles, his parabolic illustrations of the nature of his kingdom, and his prophecy concerning Jerusalem and the judgment to come. He is also remarkable for the particularity with which he has related so many of our Lord's most wonderful replies to the cavils of his adversaries—replies in which may be found what many of the deepest reasoners of this world have sought in vain—the principle by which evidence rises above probability, and attains to certainty. This our Lord shows to be found in uniformity—in judging of one thing upon exactly the same principles that we judge by in another. By this he silenced the scribes, Pharisees, and Herodians—compelling them, by their judgment in their own case, either to yield to his arguments or shrink away in silence. Of this important principle of reasoning examples may be found, ch. 12. 1-5; 15. 1-9; 16. 1-3; 21. 23-27; 22. 15-22, 41-46.—As the original purpose of the Gospel is to instruct the ignorant, and convince unbelievers, it is presented to us with all the historic evidence that entitles it to the acceptance of reasonable men. It is affirmed by competent witnesses—related with great simplicity;—and that the historians believed their own statements, their sufferings in defence of their testimony sufficiently demonstrate. Upon these grounds it was necessary the Gospel should first stand, so that no unbeliever would be able to screen his infidelity under any pretended want of ordinary historic evidence. Still it is to be remembered, that, while this species of evidence for revelation, like the evidence for the being of a God from the light of nature and creation, is sufficient to leave men without excuse, the believer ascends to a higher ground—the prophecies fulfilled, and the miracles wrought in attestation of our Lord's commission, and the commission emanating from him to his disciples, with the promise of the Holy Spirit to 'bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he had said to them,' and certainly to 'guide them into all truth.'

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT MARK.

Mark, the writer of the following Gospel, is generally supposed to be the person called John, surnamed Mark, who was nephew to Barnabas, Col. 4. 10, and the son of that Mary at whose house many were assembled praying when Peter was delivered from prison, Ac. 12. 12. Peter calls him 'Marcus my son,' 1 Pe. 5. 13, most probably as Paul calls Timothy 'my son in the gospel,' both being spiritual children of their respective fathers in Christ. He accompanied Paul in his travels, Ac. 12. 25; 13. 5-13; 15. 36-41; 2 Ti. 4. 11; Phil. 24; and he is said to have been amanuensis to Peter, and to have prepared his gospel narrative under Peter's inspection, and chiefly for the use of the Gentile converts. The internal evidence of this Gospel seems to favour this statement, for many things particularly honourable to Peter are omitted, while his weaknesses and faults are minutely detailed; given, as it were, con amore, not with the vain ostentation of a proud humility, but with the inward desire to humble the sinner and exalt the Saviour. Some learned commentators have represented it as an abridgment of the larger narrative of Matthew. But though there is doubtless a considerable agreement, yet Mark omits many important particulars mentioned by Matthew, and adds others, dilating upon some things only cursorily noticed by Matthew, and differs from him considerably in the order of time. So that, these things considered, there can appear no reason for supposing one Gospel an abridgment of the other, but that each is an independent narrative of the same events, derived from the same sources, and varying only as it pleased the Holy Spirit that the one should form a supplement or exposition to the other. That the Gospel of Mark was originally written in Greek, is the uniform voice of antiquity; though some, on the ground of a few Latin words, have supposed it originally written in Latin. But the use of a few Latin words in a Greek discourse may be easily accounted for by the residence of Mark at Rome, and the fact of his writing for a people who generally spoke Latin, yet as generally read and understood Greek, and considered it the most efficient vehicle for public instruction. Mark, as writing more immediately for the Gentiles, omits the genealogy of our Lord, so specially recorded by Matthew and Luke; but though omitting his record as 'Son of man,' he opens his history with asserting him to have been 'the Son of God.' C.

MONASTERY AT THE BROOK CHERITH—WHERE CHRIST FASTED FORTY DAYS AND FORTY NIGHTS. [Mark, i:13.]—One of the most sublime ravines in Palestine. The founders of the monastery on the mountain's side believed it to be the site, or near the site, of Elijah's hiding place during the miraculous drouth that occurred in Ahab's reign, and where he was fed by ravens, while the famine raged in Palestine. In this region Christ wandered when he was driven by the spirit into the wilderness after the opening heavens, the descending dove and the Father's voice. Here He was with the wild beasts; here He fasted forty days and forty nights; here He resisted the temptations of the adversary by the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. It is a most desolate place.

One or two other characteristics of Mark's Gospel are worthy of note:—(1) It contains fewer quotations from the Old Testament than the other Gospels. The reason is obvious; such quotations would not have been received as authoritative by those to whom the Gospel was immediately addressed. (2) It contains explanations of Jewish rites. (3) It gives interpretations of Aramaic words. (4) Passages abound in which hopes are held out to the heathen of admission to the kingdom of heaven even without the Jews, ch. 12. 9, and in which the religion of the heart is placed far above mere formality, ch. 2. 18; 3. 1-5; 7. 5-23. (5) It describes with greater minuteness and graphic power some of the events of our Lord's life than the other Gospels. It dwells more on the acts and history of Christ than on his sayings:—His displays of divine power; his war with and victory over Satan; his universal benevolence; his defence and development of all that is noble, good, and pure. In a word, Mark exhibits Jesus as the founder of a religion divine in its origin, pure in its principles, and ennobling in its results. P.

CHAPTER I.

1 The office of John the Baptist. 9 Jesus is baptized, 12 tempted of the devil, 14 he preacheth: 16 calleth Peter, Andrew, James, and John: 23 healeth one that had a devil, 29 Peter's mother-in-law, 32 many diseased persons, 40 and cleanseth the leper.

THE 'beginning' of the gospel of Jesus Christ, 'the Son of God.'

2 As it is 'written in the prophets,' 'Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.'

3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 John^o did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for⁴ the remission of sins.

5 And^a there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, 'confessing their sins.'

6 And John was 'clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;

7 And preached, saying, 'There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.'

8 I^o indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

9 ¶ And^a it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10 And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened,⁵ and the Spirit,⁶ like a dove, descending upon him:

11 And 'there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.⁶

12 ¶ And^a immediately the Spirit driveth him⁷ into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was 'with the wild beasts; and the angels 'ministered unto him.⁸

38 We have three independent accounts of the baptism. In the English version the words of the 'voice from heaven' are different in all three. In Matthew they are as follows:—'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.' In Mark: 'Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.' In the Greek Mark differs from Luke only in one word; the former has &c. ('whom'), the latter &c. ('thee'). The best MSS. have &c. in both, and this is the true reading; so that Mark and Luke exactly agree. In them 'the voice' speaks to Jesus. In Matthew 'the voice' speaks to the people. 'This is,' &c. Is it not probable, is it not natural, to conclude that both utterances were given?—P.

14 ¶ Now after that 'John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching 'the gospel of the kingdom of God, 15 And saying, 'The time is fulfilled, 'and the kingdom of God is at hand: 'repent ye, and believe the gospel.

16 ¶ Now^a as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become 'fishers of men.

18 And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 And when he had gone a little further thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship, mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them: and they 'left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 And^a they went into Capernaum: and straightway on the sabbath-day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22 And^a they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

23 ¶ And^a there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out,

24 Saying, 'Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, 'the Holy One of God.⁹

25 And Jesus 'rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26 And^a when the unclean spirit had torn 'him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 And^a they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, 'What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 4. The baptism of repentance—because his principal topic was calling 'a generation of vipers' to repent, and 'flee from the wrath to come,' see Mat. 1. 7, 8; and his chief argument to enforce attention and obedience was the doctrine of the grace of God, which proclaims to every believing penitent sinner remission of his sins through Jesus Christ. C.

Ver. 10. Straightway. That is, 'And coming up out of the water, he (John) straightway (immediately after) saw the Spirit descending,' &c. Bloomfield, in conjunction with some very high authorities, says it was Jesus, and not JOHN, who saw the Spirit descending; but a reference to Jn. 1. 32-34 seems to refer it unquestionably to John. C.—Like a dove. The expression does not define the form of appearance (though we learn from Luke that it was in a bodily form), but the manner of its descent, namely, like the rapid gliding of a dove. Bloomfield.

Ver. 13. Wild beasts are not mentioned by Matthew, for he wrote for Jews who knew the wilderness; but they are mentioned by Mark, who wrote for Roman citizens, and to whom this circumstance would afford a striking feature in our Lord's temptation. C.

REFLECTIONS.—John delightfully, but humbly, prepares the way that grace and truth may come through our incarnate God. But the greatest of ministers are

¹ As this occurred, not in the high-priesthood of Abiathar, but of his father Ahimelech, 'Abiathar' has been considered the error of a transcriber, or a second name of Ahimelech. The first supposition is utterly unsupported by authority of MSS., the second is unnecessary, for the transaction literally occurred 'in the days of Abiathar (who became) the high-priest,' 1 Sa. 22.20-23.

we seek him. Wisely he connects every duty with its proper season, and proportions his people's services to their ability. Let then his word be my rule, and his authority my obligation, in observing his Sabbaths and ordinances: and let his grace make me prize his service, since all is designed for my profit.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 5. Looked round about on them with anger, being grieved. The word εἶδεν does not necessarily signify he saw, but may import he considered. The first feeling of our Lord was grief for the calamities of the people. The first and inevitable consequence of that hardness of heart. The second, that emotion of dissatisfaction with which a holy mind, the image of a holy God, must always regard sin, the common enemy both of God and man. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Attendance on Christ for his healing power and grace is always hopeful. No day is unseasonable for works of mercy, especially in dealing with him. And if he order us to give dead hearts, or stretch out withered hands, himself must afford the ability. The most earnest gospel calls are in vain without the loving power of his grace. Many, alas! by their obstinacy and hardness of heart, provoke his grief and indignation, and return him hatred, murder, and blasphemy for his kindness!—and men deny and abuse him whom even devils confess and obey! But it is highly absurd to pretend his connection with Satan, when their interests are so evidently contrary. And dreadful is that presumption which leads to the unpardonable sin. Professors should carefully avoid this infallible cause of ruin. Very honourable is a spiritual relation to Christ, and an active faithfulness in his service. If then he graciously call me to his work, let no censures of men deter or importunity of friends divert me from it.

TRAVELING IN GALILEE. [Mark, iii:7, 8.]—Jesus Christ was brought up in Galilee and often traveled through it. This scene is one common to the country. Every day one is likely to meet families traveling just as is here shown. Things never change in Palestine. As they travel to-day, they have always traveled, and there is no doubt that our Savior witnessed many just such scenes as the one here photographed. A couple of boxes are strapped on the back of a mule or donkey so that one box balances the other. Then a part of the family occupy one box while the remainder occupy the other. The head of the household goes in front to lead the mule and to protect and guide his loved ones. One is constantly impressed with the air of contentment which seems to gather in the faces of the people in this country.

28 Verily⁸ I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme:

29 But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation;

CHAPTER IV.

1 The parable of the sower, 14 and the meaning thereof. 21 We must communicate the light of our knowledge to others. 26 The parable of the seed growing secretly, 30 and of the mustard-seed. 35 Christ stilleth a tempest by his word.

AND he^a began again to teach by the sea-side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he ^{entered} into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

2 And he taught them many things ^{by} parables, and said unto them in his doctrine,

3 Hearken;^a Behold, there went out a sower to sow:¹

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way-side, and ^{the} fowls of the air came and devoured it up.

5 And some fell on ^{stony} ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth:

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched; ^{and} because it had no root, it withered away.

7 And ^{some} fell among thorns; and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And ^{other} fell on good ground, and did ^{yield} fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred.

9 And he said unto them, ^{He} that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶ And ^{when} he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable.

11 And he said unto them, ^{Unto} you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God; but unto them ^{that} are without,² all ^{these} things are done in parables:

12 That^a seeing they may see, and not perceive;³ and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and ^{their} sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he said unto them, ^{Know} ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

14 ¶ The sower soweth the word.

15 And these are ^{they} by the way-side, where the word is sown; but when they have

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 26-29. As Mark very commonly relates the same facts as Matthew, so this is the only parable which Mark relates that is not mentioned by Matthew. The scope of it is to show that the gospel, being once published in the world in a gradual and mysterious manner, should produce a large church therein before the end of time; and that a vital principle of grace, being once planted in a soul, gradually and insensibly increases in strength, vigour, and appear heard, "Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are "they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And "have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And "these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, 19 And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

20 And "these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

21 ¶ And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 For^b there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 If^c any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he said unto them, "Take heed what ye hear: "with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you; and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 For^d he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 And he said, "So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast "seed into the ground,

27 And should sleep and rise, night and day, and the seed should "spring and grow up, he knoweth not how.^e

28 For "the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; "first the blade, then the ear; after that, the full corn in the ear.^f

29 But "when the fruit is brought forth," immediately "he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 ¶ And he said, "Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31 It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth:

32 But when it is sown, it "groweth up, and

¶ The end of this parable is to show that when our Lord should have preached and announced his gospel, by his resurrection and the outpouring of his Spirit, he would then be received into heaven and seem to leave the word to the mere impulse of natural causes—that is, to the judgment, liberality, effort, zeal, &c. to the very emulation, jealousies, & passions of men—yet during all this time would be watching over his field with the eye of the skillful husbandman, and would cut down and gather it the moment it became ripe for the harvest, either of life or condemnation.—C.

ance, and in fruits of holiness, which shall be graciously rewarded in the day of judgment.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! that so much of God's truth should be sown in our world to so little purpose! Unfruitful hearers of the gospel are everywhere numerous; and they who mix faith with the Word, to the salvation and sanctification of their souls, are, alas! very few. There is great need therefore to watch carefully against Satan, and the snares which arise from the pleasures, cares, and terrors of this world. Diligently should we consider how and what we hear; and look well to our hearts, that they be truly sincere and upright; yea, look upward for God's grace to render us fruitful in works of righteousness. Thrice happy is it to be the distinguished objects of Jesus' love, to know the secrets of his grace, and to become careful improvers of whatever gifts or graces he hath given us, that we may abound therein! His work in his church, and in every renewed heart, may indeed be preserved, gradually increased, and at last perfected. In every storm his presence secures the safety of his church, and his word can silence all our fears and troubles. And while he remains the mighty God and Prince of Peace, we need never doubt either of his power or will to save to the uttermost.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 3. His dwelling among the tombs. The

THE GADARENE COUNTRY—SHOWING THE PLACE WHERE THE DEVILS ENTERED INTO THE HERD OF SWINE. [Mark, v:1.]—
 The Gadarene country lies east of the Jordan. From the point of our present view we see the dim outlines, beyond the Sea of Galilee, of part of the Gadarene country. It is supposed that the swine into which the devils entered ran violently down the steep hill opposite the present city of Tiberias. So that in this view we are looking at about the place where this notable miracle of our Savior was wrought. There are little boats also out on the lake we see, which are used by the boatmen to carry tourists across the lake. The Gadarene country gets its name from the city of Gadara, which is some miles beyond the Sea of Galilee. This view was taken from a point near an old wall, by the edge of the lake.

of the most high God? 'I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

8 For he said unto him, 'Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

9 And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion;³ for we are many.⁴

10 And he⁵ besought him much, that he would not send them away out of the country.⁶

11 Now there was there, nigh unto the mountains, a great herd of swine feeding.

12 And¹ all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

13 And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand,) and were choked in the sea.⁷

14 And² they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and see him that⁴ was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

16 And they that saw it, told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine.

17 And¹ they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

18 And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil prayed him that he might be with him.

19 Howbeit, Jesus suffered him not,³ but saith unto him, 'Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

20 And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis⁹ how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

21 ¶ And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him: and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 And,^{*} behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue,¹ Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet,

23 And besought him greatly, saying, 'My tombs of the East are often roomy and ornamented caves cut in the faces of rocks, or builded on the surface of the earth with stone. That in ancient times they were often used as dwelling-houses, is recorded in Diogenes Laërtius, ix. 38; and in modern times the subterranean tombs of Egypt are often so occupied by the Arabs. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of natural men who are filled with and governed by devils. Cruelly they tyrannize over their vassals, and furiously work in them, so that no restraints of human laws, solemn vows, awful or engaging providences, nor even common operations of the Holy Ghost, can in the least avail. But great is the mercy that Christ's compassion is infinitely greater than Satan's implacable malice, and his saving power infinitely superior to all his fury; and when he casts out the unclean spirit, he puts a new heart and a right spirit within us. In the most fearful forms he sometimes punishes worldlings by the hand of their own master, for the manifestation of his own power and grace. And great is their folly and wickedness who prefer their secular interests to Jesus Christ and his salvation, and, from inordinate love to the world, desire him to depart from them. If he take them at their word, how dismal is the consequence! But if some reject him, others will rise up ready to receive him. And no distance, no filthiness, no shame, no fear, no discouragement, no derision, no death, shall hinder their health, their comfort, their life, who apply to him; while vain, and even hurtful, are all other means of relief when used without due subordination to him. Even saints are ready to tremble when they ought to triumph; for Jesus often, by voluntary delays, lets the case, even of his most earnest supplicants, become apparently desperate before he grants relief. And scoffers exclude themselves from the means of their conviction. But if his mighty works must sometimes be only the subjects of private adoration and praise, cheerfully ought we to proclaim them, when it is most seasonable, and subservient to his and his Father's glory, and the benefit of mankind.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—It is strange that sinners should so cavil at, condemn, and rage against the Redeemer, and labour to lay hindrances in 28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29 And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

30 ¶ And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught.

31 And he said unto them, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat."

32 And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

33 And the people saw them departing, and many knew him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.

34 ¶ And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd; and he began to teach them many things.

35 And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed:

36 Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat.

37 He answered and said unto them, "Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, 'Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat?'"

38 He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes.

39 And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks by hundreds, and by fifties.

41 And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all.

42 And they did all eat, and were filled.

43 And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes.

44 And they that did eat of the loaves were about five thousand men.

One of the chief difficulties is found in the assertion, that "many knew him," which suggests the idea of an interpretation, as few could be supposed ignorant of his person where he had resided so long, and had wrought so many miracles. It is with great deference suggested that the difficulty may be better solved by translating "and many knew him"—"and many knew it," that is, the desert place to which our Lord and his disciples were bound (see ver. 31); and so while they doubted some headland in the boat the people crossed the peninsula, and ran thither on foot, &c.—C.

49 But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out:

50 For they all saw him, and were troubled. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The Pharisees find fault with the disciples for eating with unwashed hands. 8 They break the commandments of God by the traditions of men. 14 Meat defileth not a man. 24 He healeth the Syrophenician woman's daughter of an unclean spirit, 31 and one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech.

THEN came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem.

2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled,¹ that is to say, with unwashed, hands, they found fault.

3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft,² eat not, holding the tradition of the elders.

4 And when they come from the market, except they wash,³ they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received their errand will furnish them for it, own them in it, and make it the duty and inclination of hearers to honour and support them for their work's sake. On him therefore they ought to depend for maintenance and protection, neither entangling themselves with the affairs of this life nor fearing the faces of men. Terrible is their case who hear but reject the gospel. And most deplorable the situation of those who are under the direction of ignorant and unfaithful ministers. Men's lusts will drive them to the most fearful lengths when once they are fully entangled. And none are more base than abandoned women. Yea, carnal pretences to fidelity and honour often plunge men into the most bloody crimes, and at last into the depths of hell. But if men seek Jesus, even with natural seriousness, how great his tender compassion to them, and his concern that neither soul nor body should suffer hurt in his service. He is ready to heal every disease and to

SIDON, FROM THE SEA. [Mark, vii:24.]—Sidon was one of the great cities of Phœnicia. The first journey our Savior ever made outside of Palestine proper was into Phœnicia. It is not known whether He ever entered into Tyre or Sidon. We are told that He went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon and entered into a house, and would have no man know it, but He could not be hid. It was during this excursion into the country of the heathen that He drove the unclean spirit from the daughter of the Syro-Phœnician woman. From what is said of St. Paul in Acts, xxvii:3, we are authorized to conclude that he had friends in Sidon, and that he made a visit to the city during one of the missionary journeys. Silks and fruits are extensively raised in the neighborhood of Sidon to-day.

to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots,⁴ brazen vessels, and of ⁵tables.⁶

5 Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why^a walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashed hands?

6 He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you ⁷'hypocrites,' as it is written, ⁸'This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.'

7 Howbeit, in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

8 For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

9 And he said unto them, ¹⁰'Full well ye reject⁸ the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.'

10 For Moses said, ¹¹'Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death.'

11 But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, ¹²'It is Corban,'⁹ that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; ¹³he shall be free.

12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother;

13 Making^a the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

14 ¶ And^a when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand:

15 There^a is nothing from without a man that, entering into him, can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man.

16 If^a any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 And^a when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable.

18 And he saith unto them, ¹⁹'Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him;

6 The explanations contained in ver. 2-4 are peculiar to Mark; they are not found in the parallel passage in Mat. xv. The reason is, Matthew wrote for Jews who were familiar with their own traditions and customs; but Mark wrote for Gentiles, who required full information on such matters ere they could comprehend the force and meaning of Christ's rebuke.—P.

17 A man that was born deaf, could not, by ordinary means, have learned to speak; and, therefore, could not be said to have 'an impediment in his speech'; that is, to be a stammerer. The case seems to indicate one that had been born with the power of hearing, and had learned the use of the organs of speech; but who, having lost his hearing, and whose tongue being also partially affected, retained merely the power of inarticulate and unintelligible sounds—and was therefore, so far as meaning was concerned, absolutely dumb. 20 And he said, ²¹'That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man.'

21 For^a from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, 23 All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

28 And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: ²⁹'yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.'

supply every want. And he can feed them in a wilderness, or walk on floods for their help. If then he manifest his power and his glory in our deliverance, let us never turn again to folly, nor give way to hardness and unbelief.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 9. Full well. This is commonly pronounced an irony; but such a figure seems utterly unsuited to the character of Christ. But as no meaning can be fairly extracted from the word καλως, except one cognate to 'fairly, justly, properly, full well,' &c., may not the imagined irony be removed by taking the words interrogatively? 'And he said unto them, Do you properly set aside the commandment of God that you may establish your own tradition?' C.

REFLECTIONS.—What self-deceivers are human hearts! The most trifling superstitions are often substituted in the place of the substantial duties of religion and morality. But no devotion, which is not commanded by God, and offered up in faith and sincerity, can be acceptable to him or profitable to us. Alas! what an infernal fountain of wickedness is every unregenerate heart! It is ready to burst forth on every occasion. And there is an absolute necessity of God's offering an abiding principle of life, light, faith, and love, in opposition to our natural corruption. His grace indeed makes a wonderful change even in the weakest believer. It gives the highest and most honourable views of Christ; the tenderest compassion to afflicted friends; earnest importunity in prayer for their relief; and great humility and patience under seeming insults and denials of help. And Jesus sometimes tries the faith of his people by great discouragements, even while he secretly upholds and animates it, till at last he crown it with the full enjoyment of all that it can wish. What complicated diseases spring from our complicated lusts and crimes! And it is a great mercy that Jesus Christ has power over all plagues. Let me then, conscious of sinful pollutions and miseries numbered, look up to him for relief in his own time and way. No hardened heart, deaf ears, nor stammering tongue, can withstand his healing words of power. Let me listen to his instructions with an obedient ear; and ascribe to him, as he shall direct, the glory due to his name, who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working.

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—In following Christ, let me count nothing too hard. Let me trust him with my body as well as my soul: and bread shall be given me, my water shall be sure. Never let my unbelief raise or hesitate at difficulties, as if they were too great for Christ to surmount. And let me never this sacred sea. It was in Bethsaida that a blind man was brought to our Savior, whom he took by the hand and led out of town and healed him. This whole place is given up now to rank grass and weeds, and utter loneliness and desolation claim a spot where once people thronged, and traded, and passed away. It gives us a striking picture of the vanity of building our hopes upon earthly places and prospects.

20 And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit bare

MOUNT TABOR. [Mark, ix:2.]—Mount Tabor competes with Mount Hermon for the glory of being the place of the Transfiguration of our Savior. It is on the road from Jerusalem to Nazareth, and in sight of the latter city. It is one of the mountains upon which our Savior, in his boyhood, doubtless looked every day. It would not seem strange if this had been the mountain selected for the Transfiguration. It is unique in its features. Upon the top of this mountain there are the ruins of an old church, and all who pass this way make a pilgrimage to its top. One of the most magnificent panoramic views can be obtained from the top of Tabor. It overlooks the plain of Jezreel and Nazareth, and the Sea of Galilee, and the Gadarene country, and Mount Carmel far to the south on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea.

him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child:

22 And oftentimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.⁹

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26 And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27 But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

28 And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29 And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing but by prayer and fasting.¹

30 ¶ And he departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it.

31 For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day.

32 But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33 ¶ And he came to Capernaum: and being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest.

35 And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.

36 And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them,

37 Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.³

SITE OF THE TEMPLE. [Mark, xi:27.]—This view gives us the best representation of the premises upon which the temple was situated to be possibly obtained from a photograph. It was taken from the top of a house in the neighborhood, and we are enabled to see the Mosque of Omar and the Mosque of El Aksa, with gates, tombs, pulpits and arches that belong to this wonderful spot. We are able to form a very satisfactory idea of the area on which stood the temple of Solomon a thousand years before Christ, and on which stood the temple of Herod, into which our Savior entered at the time of the royal reception which the multitude gave him. What memories crowd upon us as we look at these sacred precincts! It was here that Abraham offered Isaac, and the scene calls up the illustrious names of Jewish and of Christian history.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against the temple, Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him ^{privately}, 4 Tell^e us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign² when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5 And Jesus, answering them, began to say, Take^e heed lest any man deceive you:

6 For^a many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

7 And⁴ when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but ^{the end} shall not be yet.

8 For^a nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of sorrows.³

9 But¹ take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten;⁴ and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

10 And^a the gospel must first be published among all nations.

11 But² when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

12 Now² the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son: and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 And ^{ye} shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: ^{but} he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 But² when ye shall see the abomination of g The apparent discrepancy between the questions in these places, and those given by Matthew (ch.24.3) is to be accounted for, not by any defect in the recollection of Mark, but by that guidance of Spirit whereby he was led to select such points as would be most intelligible to his Roman readers. See ch.12.29. Besides, it is not to be imagined when four persons put the questions, that all should employ exactly the same words. The Spirit, therefore, directed the evangelist to choose, not the words Matthew had been directed to choose, but the words of any other of the four apostles more suited to the comprehension of the readers for whom the Gospel was first intended, as well as for the future edification of the church.—C.

judgments. God is administering the universe in Jesus Christ. And great is his kindness in warning men before their contempt of himself and his gospel bring on them those temporal miseries which presage their eternal destruction. Kindly he chastens his people that they may be kept in mind of their own weakness; and graciously he warns them of their danger, and directs them how to conduct themselves for his honour and their own security. Safely he preserves through the worst times those who cling to him and walk in him. And many who persecute them owe their temporal preservation to them and their prayers.—If men bear his image they must expect hatred from the world, even from their nearest carnal relations. The enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent shall never cease. But let them do their worst, God will cause his gospel to spread through the world, and will support his

MOUNTAINS OF JUDEA—SHOWING BIRTHPLACE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST. [Mark, xiii:14.]—In this view we have an excellent picture of the Judean mountains. We get an idea of the sweep of the hills, of the terraces of the mountains. About the center of the picture we see the olive groves, and then in the far distance, rising up from the side of the hill, we see a little village which, according to tradition, was the birthplace of John the Baptist. It was to this village that Mary went to see her cousin Elizabeth, remaining with her six months. Here John the Baptist grew up, and there is a church in his memory there today, called the Church of St. John in the Desert. The character of the place where John the Baptist was born and brought up is in line with the character of that great preacher of repentance. It is solemn and lonely and severe.

BETHANY. [MARK, xiv:3.]—There is no village in the world outside of Bethlehem, where our Savior was born, more attractive than the village of Bethany, where He so often sojourned with His friends, Lazarus and Mary and Martha. Here Jesus came to rest after the toil and conflicts of the day in Jerusalem. Here He found friends who understood Him and sympathized with Him; and His connection with this little village has endeared it to the hearts of the human race. Here took place the incident of the woman having the alabaster box of ointment, giving rise to an immortal lesson. There is nothing in its present appearance to win consideration for it. Because it was so often the home and resting-place of the Lord Jesus Christ is it so much loved and so often visited to-day. It is two miles from Jerusalem and on the road to Jericho.

34 For the Son of man is 'as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 Watch^a ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning;

36 Lest comings suddenly, he find you sleeping.

37 And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch.^b

CHAPTER XIV.

1 A conspiracy against Christ. 3 Precious ointment is poured on his head by a woman. 10 Judas selleth his Master for money. 12 Christ himself foretelleth how he shall be betrayed by one of his disciples: 22 after the passover prepared, and eaten, instituteth his last supper: 26 declareth aforehand the flight of all his disciples, and Peter's denial of him. 43 Judas betrayeth him with a kiss. 46 He is apprehended in the garden, 53 falsely accused, and impiously denied of the Jews' council: 65 shamefully abused by them. 66 Peter's denial, and repentance.

AFTER two^a days was the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread:¹ and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 But^b they said, Not on the feast-day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

3 ¶ And^c being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster-box of ointment of spikenard,² very precious; and she brake the box,³ and poured it on his head.⁴

4 And^d there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence,⁵ and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 For^e ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always.

8 She hath done what she could:⁶ she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

3 She brake the box. The word translated breaks, signifies to rub together, to crush, to break in pieces. Some take it here to signify to shake up—translate, 'very precious' by 'liquid,' as on the margin. The breaking can scarcely be spoken of the box itself; but most probably is spoken of the envelope or case in which the box was inclosed, or the seal or cement by which it was secured. The idea of shaking being necessary to 'bring it into a proper state of liquidity,' as some suppose, proceeds upon attention to the low temperature at which such oils are perfectly liquefied, and the advanced state of the year in the warm climate of Palestine.—C.

7 This is one of those minute and delicate details which I have often noted as characteristic of Mark. It completes the picture. Mary has pondered, probably long and anxiously, how she could most palpably show her esteem and devotion to Jesus. She procured this precious ointment—perhaps spending her all upon it—and poured it upon her beloved Lord. She may have had some dim foresight of his death; and her act may have been one of faith as well as devotion. However this may be, she did all in her power to testify her supreme love and honour for the Messiah; so he understood and appreciated it; and so he has proclaimed it to all generations in these striking words recorded by Mark:—

8 She hath done what she could.—P.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—Redeeming love accepted in the heart inflames it with the strongest gratitude. Nothing is thought too costly to manifest regard to the Redeemer. And they that honour him shall be sufficiently vindicated and honoured; wherever the fame of Jesus goes, thither shall theirs go at last.

faithful servants and followers; guide them by his counsel while here, and afterwards receive them to glory. And nothing is more proper to preserve us steady and faithful in evil times than constant watchfulness and fervent prayer. In so doing we shall be able, at Jesus' tribunal, to give our account with joy, and not with grief.

And in whatever point we have his orders, we may go forth depending on his providence for success.—Never is the church on earth altogether free from treacherous hypocrites; and they who are most so are the most backward to suspect themselves. But O how astonishing is the love of Jesus, who put an end to the GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE. [Mark, xiv:32.]—Between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives, in the valley of the Kedron, there is a place that no one ever fails to visit while in Palestine—it is the Garden of Gethsemane. There is about an acre of ground enclosed by a fence, and an old olive tree that is said to date from the time of Christ himself, and flowers of all varieties beautifully cultivated and kept by the faithful and devoted monks. Here it was that our Savior met his disciples for the last conference and prayer before the crucifixion. One cannot enter and return from this garden without being a tenderer and better man—something here appeals to the highest and deepest sentiments within the human heart. The flowers which grow in this sacred enclosure are cut by the monks and given in small bouquets to the tourists.

31 But^a he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. ^bLikewise also said they all.

32 ¶ And^c they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I ^dshall pray.

33 And he taketh with him ^ePeter and James and John, and began to be ^fsore amazed, and to be very heavy;

34 And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch.^g

35 And he went forward a little, and ^h"fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

36 Andⁱ he said, Abba,^j Father, "all things are possible unto thee; ^ktake away this cup from me: nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldst^l not thou watch one hour?

38 Watch^m ye, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. ⁿThe spirit truly ^ois ready, but the flesh ^pis weak.

39 And ^qagain he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them asleep^r again, (for their eyes were heavy,) neither wist they what to answer him.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, ^s"Sleep on now, and take ^tyour rest: it^u is enough, the hour is come: behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43 ¶ And^v immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he: take him, and lead ^whim away safely.

45 And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master,^x Master,^y and kissed him.

46 And^z they laid their hands on him, and took him.

47 And^{aa} one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high-priest, and cut off his ear.

48 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and ^{ab}with staves to take me?

¶ Abba, in the Syriac, signifies Father; and was the title given to a father by those who were born Jews and were free. Hence it was not allowed for a child born of a slave or proselyte of the gate, and a Jew, to call his father abba; because, among the Jews, the condition of the children depending either upon the real or adopted mother, none were reputed Jews unless born of a Jewish mother or proselyte of the covenant. Neither were children free if their mother was a slave. Ga. 4.24. But though on coming into the world Chai, took upon him 'the form of a servant,' yet being still 'God's dear Son,' he here addresses him by the title peculiar to one 'free born,' and cries to him, in the hour of agony inexpressible, 'Abba, the Father.'

¶ Master, Master. But Matthew says his words were 'Hail, Master.' Is there not, therefore, either a contradiction between the two, or an error in the one or the other? or at least is there not here a clear proof that the inspiration was not verbal; for verbal inspiration would require perfect agreement? The answer to this plausible objection is easy. Verbal inspiration does not require perfect agreement between two or more narratives of the same event—it merely requires perfect truth in each. Judas must have repeated his salutation—'Hail, Master'—a thing most natural. Matthew records the one address, 'Hail, Master;' Mark omits the 'Hail,' and records not all Judas said, but repeats 'Master, Master,' which he actually did say. Why the Holy Spirit directed these different selections of words, we cannot positively tell. The reason most probably, lay in the subtleties of the one address to the cus- toms of the Jews, and of the other to those of the Romans.—C.

¶ And there follows a young man. Who this was, or why at all introduced, does not appear. Conjecture is, at all times, a doubtful guide, and seldom to be followed; yet here, where it cannot do any injury, and may afford a pleasing reflection, we would venture to suggest the possibility at least that this may have been that 'young man' whom Jesus loved. Mat. 10.20; ch. 10.21. and who, repenting of his worldly sorrow (ch. 10.27), had so far complied with our Lord's direction as to reduce himself to the mere loose garment he wore, and who now literally fulfils the injunction by gladly parting with the last remnant of the property which he so dearly loved. But whoever he was, he shows by his example what a man will give up for the safety of his body. What then, should we not renounce for the salvation of our souls?—C.

The apparent discrepancy between this question, and the consequent objection either to the historic accuracy of the evangelist, or the verbal inspiration of this Gospel, will be solved and answered as in the case of ver. 45.

In this case an additional answer to the objection presents itself. The high-priest spoke, most probably, in a dialect of the Syriac, the evangelists translated into Greek, a language rich in words; and, for wise reasons, the Spirit of God may have directed each evangelist to a different, but equivalent translation of the same word.—C.

Great was his love in warning his disciples of their danger, in reproving and pitying their weakness, and in submitting to such sufferings in soul, in body, and in reputation, for the sake of his enemies; and good the confession which he boldly witnessed before many witnesses!—But how amazing is the wickedness of men! Jewish rulers plot to murder the Messiah, on whom hangs the life, the eternal salvation, of millions unnumbered; for a paltry bribe Judas deliberately betrays him; upon a small temptation Peter repeatedly and most awfully denies him; and through an ill-grounded fear of man the other disciples shamefully desert him in his suffering condition! CHAPTER XV.

1 Jesus is brought bound, and accused before Pilate. 15 Upon the clamours of the common people, the murderer Barabbas is loosed, and Jesus delivered up to be crucified. 17 He is crowned with thorns, 19 spit on, and mocked: 21 fainteth in bearing his cross: 27 hangeth between two thieves: 29 suffereth the triumphing reproaches of the Jews: 39 but confessed by the centurion to be the Son of God: 43 and is honourably buried by Joseph.

AND straightway^a in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate.

2 And^b Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he, answering, said unto him, Thou sayest it.

3 And^c the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing.¹

4 And^d Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? Behold how many things they witness against thee.

5 But Jesus yet answered nothing;² so that Pilate marvelled.

6 ¶ Now^e at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired.

7 And^f there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection.

8 And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them.³

9 But Pilate answered them, saying, ^hWill ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

10 For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him ⁱfor envy.

¶ An oriental palace consists of at least two courts, with chambers ranged round, and opening into them. The outer court is usually the place of reception, and of hearing and judging cases. In this court our Lord was examined, and in it a fire was kindled, round which stood the servants and soldiers with

Peter among them.

An entry or passage,

here, called 'the porch,' opened from the court on the street. Peter's first denial took place at the fire in the middle of the court, on his being questioned by the female porter.

Peter then retreats into the passage leading to the street, where he is again questioned, and makes his second denial. The evangelists differ as to the person who questioned him. Mark says,

'the same man;'

Matthew, 'another man;'

Luke, 'another person;'

John, 'the same.'

The truth is, several persons interrogated him, as was very natural under the circumstances. The third denial took place an hour after, within the cock, when our Lord and Peter could see each other. Here

Matthew and Mark speak of several interrogators. Luke has 'some other man;'

John specifies the servant of the high-priest. All are correct. Each evangelist records what struck himself. Mark says the cock crew ed twice; the other evangelists only speak of once. There is no discrepancy.

Mark records with greater minuteness

of detail.—P.

culties which they know not how to surmount, they go forward depending on God, and find them removed; and readily, amidst fear and confusion, they obey the heavenly direction.—Happy are they who have a risen Redeemer as theirs, with all mercy in his heart and all power in his hand! How marvellous his love in appearing first to Mary Magdalene, who had been lately so notorious a sinner; and so early to disciples, who had so shamefully deserted him! How careful was he to establish the truth of his resurrection by repeated appearances to his incredulous followers! He conquered their unreasonable diffidence, and shamed them out of their unbelief. But great was his grace in granting his apostles an unlimited commission to preach the gospel in all the world, and miraculous powers to attest it. And astonishing is his glory in heaven, and the blessed effects of it in the descent of his Spirit.—Let me now then believe the gospel to the saving of my soul. Let my faith and hope be in God through him. Let me rejoice in my risen, my ascended Saviour; and eagerly ask, and abundantly receive, the gifts which he received for men, even for the rebellious. And let my affections be set on things above, where Jesus is at the right hand of God.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MARK.

Biography is, certainly, one of the most efficient modes of instruction; for by gratifying curiosity, it lightens study, and excites attention, while it conveys and fixes precept by the visible power of example. In the biographies, however, composed by worldly men—nay, sometimes in those composed by religious men—minute and trivial details are often so extended as to beget a fear that the idolatry of friendship has rather attempted to set up an object of admiration and worship, than to record important facts either for warning against error and sin, or instruction in truth and righteousness.

Among the numerous internal evidences of the divine origin of the Scriptures, their biographies hold a conspicuous place; their chief characteristics being truth, concerning good or evil, and brevity. Had the life of our Lord been 'a cunningly devised fable,' it contains materials for many volumes, which literary vanity never could have compressed into four brief tracts, such as the Gospels literally are. This observation applies in a particular manner to the Gospel by Mark, which reduces the whole ministerial life of the most remarkable character that ever appeared on earth to sixteen chapters! Mark was not himself, so far as appears, a constant companion of our Lord, and so must have received several of his narratives, and especially whatever he records of our Lord's private discourses, from one of the twelve apostles, who is believed to have been Peter. That the style and contents of his Gospel are somewhat similar to those of Matthew, is certain; yet are there differences, both of omission and addition, to prove that he was no copyist; and especially there are some marks of style that prove the distinct originality of Mark,—the Spirit of God making use of the various styles of men—the words being his own—just as in nature God manifests a continued variety, though that boundless variety unites in one witness to his wisdom, power, and goodness.

As an example of Mark's peculiarity of style, one word may be selected, the word εὐθὺς, immediately; which occurs in Matthew 15 times, in Luke 8 times, in John 4 times, in Acts 9 times, and in Mark no less than 39 times! A peculiarity so striking that were it certain that the evangelist was that John Mark who was servant to Paul and Barnabas (Ac. 15. 37-39), his so frequent use of the word might be looked upon as a result and memorial of that ready and habitual attention with which he was accustomed to reply to their directions.

That he wrote for Gentile strangers is obvious from the following, among other evidences. 1. When he mentions the Jordan (ch. 1. 5), the appellation river is added. 2. As the Romans could not understand the Jewish phrase 'defiled' hands, he adds, parenthetically, the description 'unwashed' (ch. 7. 2). 3. When he uses the word 'corban' (ch. 7. 11), he immediately subjoins the interpretation, 'that is, gift.' 4. In speaking of our Lord he never styles him 'Son of man,' which the Jews could interpret from Daniel (ch. 7. 13), but 'Son of God,' by which the Gentiles might comprehend his deity.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT LUKE.

Luke was a physician, Col. 4. 14: and attended Paul about seventeen years after his coming into Macedonia, Ac. 16. 10: probably till his death, 2 Ti. 4. 11. He wrote this history of the life of Christ, perhaps about twenty-two, or rather thirty years after his ascension; and includes therein a multitude of things, not mentioned by Matthew nor Mark, concerning the birth and private life of John the Baptist and Jesus Christ, ch. i. ii.; Christ's genealogy, ch. iii.; his preaching and persecution at Nazareth, ch. iv.; his sermon on the plain, ch. vi.; his raising the widow's son, and parable of the debtors, ch. vii.; his mission of the seventy; direction of the lawyer as to the way of eternal life; parable of the Samaritan, and reproof of Martha, ch. x.; his directions to pray; parable of the importunate friend, ch. xi.; and of the rich fool, ch. xii.; his alarm to repentance, &c.; his parable of the barren fig-tree; his healing the deformed woman, ch. xiii.; his cure of the dropsy; parables of the supper, builder, and king intending to make war, ch. xiv.; his parables of the lost sheep, piece of silver, younger son, unjust steward, and of Lazarus, ch. xv. xvi.; his parable of the servant; his healing ten lepers; his warning as to the awful manner of setting up his kingdom, ch. xvii.; his parable of the importunate widow, and of the Pharisee and publican, ch. xviii.; the conversion of Zaccheus; parable of the pounds; mournful prediction of Jerusalem's ruin, ch. xix.; his abuse by Herod, ch. xxiii.; and conversation with the disciples going to Emmaus; and with the eleven, &c., ch. xxiv.

[The references of Luke to the Old Testament are Ge. 7. 27; 18. 19; 19. 26; Ex. 23. 15-17; Le. 19. 18; De. 6. 5-13; 16. 1-16; 2 Sa. 7. 11, 12; 1 Ki. 10. 1; 17. 9; 2 Ki. 5. 14; 1 Ch. 24. 10-19; 2 Ch. 8. 14; 24. 20, 21; Pa. 91. 11; 118. 22, 26; 132. 11; Is. 8. 14; 9. 2; 35. 5; 46. 3; 50. 6; 52. 10; 53. 1, 2; Da. 9. 26, 27; Mi. 3. 12. The origin and object of Luke's Gospel are stated by himself. Others had taken in hand to draw up narratives of our Lord's life and labours, he resolved to write a more complete history. The other narratives to which he refers were not the canonical Gospels; they appear to have been fragmentary biographies written without divine authority, and consequently imperfect, and probably erroneous. Luke, with these before him, undertook in the interests of the church, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, to draw up a full and authentic narrative. He was not himself an eye-witness of Christ's labours; but he received his information from

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN IN THE DESERT. [Luke, i:5.]—The Church of St. John is built over the exact spot where it is supposed once stood the house in which lived Zachariah and Elizabeth. This is at Ain Karim. We have a distant view of this village from the Jerusalem road lying indistinct in the midst of the Judean mountains. Now we are on the very spot that is sacred to the memory of Elizabeth and Zachariah and John the Baptist. This church was built by the affection and piety of the saints of the early ages. For hundreds of years monks and priests and unworldly Christians found pleasure in living in the neighborhood of this sacred place. It is about nine miles from Jerusalem. Here Mary came from Nazareth and spent six months with her cousin Elizabeth.

favour; but has denied the blessings of his kingdom to such as are rich in this world, or abound in self-conceit. 68. Let all praise, honour, and blessing be ascribed to that God who, after a long apparent neglect of his people, is now, in infinite kindness, sending his Son to save and redeem them, and who is now raising up his long-promised Messiah to exalt and protect his pious ones, and to cast down their

NAZARETH, FROM THE LATIN MOUNT. [Luke, i:26.]—We have here an excellent view of Nazareth. From the Latin Mount we see the roads and camel paths and hills about the city, with the olive trees and residences at the lower part of the city, and get a beautiful view of one of the loveliest spots under the sun. A view all the more attractive because we know, in addition to the natural features which make it lovely, the eyes of our Savior often beheld it. Perhaps there is not a hill or valley or spot about this, the city of His boyhood, that He did not pass over time and again. The tents that look so small, above the Greek Church of the Annunciation, were the tents of the tourists who passed through Palestine to get the pictures which illustrate this New Testament.

DISTANT VIEW OF THE BIRTHPLACE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.
[Luke, i:57.]—The birthplace of John the Baptist which we have shown in another view of the Judean mountains, is so indistinct and vague that it can hardly be discerned. It is toward the right of the picture. The view helps us to get an idea of the Judean mountains, the folds of the hills, and the general topographical features of the country. This view is typical of the character of John the Baptist. He was a gloomy and severe and lonely man. So the country, represented in the picture before us, is gloomy and lonely and severe. A man in a region like this would be very apt to grow into a contemplative and thoughtful man. There is nothing here to divide the attention and nothing of a worldly nature to tempt anyone. Here are lonely hills and skies and lakes and olive trees, and nothing else.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing-table, and wrote, saying, His name is John.⁹ And they marvelled all.

64 And^h his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 Andⁱ fear came on all¹ that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings² were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judea:

66 And all they that heard them³ laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 ¶ And his father Zacharias was⁴ filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

68 Blessed⁵ be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath⁶ visited and redeemed his people, 69 And⁷ hath raised up an horn of salvation for us; in the house of his servant David;

70 As⁸ he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:

71 That⁹ we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;

72 To¹⁰ perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;

73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,

74 That he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, 75 In¹¹ holiness³ and righteousness⁴ before him, all the days of our life.

2 The chronological difficulty in this statement appears to be solved by the recent researches of Zuntz, P. 5. Quirinus, called by Luke Cyrenius, was consul in B.C. 12, and was therefore from that time qualified to fill the office of governor of Syria. From B.C. 12 till B.C. 6 the names of the governors are recorded; from B.C. 4 till A.D. 4 the record is blank.

3 During that period the census took place, and there is a very strong probability that Quirinus filled the office of governor from B.C. 4 till B.C. 2, and during his rule a census of the province was either first ordered by the imperial government, or first carried into effect. Grammatically the passage may bear either interpretation.—P.

CHAPTER II.

1 Augustus taxeth all the Roman empire. 6 The birth of Christ. 8 An angel relateth it to the shepherds: 13 many sing praises to God for it. 21 Christ is circumcised. 22 Mary purified. 28 Simeon and Anna prophesy of Christ: 40 who increaseth in wisdom, 46 questioneth in the temple with the doctors, 51 and is obedient to his parents.

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.¹

2 (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)²

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, (because he was of the house and lineage of David,)

5 To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

6 ¶ And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling-clothes, and them the Spirit leads the memories of these two godly women, and gives their feelings utterance in language doubly affecting, because uniting the recollection of the past with the possession of the present mercies; see ver. 54. C.

Ver. 60. It is evident Zacharias had communicated to his wife the name the angel had prescribed for the child—a lesson of that confidence that those whom God hath bound together should ever reciprocate. It is equally evident that while perfectly confidential with one another, they were as perfectly silent towards their neighbours and relatives—another most valuable lesson for all relations and conditions of life; for while cunning concealment of our purposes is foolish and vain, a prudent silence, and even secrecy, is always a proof of wisdom, and generally essential to success. C.

Ver. 77. 'The knowledge of salvation,' and the knowledge of the remission of sins, are inseparably connected in the purpose of God; and he that lays hold upon the one cannot possibly be ignorant of the other. Even as he that is delivered from shipwreck or disease cannot possibly, if in his right mind, be ignorant of his escape from danger, or of his restored health. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The wonderful things of the gospel are declared with the greatest care and certainty, that we may clearly understand and firmly believe them. And for the same purpose a train of miracles introduced our Immanuel into our world, by which the ancient predictions concerning him and his forerunner were exactly accomplished. Delightful, distinguished, and unexpected mercies will come at last to those who, in a distinguished manner, fear God. Those that are humble and honour him he will honour; nothing is too hard for him to effect. And saints' unbelief of his promises must meet with sharp rebukes. The revival of miracles and prophecies pleasingly opened the way for the gospel dispensation. And with what reverence ought we always to think of Jesus Christ as the Son of God, as the Lord our God; and of the Holy Ghost, who exerts the whole power of the Godhead!—But how sweetly astonishing is it to behold God's eternal Son made of a woman!—To behold the infinite JEHOVAH personally united to the likeness of sinful flesh in order to save his enemies of mankind. Permanent and glorious is his spiritual kingdom. From the riches of divine mercy all the blessings of it originally proceed, and are bestowed on us by almighty love, notwithstanding all our unwillingness and unworthiness. It is this which lays the surest ground for the firmest faith, the deepest humility, the profoundest admiration, the most ravishing joy, and exalted praise. Thrice blessed is it to rejoice in a Saviour born for us, and received into our heart, and in that great salvation which he brings near to all men. Thrice happy are true believers in the pardon of their sins, the acceptance of their prayers, and their deliverance from their enemies. And in the highest praise and filial service of God should they improve these benefits. Never does God send any upon important work without proper qualifications. And rarely do men addicted to carnal company make an agreeable figure in the church.—Let me in every state learn to be fervent in my devotions. Let me offer all my services through Jesus' mediation. Let me acquaint myself with God and his Word, and always credit whatever he says. Let me vie with angels in readiness to speak of my Redeemer. And if God honour me, let me humble myself, and rejoice in his mercy.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 34, 35. He is appointed of God and brought into the world as an occasion of the stumbling and falling of many Israelites, and as the divine means of raising up men to eternal life and happiness. And such shall be his wonderfully mean and suffering circumstances that many will speak against him with bitter enmity and blasphemy; and you, his mother, shall be tormented with anguish and pain to see him so contemned, reviled, persecuted, and murdered: yet by these means it will clearly be discovered who are his friends that accept him, and who his enemies that reject him.

Ver. 1. Cæsar Augustus. This was Caius Cæsar Octavianus Augustus, one of the Roman triumvirs, who was chosen emperor B.C. 29, and died A.D. 14. He received the name of Cæsar, the family name of Julius Cæsar, by whom he had been adopted, and the name of Augustus the most probable meaning of which is, 'worthy of divine honours,' Pausan. iii. 11. he received from the servile senate.—All the world. Some would translate it, 'all the (Roman) empire'—an expression very frequent in the best classical writers. But as no such general taxation is mentioned by any contemporary historian, it seems more consonant to Jewish phraseology to understand it merely of 'all Judea,' which the Jews considered the earth of the whole world; see Ru. 1. 1; 2 Sa. 24. 8. This view seems to be confirmed by ver. 3, in which 'every one' went to 'his own city'—a description that evidently could apply to Judea alone. C.

Ver. 2. It appears from historical records that Cyrenius was not made governor of Syria till ten or twelve years after the birth of Jesus. The words may, however, be more literally translated, 'And this first registration was carried into effect (that is, by taxation) when Cyrenius was governor of Syria;' or, 'The first registration was made under Cyrenius (afterwards) governor of Syria.' C.

Ver. 3. His own city—the capital city of his own family (see ver. 4), not of his district. Wherefore it is evident that, though commanded by Roman authority, the registration was conducted upon Jewish principles. C.

Ver. 12. A manger. The ordinary Greek text is 'the manger, stable,' or whatever else the meaning of the term may be. The,

PLACE OF THE MANGER IN THE GROTTTO. [LUKE, ii:4-7.]—This is a picture of the interior of the Church of the Nativity, and there is given here a representation of the place once occupied by the manger in which our Savior was born. The star which you observe in the view is supposed to occupy the particular place where our Savior was born. Around this star are written the following words: "HERE JESUS CHRIST

WAS BORN OF THE VIRGIN MARY." This place is always guarded by the Turkish soldiers, and about this star silver lamps are always burning. Notable festivities are observed in this church during Christmas time. Nearly all the lamps that are in it are very fine, and are presents from different kings of the world. There is no place in Palestine looked upon with more loving and pathetic interest than the place of the manger in the grotto laid⁴ him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping⁴ watch over their flock by night.⁵

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying, 14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 ¶ And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

22 ¶ And when the days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)

1 I think Alford has given the key to the right interpretation of this passage. It is embodied in, a sentence which describes the effects of Christ's salvation upon the hearts and conscience of men.

No allusion is made to mere human sorrow, but to sorrow for sin. The struggles referred to in the context are the struggles of penitent souls for pardon and acceptance. Mary herself, it is here predicted, would pass through a similar struggle.

The pangs of sorrow for sin would pierce

her heart also.—P.

25 ¶ And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ.⁸

27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,

28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, 29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:

30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;

32 A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against;

35 (Yea, "a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,¹) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

36 ¶ And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanneel, of the tribe of Aser; she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity;

37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.

38 And she, coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.³

39 ¶ And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.

40 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon him

THE ROAD FROM JERUSALEM TO BETHLEHEM—OVER WHICH MARY AND JOSEPH PASSED. [Luke, ii:22.]—Mary and Joseph, in going from Nazareth to Bethlehem to be taxed in accordance with the decree of Cæsar Augustus, doubtless passed by Jerusalem, and this road becomes interesting to us because of its connection with the visit of the holy family. It is, perhaps, very much to-day as it was when Joseph and Mary passed this way. The particular part of it we see is just below the Joppa Gate in the Jerusalem wall. One sort of conveyance passes along this way now that was never known until within recent years—that is the omnibus which carries passengers to and from the Jerusalem trains; for it is along this same way that modern tourists now go to the Jerusalem depot, which is about half a mile from the walls of the city.

BEEROTH—WHERE MARY AND JOSEPH MISSED THE CHILD JESUS.
[Luke, ii:44.]—Beeroth is about a day's journey from Jerusalem as people used to travel. It is interesting to-day because it is supposed to be the place where Mary and Joseph spent the night after the first day's journey from Jerusalem upon their return to Nazareth, in our Savior's twelfth year. It is well known that at the end of the day's journey they sought Him among the people, and failed to find Him, making it necessary that they return the next day to Jerusalem to seek for Him. This is one of the cities of the Gibeonites. There are the ruins of an ancient church here, built by the Knights Templar who held Beeroth during the reign of the Latin kings. It was at Beeroth that Jotham concealed himself for fear of his brother, Abimelech.

42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?

50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

51 ¶ And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.

NAZARETH FROM THE ESPLANADE OF THE ENGLISH ORPHANAGE—THE TOWN OF OUR SAVIOR'S BOYHOOD SEEN FROM AN INSTITUTION HIS LIFE CREATED. [Luke, ii:51.]—"And he went down with them and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart." Some centuries after the ascension of our Lord, Nazareth became a place of great importance in the Christian Church. During the Crusades it was given to Tancred as a reward for his valor in winning Tiberias from Saracens. Tancred established a church at Nazareth and enriched it with a large endowment. Nazareth, which thus began to be celebrated because of the wealth of its church, became a metropolitan See. After the victory of Saladin in 1187, gained at the Horns of Hattin, Nazareth was reduced to great poverty. Saracen troops entered the church of the Virgin and butchered the Christians who had sought refuge there. King Louis of France is said to have visited Nazareth in 1250. At the beginning of last century the Christian population of Nazareth was greatly increased. There is a charm about the place now that no language can describe. Every rock and hill and tree glows with associations connected with the name of Jesus. There are now far more Christians here than Mahometans.

6 Son-in-law. The forty men here mentioned from Joseph to David were Christ's natural progenitors by his mother, whereas those mentioned by Matthew (ch. 1. 6-16) were ancestors in office, and progenitors of Joseph his supposed father.

7 Matthew has traced the genealogy of Jesus through Solomon and Joseph; Luke through Nathan, another son of David, and Mary. Heli was not the natural father of Joseph, but his father-in-law and father of Mary. Females were not reckoned in the Jewish genealogies.

8 Luke, therefore, passed over in name, but clearly intended when his father Heli is introduced. Joseph was, however, legally called the son of Heli, inasmuch as those who married heiresses were obliged to pass into the families of their fathers-in-law and be reckoned as their sons. Luke, writing for the Gentiles, proves Christ to be the 'seed of the woman,' Matthew, writing for the Jews, proves him the son of David and Abraham.—C.

found in the genealogy of Ge. 11. 12 and 1 Ch. 1. 18. But as no authority of MSs. is adduced for this omission, and as Luke must have quoted from the public registers, it would be unsafe to reject a name thus sanctioned. For examples are not wanting in the Old Testament of names occurring in one genealogy, and, for legal reasons, now unknown to us, expunged from another. The reverse of this may, of course, be the case; and a name expunged from one ancient genealogy may, for legal reasons, be restored in another.—C.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The temptation and fasting of Christ. 13 He overcometh the devil: 14 beginneth to preach. 16 The people of Nazareth admire his gracious words. 33 He cureth one possessed of a devil, 38 Peter's mother-in-law, 40 and divers other sick persons. 41 The devils acknowledge Christ, and are reproved for it. 42 He preacheth through the cities of Galilee.

AND Jesus,^a being^b full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,¹

2 Being forty days tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

Ver. 35. An ignorant man, by looking upon flint and steel, or even from feeling and minute examination, would never expect fire from their collision; and as little does any man know either himself or others, till circumstances bring out what lies concealed and unknown, and often unsuspected. The person, ministration, the cross, the sacrifice, and the judgment-seat of Christ, can alone fully reveal all that is in man of enmity that resists, or of humility, Spirit-begotten, that submits to the righteousness of God.

Ver. 36. Anna a prophetess. There were several distinguished prophetesses under the Old Testament—as Miriam, Deborah, and Huldah—so Anna is now inspired to represent woman in the knowledge and revelation of Messiah. By such historic means, and not by assertion or argument, does the Scripture declare the intellectual and moral dignity of woman. The Lord raise up many such holy women in his church to welcome and commend the Saviour! C.

Ver. 44. Company. The country being infested with many robbers, as appears from Josephus, it was needful that the people should travel in companies, for mutual protection; but it is more than probable (Ps. 84. 8, margin) that they were accustomed to unite in bands for mutual edification and religious services during their journeys. C.

Ver. 52. If Jesus were God, how could he grow in favour? He grew in favour, as in stature or age. Being in the flesh, he was subject to all the sinless circumstances of the flesh, and consequently grew in favour with his heavenly Father, as years developed his amiable qualities. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The taxing pride of a Roman emperor in a wonderful manner occasions our Redeemer's birth at the place long before marked in prophecy, and the enrolment of him and his family as descendants of David. And O how infinite was the debasement of the Son of God to save men! Yet pregnant with the greatest glory to himself and his Father, and with grace to men. Delightful are the tidings, the gracious offers, of him and his salvation to sinners in the gospel. And with sincerity and grateful praise ought they to be received by us and commended to others. A safe child-birth ought to be esteemed a great mercy; and both mother and child ought gratefully to be devoted to God. Thrice happy are they who long wait for the Lord! He will at last appear for their comfort, and open their lips in his praise. And it is only believing views of Jesus Christ that can render death and eternity truly pleasant and hopeful. But unhappy are they to whom this light, this Saviour of the world, becomes an occasion of greater sin and more terrible ruin. Even they who have distinguished honours allotted them have frequently some bitter trials annexed to them. And even they who live nearest to Jesus Christ must often seek him. It is enough that they find him at last, and lay up his words in their heart.—While parents consider how carefully they ought to attend the ordinances of God, and bring their children along with them, let children ponder what a delightful pattern of early knowledge, devotion, trust in God, and obedience to mean parents, is represented to them in our Redeemer.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—The season of important events ought to be exactly marked. In great wisdom and grace Jesus appears to erect his kingdom when rulers almost everywhere are monsters of wickedness. And God, by his forerunner, honourably introduces him to his work. Great need have sinners to hasten to him when death and ruin are just at their heels. Dreadful is their case who fall into the hands of the living God. And none bid fairer for hell than they who have the strongest carnal or legal hopes of heaven. No outward privilege can avail those who have unrenewed hearts and unholy lives. And no repentance can be justly reckoned sincere that does not make men cease from and detest the sins to which they are most tempted or addicted. God often renders the most unlikely the distinguished monuments of his power and grace. But at best the state of the church is but imperfect and mixed in this world. In the next God will, to the joy of saints and terror of obstinate sinners, make a full separation; and many who, like Herod, did many good things, and heard God's ministers gladly, shall be cast into eternal ruin. It is a delightful sight when great honours render men humble; and humility is rewarded with more abundant honours. How solemn was our Saviour's consecration to his work, and his attestation by God! And it is plainly manifest that he is the seed of the woman, and of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah, Jesse, and David, according to the promise.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 2. Forty days. Matthew (ch. 4. 3) places the temptation after the forty days. Luke seems to describe it as continuing throughout the whole period. The two accounts are perfectly reconcilable. The chief temptation, as recorded by Matthew, was after the forty days of fasting. Luke relates the same chief temptation, but intimates that inferior temptations continued through the whole period. C.

Ver. 3. Command this stone. Matthew (ch. 4. 3) has it 'these stones.' How then are the two passages reconciled upon the principle of real inspiration? In the very simplest manner. Satan used both expressions, urging our Lord by the repetition and increase of his demand for miracles. Matthew records the one demand, Luke the other. C.

Ver. 6. Here, according to his system of delusion, Satan affirms what is partly true and partly false. That he has 'power, a seat, and great authority,' and that, at certain times of judgment, 'power is given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations'—that he

STREAM FLOWING FROM UNDER THE MOUNT OF TEMPTATION. [LUKE iv:5.]—The second Temptation of Christ is represented in the Scriptures as taking place upon a high mountain, from which the devil could call the attention of our Savior to all the kingdoms of the world. This mountain, upon which occurred the second Temptation, is over against Jericho and looking directly over the Plain of Sodom and Gomorrah, and away to the mountains of Moab. At the time of the Temptation this whole Plain of the Jordan, between the Dead Sea below and twenty miles above, was cultivated and kept like a garden. Herod had lived here in great style and luxury. Cleopatra had come to this place for revelry, and it was doubtless one of the most beautiful and attractive places in the world. The Mount of Temptation is a lonely height.

3 And the devil said unto him, 'If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.²

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, 'It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And¹ the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, showed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

12 And Jesus, answering, said unto him, 'It is said, 'Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13 And 'when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.⁵

Matthew states all that Luke states; but Matthew does not in the least degree infringe upon the principle of the real divine inspiration of the evangelists. Luke writes for Gentiles, who were ignorant upon the subject; and, therefore, he records the portion of the dialogue in which angelic agency was described.—C.

19 To preach the 'acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.⁷

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bare him witness, and wondered at the 'gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, 'Is not this Joseph's son?

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: 'whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 But I tell you of a truth, 'many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land;

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

27 And⁸ many lepers were in Israel in the time of 'Elisha the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, 'were filled with wrath,

29 And⁹ rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow⁸ of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him 'down headlong.⁹

30 But¹⁰ he, passing through the midst of them, went his way.¹

31 And¹¹ came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath-days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: 'for his word was with power.²

33 ¶ And¹² in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, 34 Saying, Let us alone;³ what¹³ have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; 'the Holy One of God.

35 And 'Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had 'thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And¹⁴ they were all amazed, and spake is 'the prince,' nay, 'the god of this world,' is all true; but when he adds that 'all this power and glory' is his, and that 'to whomsoever he will he gives it,' he affirms what is false; for 'the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.' He alone 'putteth down one and setteth up another,' even as he 'raised up Pharaoh to show his power in him.' Satan, moreover, after the manner of all liars and deceivers, suppresses what is true; for he never alludes to the coming judgment of the great day, nor the 'everlasting fire prepared for him and his angels.' See Re. 13. 2, 7; Jn. 12. 31; 2 Co. 4. 4; Ps. 97. 1; 79. 6; 75. 7; Ex. 9. 16; Mat. 25. 41, C.

Ver. 19. The acceptable year seems an allusion to the year of the jubilee, which proclaimed its blessings on the day of atonement, which proclaimed liberty to him who had been enslaved, restoration to possessions, and return to families—all emblems of gospel time and gospel blessings. The time, the day upon which the proclaimed atonement is fully embraced; the blessings, the restoration of sinners to the forfeited possession of paradise, and to membership and communion in the family of God. C.

Ver. 20. The eyes of all . . . were fastened on him. The specific reason of this intense observation is not recorded. It may have arisen from recollection of the early prophecies concerning him—from curiosity, mingled with incredulity, concerning the works he was now reported to have wrought elsewhere—from his voice, for he spake as never man spake; see ver. 22—or from his manner, for 'he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.' C.

Ver. 24. This statement has been fully verified by all prophetic history. Moses was rebelliously vilified, Nu. 16. 3; David was ejected from his throne; Jeremiah was cast into prison; Elijah was hunted 'like a partridge upon the mountains.' All were despised or rejected by their countrymen. Wherefore let no man wait for the reformation of any church or people until God raise up some of themselves to lead the way; but rather let every one remember that the human mind is more ready to listen to strangers than to acquaintance, and take hold of this propensity, and send the gospel by 'men of other tongues.' C.

Ver. 28. The secret cause of offence seems to be the implied intimation of God's merciful regards to the heathen, whom the Jews despised, and judged unworthy of sharing with them in the divine favour; but the ostensible cause was the parallel between the humble Jesus and Elijah and Elisha, whom they esteemed as chief among the prophets. C.

GREEK MOUNT OF PRECIPITATION, NAZARETH—FROM WHICH IT WAS SOUGHT TO CAST OUR SAVIOR DOWN. [Luke, iv:28-29.]—"And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath, and rose up and thrust him out of the city and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong." Upon the brow of this hill, from which it is supposed the people of Nazareth sought to cast our Savior down, the Greeks have built a little chapel, where the devout and faithful of that communion retire to pray and meditate. This little chapel may be said to be the scene of the sad event in the lives of the people of Nazareth, when they turned from their doors and their lives the greatest of their countrymen.

among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And^e the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about.

38 ¶ And^a he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

39 And^a he stood over her,⁴ and rebuked the fever; and it left her: and immediately she arose, and ministered unto them.

40 ¶ Now^b when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

41 ¶ And^c devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ⁵ the Son of God. And he, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.⁶

42 ¶ And^d when it was day, he departed, and went into a desert place: and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said unto them, 'I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent.

44 And^e he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

CHAPTER V.

1 Christ teacheth the people out of Peter's ship: 4 in a miraculous taking of fishes, sheweth how he will make him and his partners fishers of men: 12 cleanseth a leper: 16 prayeth in the wilderness: 18 healeth one sick of the palsy: 27 calleth Matthew the publican: 29 justifieth his eating with publicans and sinners: 33 foretelleth the judgments and afflictions of the apostles after his ascension: 36 and liketh faint-hearted and weak disciples to old bottles and worn garments.

AND it^a came to pass, that, as the people pressed^b upon him to hear the word of God, he "stood by the lake of Gennesaret,"¹

2 And saw two ships standing² by the lake: but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

REFLECTIONS.—The most fearful temptations and troubles may quickly succeed to the most distinguished testimonies of God's love. And it is highly improper for the best of saints to hope to escape even the most horrible seducements, when Jesus was called to suffer them. How shocking is the impudence of Satan! how fixed his perseverance in harassing the saints! and how implacable his malice in tempting where he surely hopes to succeed! He is very subtle in contriving the form and choosing the seasons of his temptation. And it is necessary to resist him always with the sword of the Spirit. Thus only can we prove conquerors through him that loved us, and is able and ready to succour us. But what fearful work hath sin made in the world! It hath transformed angels into unclean spirits, perverted human nature, and subjected it to the tyranny of the devil, and to diseases unnumbered.—Alas! into what sorrow and suffering it plunged our divine Saviour! But infinite is his grace; and, as appointed of God to save us, in him all fulness dwells answerable to all our need. And always by his Word, he exerts his power on the most unworthy. With great toil and danger he went about to heal human maladies, spiritual and temporal. But, alas! where he should be most readily received he is often most obstinately rejected; and almost everywhere few are turned to him! Many never believe more than devils, who never had his blessings offered to them; and though they hear his words with attention and wonder, they quickly envy and seek to destroy him or his interests; but terrible is their situation when he abandons them to their own hearts' lusts.—It is a great mercy that he can restrain furious persecutors, and cast out malicious and subtle devils, even when they almost transform themselves into angels of light. And it is delightful when they who have much public work in hand prepare for it by much fervent prayer; and when they who have enjoyed Christ's presence and ordinances earnestly desire the continuance of them.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 8. Every man of intellect judges best in his own profession. Had Peter been a landsman he would not have been at all so affected by the miracle; but as an experienced fisherman, he sees its full extent. But the narrative edifies another trait of character. Had Peter been covetous he would have entreated our Lord never to leave him; had he been superstitious (as fishermen are often found to be) he would have ascribed the miracle to good fortune, or some prevalent charm or talisman; but being neither superstitious nor covetous, he beholds in the miracle the evidence of our Lord's holiness and divinity, which contrasting with his own sinfulness, he falls down and worships, and entreats him to depart, not because he desired to be freed from his presence, but counted himself unworthy of the honour. 3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

4 ¶ Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught."

5 And Simon, answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless, at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And^d when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes: and "their net brake."⁴

7 And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

10 And so was also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt "catch⁵ men."

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, they "forsook all, and followed him."

12 ¶ And^f it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold, a man full of leprosy; who seeing Jesus, fell on his face, and besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou "canst make me clean."

13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, "I will; be thou clean."⁶ And immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 And he charged him to "tell no man: but go, and show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them."

Ver. 36. The differences between this parable, as recorded by Matthew and as recorded by Luke, can neither be tortured into contradictions (for the meaning is the same), nor be attributed to mere variety in the memories of the evangelists, nor to an ideal instead of a real inspiration. The differences can be accounted for upon a principle much more simple, and in perfect accordance with the doctrine of full and perfect divine inspiration—that is, upon the most natural of all suppositions—that our Lord repeated the parable more than once, and varied his expressions to aid in the exposition of his meaning. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The most diligent and laborious have often little success. And all that comes is vanity and vexation of spirit. How base and polluted men appear to themselves when viewed in the light of Christ's glory! But nothing is more absurd or wicked than to make our sinfulness a reason against fellowship with him who is the Saviour from sin. Great is his power, who can command multitudes of fishes into a net, and multitudes of souls into a reception of the gospel. None who taste his goodness can forbear following him. The firm faith of his ability betokens our deliverance at hand, and promotes a regard to his ordinances. Great is the mercy that his prayers are powerful, and his mercy present to save men; and that he readily grants remission and healing to such as believe. If he forgive us, neither envious men nor malici-

15 But^a so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together, to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16 ¶ And^b he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

17 ¶ And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were^c Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem; and^d the power of the Lord was present^e to heal them.⁹

18 And^b behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the house-top, and let him down through the tiling,¹ with his couch,² into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he^a saw their faith,³ he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God alone?

22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he, answering, said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house.

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay,⁴ and departed to his own house, glorifying God.

26 And^b they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day.

27 ¶ And^b after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, Follow me.

28 And^b he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 And^b Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.

30 But their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?⁵

31 And Jesus answering said unto them, They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick.

32 I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

33 ¶ And they said unto him, Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

36 ¶ And he spake also a parable unto them: No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old: if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old.

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

39 No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new: for he saith, The old is better.¹

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ reproveth the Pharisees' blindness about the observance of the sabbath, by scripture, reason, and miracle: 12 chooseth twelve apostles: 17 healeth the diseased: 20 preacheth to his disciples before the people of blessings and curses: 27 how we must love our enemies: 46 and join the obedience of good works to the hearing of the word: lest in the evil day of temptation we fall like an house built upon the face of the earth, without any foundation.

AND it came to pass, on the second sabbath after the first,¹ that he went through the corn-fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath-days?

3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungered, and they which were with him;

4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the show-bread, and gave also to them that were with him; which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?

5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

6 ¶ And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue, and taught; and there was a man whose right hand was withered.

7 And Jesus looking on him said, Man, thy right hand shall be made whole like the other.

8 And he said unto him, Lift up thy hand, and show us thy right hand.

9 And he said unto him, Lift up thy hand, and show us thy right hand.

DISTANT VIEW OF THE MOUNT OF BEATITUDES. [Luke, vi:20.]—We have in this picture a different view of the Mount of Beatitudes from the one we gave in connection with the Sermon on the Mount, as reported by Matthew, v, vi, vii. This is an interesting height, not simply because it is supposed that Christ there uttered his memorable sermon, but also because it is thought by some to be the mount to which He retired after the resurrection. If Jesus Christ was not the son of God, is it not an unaccountable thing that He should have, nearly 2,000 years ago, uttered the words which, by general consent, are looked upon as the sublimest that have ever fallen from the lips of man? It is inconceivable that a Galilean peasant, with no help from a divine source, could have expressed himself in such a discourse.

7 And the scribes and Pharisees 'watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath-day, that they might find an accusation against him.

8 But^j he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, 'Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose, and stood forth.

9 Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing; 'Is it lawful on the sabbath-days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?

10 And looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, 'Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And^e they were filled with madness,³ and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

12 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that he^e went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.

13 And when it was day,⁴ he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles;⁵

14 Simon^a (whom he also named Peter) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15 Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called Zelotes, 16 And Judas the brother of James, and Judas^a Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 ¶ And he came down with them, and stood 'in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a "great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea-coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And "the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 ¶ And^e he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, 'Blessed be ye poor;⁶ for yours is the kingdom of God.'

21 Blessed^a are ye that hunger now: 'for ye shall be filled. 'Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh.

22 Blessed^a are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, 'your reward is great in heaven: 'for

It was natural, indeed it was necessary, that he should repeat the same truths, and develop again and again the same doctrines. One evangelist records one discourse; another another; but we must not expect either that there should be a total difference in the subjects when the discourses are different; or that there should be a verbal identity in language when the subjects are identical.—P.

doctrines of our Lord condemned, and the necessity of reformation superseded, even as, in more modern times, the Church of Rome, adopting the false theory of her own infallibility, refuses to be reformed, and maintains in her bull, In Curia Domini, the teachers of every fundamental doctrine of divine grace. (2) The worldly interests of the Pharisees, which were inseparably entwined with their doctrine of tradition, blinded their eyes to the glory of Christ, stopped their ears against the voice of truth, hardened their hearts against every feeling but those of envy, hatred, and madness against the prophet by whose righteous denunciations these interests were endangered.—C.

24 But^e woe unto you that are 'rich! 'for ye have received your consolation.

25 Woe^e unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Woe^e unto you when all men⁹ shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 ¶ But^k I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, 28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

29 Andⁱ unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 Giveⁿ to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

31 And^o as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

32 For^p if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye² for sinners also love those that love them.

33 And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye² for sinners also do even the same.

34 And^q if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye² for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again.

35 But^r love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and 'ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he 'is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

36 Be^u ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

37 Judge^s not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: 'forgive, and ye shall be forgiven:

38 Give,^v and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. 'For with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.¹

39 And he spake a parable unto them: 'Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

40 The^b disciple is not above his Master: but every one that is perfect shall be as his 'master.

place, such as the Jews were accustomed to erect for the purposes of private devotion.—Query. The tormenting fear which many entertain of meeting the spirits of the dead in solitary places by night, may it not be chiefly traced to the neglect of solitary nightly prayer, wherein the soul meeting in holy and immediate converse with God, would so occupy and fill itself with a sense of his presence and protection as to expel every unmanly and superstitious dread, and establish the heart in its fearlessness and peace in believing? C.

Ver. 31. And as ye would that men should do to you—in justice rendering you your own—do you also [justice] to them likewise. 'And as ye would that men should do to you' in mercy, even to spare and pardon on evidence of repentance, and in hope of amendment; but not desiring them to patronize your faults and encourage you in reckless impotence, which were a grievous sin both in you and them. In all these things show ye like mercy to others. And when you call upon any to judge righteous judgment for you and against others, do you likewise 42 Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite! cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

43 For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

44 For every tree is known by his own fruit: for of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble-bush gather they grapes.

45 A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

46 And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?

47 Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will show you to whom he is like:

48 He is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock; and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it; for it was founded upon a rock.

The treasure of a memory well stored with the Word, of an understanding that has mastered much of the deep things of God; of a judgment ready, in difficulties, to give wholesome advice; a capacity of administering, with out offence, a tender reproof; or, without partiality, paternal encouragement; a mind always devising and maturing judicious plans of benevolence; and a spirit dedicating all in prayer, supplication, and praise. 1 The additional particulars supplied here by Luke bring out in still stronger colours the character of the centurion. He was a stranger, yet he had shown great interest in the people among whom he was placed; he had displayed also a princely generosity. The Jewish rabbins pressed these facts upon the attention of our Lord so as to induce him to listen to the centurion's request. The centurion himself, however, so far from pleading any merit, takes the position of an humble, helpless, undeserving suppliant. What a lesson does this teach Christians!—P.

2 He first sent some of the Jewish elders, and then some of his own friends, Mat. viii. 4.

3 Trouble not thyself—that is, to come, but merely speak the word and I believe my servant shall be healed.—C.

A Ge. 32. 10. Mat. 3. 11; 27. ch. 15. 19,21; ver. 4. Pr. 27.2.

like a man that without a foundation built an house upon the earth: against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ findeth a greater faith in the centurion, a Gentile, than in any of the Jews: 10 healeth his servant, being absent: 11 raiseth to life the widow's son at Nain: 19 answereth John's messengers with the declaration of his miracles: 24 testifieth to the people what opinion he held of John: 30 inveigheth against the Jews, who, with neither the manners of John nor of Jesus, could be won: 36 and sheweth, how he is a friend to sinners, not to maintain them in sins, but to forgive them their sins, upon their faith and repentance.

NOW when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Capernaum.

2 And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.¹

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends² to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself;³ for I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof:

7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy allow them impartially to judge like righteous judgment for others, though against yourselves. C.

Ver. 42. Cast out first the beam out of thine own eye. Does this exhortation imply that the casting out of the beam is the act of the hypocrite himself, without any reference to the Word, Spirit, and grace of God? It contains no such implication. It speaks, as the Scriptures often do, of the thing to be done, and not of the power by which alone it can be done. When the Scriptures speak of the power by which alone conversion is effected, they attribute faith to the sinner, and all to the Word, Spirit, and grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Pe. 1. 23; 1 Ju. 3:9; Eze. 11. 19; Zec. 4. 6; Ep. 2. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Works of real necessity and mercy, but no other, may consist with a proper observance of the Sabbath. And it is base when Christ's kind indulgence is abused to carnal licentiousness; and when the rigid accusers of the innocence of others are the most indulgent to their own crimes. If we desire to have our spiritual maladies healed we must attend Christ's ordinances; and neither our own inability, nor other men's perverseness, must hinder us from our duty. If Jesus command, he can enable to perform. Where passion reigns, neither conscience nor reason can be regarded; but it is in vain to devise mischief against an all-seeing Redeemer. Important work ought always to be introduced with fervent and solemn prayer; and Jesus' prayers and power can easily furnish his church with plenty of gospel ministers! Marvellous and free are the effects of his mercy: and infinitely distant his views of real happiness and mercy from those of carnal men. Happy are they whom he blesses, and miserable are they whom he curses, be their outward circumstances what they will. And it is eternity, not time, that properly distinguishes the lot of saints and sinners. Honourable and beneficent is the spirit and tendency of the Christian religion, which so calls us to imitate JEHOVAH in his most endearing perfections and work. How important is it to be a Christian indeed! It is a great reproach for the professors of the true religion to do no more in duty toward God or men than mere heathens. And we need to live always under a deep sense of our own weakness and pollution, and in daily repentance and forgiveness; so shall we be induced to candid and charitable conceptions of others. It is absurd to attempt raising good works out of un-renewed hearts; or to expect a blessing with teachers whom Christ never sent. Let us therefore take heed what, how, and whom we hear. Let us receive Christ's Word into our heart; and resting on him by faith, practise it in our lives; so shall we persevere unto the end, and safely arrive in glory, notwithstanding all the storms that may befall us by the way.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 11. Nain was a city of Galilee, a few miles south of Mount Tabor. It still exists as a small village, exclusively inhabited by Turks. Of that the Lord would again say to the dead (to Israel), the son of the widow (Zion), Young man (Israel young and vigorous in faith), Arise! (O! that he would deliver him again to Jerusalem his mother! Surely then would he again 'begin to speak,' and like Paul, he that persecuted Christ in his members, would preach him in every city!—Note, Infidels have spoken of this case as a mere restoration from a lethargy. This assertion represents these objectors as better judges, at the end of many hundred years, than a tender mother and all the young man's personal friends, a few days after his death. They judged him dead. Our Lord found him as carried to his grave, closely covered with a cloth, as the manner of the Jews required—he touched the bier—commanded him to arise—he obeyed, rose up, and began to speak.—All present were astonished, and ascribed the work to God. Infidels now may gainsay—for having rejected 'Moses and the prophets, neither will they believe though one rise from the dead.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Masters ought to take tender care of their faithful servants: and such indeed will in general insure their attention and regard in the time of distress or affliction. It is a great advantage to interest the fervent prayers of Christ's favourites in our behalf. And great is the influence, and distinguished the humility and honour, of a strong faith. Unanswerably has Jesus demonstrated his divine and mediatorial characters in healing all manner of diseases, raising the dead, and forgiving sins, with infinite efficacy and authority. Tender is his regard to Gentile believers, and his compassion to the afflicted and destitute: and gracious, full, and plenteous his mercy to all sorts of sinners, however guilty and miserable. What exalting thoughts ought we then to have of him, and what abasing thoughts of ourselves before him! With great earnestness ought we to call on him in every distress, and to imitate him in always doing good. Spiritually to know who and what he is, cannot but create love to him, and remove every prejudice against him: and he is ever ready to instruct and satisfy humble inquirers. Nor should we ever doubt of his excellency because we suffer for his sake, and others condemn and oppose him.—The meek will he teach his way, that they may be witnesses for God and religion, when proud and self-righteous men shall be left to reject his admonitions to their own destruction. Resolute cavillers will always find a handle in the different tempers and manners of ministers. Hatred of Christ's Word will lead them to quarrel either with the deliverer or the delivery of it.—O what a change God's almighty grace makes on the heart and life of the most atrocious sinners! And the more abundantly the grace of the gospel is believed and applied, the more abundant love to God, repentance, and deep humility will be manifested in our whole temper and conduct. Alas! that any should ever quarrel with the wisdom of God's mercy towards sinners, or with their uncommon affection towards him while impressed with a sense of his mercy!

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—O the infinite but voluntary debasement of our Redeemer, that he must live on the liberality of others, even of those who had lately been infamous sinners! But cheerfully they who get good by the gospel will contribute to maintain the preacher. And they who have been healed by Jesus' grace will eagerly follow him in the way. But Satan and our inward corruptions most awfully hinder the efficacy of the gospel on most of the hearers of it. Those who accept Christ are renewed, according to the will of God, and rendered fruitful in holiness. Let us then take heed how we hear, and whether we seek to have the principles of true grace implanted in our soul. And let us improve the light and grace that we have for our own and others' advantage. If we cordially embrace the gospel, we are Christ's disciples, and neither raging winds nor devouring devils shall be able to deprive us of his love and care. If storms try our faith, his presence will secure our safety. Let us therefore in dangers ever flee to, trust in, and adore our ever-merciful, ever-mindful God and Saviour. If Satan should exert all his power and malice to render us miserable, Jesus can rescue us and restrain him at pleasure. Alas, that ever love to this world, or slavish fear, should make his presence disagreeable! Happy are they who, sensible of sin, weakness, and danger, eagerly press towards and cleave to him, notwithstanding every discouragement. In what God-like manner he triumphed over diseases, devils, and death; and yet, with the greatest self-denial, laboured to conceal his miraculous works!—And still abundant is his to come unto thee: 'but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers: and I say unto one, 'Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

10 And^a they that were sent,^b returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

11 ¶ And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the 'only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he^c had compassion on her, and said unto her, 'Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the bier:^d and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, 'I say unto thee, Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 And^e there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That 'a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath 'visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.^f

18 ¶ And^g the disciples of John showed him of all these things.

19 And John calling unto him^h 'two of his disciples, sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou heⁱ that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits;^j and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; 'how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not 'be offended in me.

24 ¶ And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the 'wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?⁹

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment?¹ Behold, 'they which are gorgeously appalled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? 'A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27 This is he of whom it is written, 'Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto you, 'Among those that are born of women, there is not a greater² prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is 'greater than he.

29 And 'all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God,³ being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But⁴ the Pharisees and 'lawyers 'rejected the counsel of God against themselves,⁵ being not baptized of him.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, Whereunto⁶ then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?

32 They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For John the Baptist came 'neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil.

34 The Son of man is come 'eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold, a gluttonous man and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

35 But⁷ Wisdom is justified of all her children.⁸

36 ¶ And⁹ one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. 'And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And, behold, a 'woman¹ in the city, which was a sinner,² when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an 'alabaster-box of ointment, 38 And 'stood at his feet behind³ him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, 'This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that 'toucheth him; for she is a 'sinner.

grace, that never casts out any. With the greatest delight raises up the trembling, and comforts the poor and obey, however contrary his declarations or commands may seem to my carnal heart.

INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH AT NAIN—WHERE OUR LORD RAISED THE WIDOW'S SON TO LIFE. [Luke, vii:11.]—"And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain and many of his disciples went with him, and much people." Nain is to-day but a dilapidated and wretched village. It was here that our Savior met the funeral procession, and said to the dead young man: "Young man, I say unto thee, arise."

And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak, and he delivered him to his mother." Perhaps this is the first instance on record where a funeral procession was changed into an assembly of good cheer and rejoicing, and Jesus Christ is the only one who has ever been able to redeem a funeral from its utter desolate and heartbreaking features, and to inspire those who are giving up their loved ones with hope to meet them again.

40 And^a Jesus, answering, said unto him, Simon,⁴ I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, "Master, say on.

41 There⁵ was a certain creditor which had two⁶ debtors: the one owed "five hundred "pence, and the other fifty:

42 And when they⁷ had nothing to pay, he frankly⁸ forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he⁹ to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou "gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou gavest me no "kiss: but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 My¹⁰ head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47 Wherefore I say unto thee, "Her sins, which are many,⁶ are forgiven; for⁷ she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48 And he said unto her, "Thy sins are forgiven.⁸

49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, "Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

50 And he said to the woman, "Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Women minister unto Christ of their substance. 4 Christ, after he had preached from place to place, attended with his apostles, propoundeth the parable of the sower. 16 Light is given to be improved and communicated: 21 he declareth who are his mother and brethren: 22 rebuketh the winds: 26 casteth the legion of devils out of the man into the herd of swine: 37 is rejected of the Gadarenes: 43 healeth the woman of her bloody issue: 49 and raiseth to life Jairus' daughter.

AND it came to pass afterward, "that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the "twelve were with him;

2 And certain women,¹ which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene,² out of whom went seven devils,

3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza, "Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered⁴ unto him of their substance.

4 ¶ And⁵ when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable:

5 A⁶ sower³ went out to sow his seed: and as he sowed, some fell⁷ by the way-side; and it was "trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it.⁴

6 And some fell upon⁸ a rock; and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture.

7 And some fell among "thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it.

8 And other fell on "good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundred-fold. And when he had said these things, he "cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, "What might this parable be?

10 And he said, "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; that "seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 ¶ Now¹ the parable is this: The "seed is the word of God.

12 Those by the way-side are "they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away² the word "out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 They³ on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

14 And "that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go "forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of "this life, and bring no "fruit to perfection.

15 But⁴ that on the good ground are they, which, "in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with "patience.⁶

16 ¶ No⁵ man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

17 For⁷ nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid that shall not be known and come abroad.

MAGDALA. [Luke, viii:2.]—North of Tiberias, on the west coast of the Sea of Galilee, a single day's journey takes the traveler through the sites of Magdala, Nazareth and Capernaum—scenes of sacred interest in connection with the New Testament. This is nothing to-day but a little fishing village, but it has continued to bear the name it was known by in the days of our Savior, while many of the great cities of the world have disappeared, and thus this insignificant little town has continued to bear witness and to keep alive the memory of Mary Magdalene. Here it was that the grace of the Redeemer was shown in transforming into a sweet and lovely saint a woman whose name perhaps would never have been known but for the fact that she came into the presence of the Son of God and the Son of Man.

there¹ came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled⁹ with water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and "awoke him, saying, "Master, Master, we perish! "Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, "Where is your faith? And they, "being afraid, wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

26 ¶ And¹ they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes,¹ which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, "there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs.

28 When he saw Jesus, "he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, "What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, "torment me not.

29 (For¹ he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. "For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, Legion:² because many devils were entered into him.

31 And¹ they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.³

32 And there was to go out an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them: "and he suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and "the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they "fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and "found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and "in his right mind:⁴ and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about "besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with

2 They were filled.
A classical, as well as a popular, mode of saying, the ship was filled. When minutely examined, it is simply an ellipsis, or abbreviated expression, put for 'they were filled, as to the ship.'—C.

consists in one erro-however, but seldom, the whole mind is great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man out of whom the devils were departed "besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying,

39 Return^k to thine own house, and show how great things God hath done unto thee. "And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, "when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him; for they were all waiting for him.⁵

41 ¶ And^o behold, there came a man named Jairus,⁶ and he was a "ruler of the synagogue; and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and "besought him that he would come into his house:

42 For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she "lay a dying. But as he went, the people thronged him.

43 ¶ And^a a woman⁷ having an issue of blood twelve years, which had "spent all her living upon "physicians, "neither could be healed of any,

44 Came⁸ behind him, and "touched the border of his garment: "and immediately her issue of blood stanchd.

45 And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that "virtue is gone out of me.

47 And^b when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came "trembling, and "falling down before him, she declared unto him, before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.

48 And he said unto her, "Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole: go in peace.

49 ¶ While⁹ he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead: trouble not the Master.

50 But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, "Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole.

51 And when he came into the house, "he suffered no man to go in, "save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

52 And^k all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; "she is not dead, but sleepeth.

53 And they "laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.

worldly hopes and fears.—His spirit would thus have been harassed—perhaps, in the end, chafed and irritated; and, in any event, he must have been exposed to great temptations to apostasy, from all which our Lord delivers him, by the prescription of self-denial, and instant decision of purpose. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With authority Jesus commissions his gospel ministers: with faithfulness and care they must labour; and men's eternal state must be fixed as they hear or reject their messages. In times of scarcity and distress we should cast all our care on God, and be always ready to divide the little subsistence that we have with the hungry. By his blessing, restored through Christ, we may live comfortably, and in a Christian manner, on a little. Happy are they who boldly confess the Redeemer, whatever they may suffer on his account. What is lost for him on earth

BETHSAIDA—THE PRESENT SITE OF THE CITY THAT WITNESSED MANY OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [Luke, ix:10.]—Bethsaida was one of the cities most frequently visited by our Savior. It was very near Capernaum, which is called his own city. Always, in going from Capernaum to Jerusalem, or any point west of the Sea of Galilee, He would pass through Bethsaida. It is said "He preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee and cast out devils." We know from the woe Christ pronounced on Bethsaida that it was one of the cities which had witnessed most of His wonderful works. Nothing remains of the once proud and wealthy city but a few broken walls. It is all grown up in prickly pears and thorns, making such a thick undergrowth that it is almost impossible to pass over the site at all.

54 And he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise.

55 And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat.

56 And her parents were astonished; but he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Christ sendeth his apostles to work miracles, and preach the gospel. 7 Herod desireth to see Christ. 12 Christ feedeth five thousand: 18 inquireth what opinion the world had of him: foretelleth his passion: 23 proposeth to all the pattern of his patience. 28 The transfiguration. 31 He healeth the lunatic: 43 again forewarneth his disciples of his passion: 46 commendeth humility: 51 biddeth them to show mildness towards all, without desire of revenge: 57 proposeth terms to three persons who offer to follow him.

THEN he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.

2 And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.

3 And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.

4 And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.

5 And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet, for a testimony against them.

6 And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

8 And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.

9 And Herod said, John have I beheaded: but who is this, of whom I hear such things? And he desired to see him.

10 And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place, belonging to the city called Bethsaida.

11 And the people, when they knew it, followed him: and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

12 And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said unto them, Give ye them to

This precept furnishes a most valuable instruction to all who are engaged in the work of Christ.

By confining them to one house, it gives them opportunity of studying character.

An essential element in every preacher of the gospel who would be 'rightly divide the word of truth.'

It enables them to form more intimate friendships, which are often of great value to themselves when they depart, and to their successors, whom they are thus qualified to introduce.

It enables them to economize, and prevents them from dissipating time.

It enables them to give themselves to reading and study at every interval of leisure.

It prevents exposure to the dangers of mixed society, and in the midst of a life of frequent change, preserves in full vigour the domestic principle and habits.

Herod is represented by Mat. (14. 1) as affirming that Jesus was John risen from the dead; here, as perplexed and inquiring. These two different statements involve, however, no contradiction; for Herod might, in the moment of his perplexity (a mixture of doubt and fear) make the inquiry, and with in a very brief space, when his mind was more settled, make the affirmation.

6. Alone. Rather, 'apart,' in retirement from the multitude, for the purpose of prayer and undisturbed communion with his Father.

An impressive example of the duty and privilege of believers, whose spirits may derive such revival by occasional retirement from the bustle of the world.

BEDOUIN VILLAGE NEAR CÆSAREA PHILIPPI. [Luke, ix: 39].—This scene in a Bedouin village, near Caesarea Philippi, shows us people who are very much like those living in the same region in the time of our Savior. These people are often to-day diseased with afflictions they do not understand and that they have no means of relieving. They are so ignorant as to suppose that any medicine is sufficient to alleviate and cure them of their diseases. Refusing the spiritual help that our Lord brought to them, they have continued through all the centuries to suffer from the bodily ailments that flesh is heir to. Those that accept the spiritual offers of Jesus Christ have light and wisdom given to them, by which they are able to discern the herbs and minerals which are necessary to relieve their afflicted bodies.

31 Who^a appeared in glory, and ¹spake of his decease which he should accomplish² at Jerusalem.

32 But Peter and they that were with him were^a heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, ¹they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, ¹it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: ²not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a ¹cloud, and overshadowed them: and they ²feared as they entered into the cloud.

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, ¹This is my beloved Son: ²hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. ¹And they kept ²it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 ¶ And^a it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, ¹I beseech thee, look upon my son; ²for he is mine only child.

39 And lo, ^aa spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again; and, bruising him, hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and ¹they could not.

41 And Jesus answering said, O ¹faithless and perverse generation! how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? ²Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was yet a coming, ¹the devil threw him down, and tare ²him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.³

43 ¶ And^a they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 Let^a these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 But^a they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 ¶ Then^a there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.⁴

47 And Jesus, ¹perceiving the thought of their heart, took ²a child, and set him by him,

48 And said unto them, ¹Whosoever shall pride, and passion, he finds in the very best on earth! Heartily he detests them; and much more to have his gospel propagated by their means. But with great tenderness he treats the meek and humble, pities their infirmities, and cherishes their good intentions concerning him.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 30-37. In allusion, this wounded man may be viewed as an emblem of a lost sinner, to whom neither moral nor ceremonial laws can afford relief, and whom Jesus alone can tenderly pity and save by means of his gospel. But the real scope of the parable is to show that whatever provocations receive this child⁵ in my name, receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth him that sent me: ¹for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 ¶ And^a John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbad him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, ¹Forbid ²him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶ And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be ¹received up,⁶ he ²stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem,⁷ 52 And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the ¹Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And ¹they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to ²Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples ¹James and John saw ²this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that ³we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?

55 But he turned, ¹and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not ²what manner of spirit⁸ ye are of.

56 For^a the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save ²them. And they went to another village.

57 ¶ And^a it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain ¹man¹ said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air ¹have nests; ²but the Son of man hath not where to lay ³his head.²

59 And he said unto another, ¹Follow me. But he said, ²Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, ¹Let the dead bury their dead; ²but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but ¹let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, ¹No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

CHAPTER X.

1 Christ sendeth out the seventy disciples to work miracles, and to preach: 17 they return with joy; Christ sheweth them wherein to rejoice: 21 thanketh his Father for his grace: 23 magnifieth the happy estate of his church: 25 teacheth the lawyer how to attain eternal life, and to take every one for his neighbour that needeth his mercy: 41 reprehendeth Martha, and commendeth Mary her sister.

AFTER these^a things the Lord appointed other ¹seventy¹ also, and sent them two and two before, his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come.

STREET SCENE IN TIBERIAS. [LUKE, ix:51.]—While we have no knowledge that our Savior was in Tiberias, we know that he often passed in sight of it, because He could not go from Nazareth to Capernaum, or from Jerusalem to Capernaum, without going by it. While there is no record of his entering it, we must think there are many things which He did of which we have no record, because St. John said if all the things He did were recorded the world itself would not contain the books, so that we have but little doubt but what our Savior was often in the city of Tiberias. He loved the haunts of men, and wherever men assembled He was in the midst of them. This was the greatest city of the time on the Sea of Galilee, the home of the Roman governor, and the center of interest about the lake. The people here now are very poor.

PLOWING AT JEZREEL—THE RICHEST VALLEY IN PALESTINE. [LUKE, ix:52.]—In going from Nazareth to Jerusalem, our Savior, if he followed the most direct route, would pass through the plains of Jezreel. This is a valley that runs across the whole of Palestine from near the Jordan to the Mediterranean Sea, and is not only the richest valley in the Holy Land, but perhaps one of the most fertile plains on the face of the earth. Notwithstanding it has been cultivated from the days of Abraham, yet without ever being fertilized, it produces still the finest wheat. This plain belongs now to a Christian, who lives at Beyrout, and is interesting because of the memories and associations and traditions connected with it. It has been the great battlefield of the world, and the mountains Carmel, Tabor, Little Hermon and Gilboa are all within or in sight of this plain. It was upon the edge of this plain, at Jenin, that the messengers who went before our Savior, as referred to in verse 52 of the ninth chapter of St. Luke, were turned back.

35 And on the morrow, when he departed,

16-22, and by the actual history of the apostles, will be seen to insure, not exemption from temporal, but from spiritual injury; and the superiority conferred 'over all the power of the enemy' (Satan) seems to lead to the conclusion that he is the falling from that supremacy over the world which he had so long usurped. He saw him actually beginning to fall, and, prophetically, he saw him totally fallen before the preaching of the gospel. C.

INN OF THE GOOD SAMARITAN. [Luke, x:34.]—About half-way between Jerusalem and Jericho there stands to-day an inn that is said to occupy the site of the ancient inn where the good Samaritan carried the man who had fallen and been beaten among the thieves. This is the place where travelers take dinner on their way from Jerusalem to Jericho. This region of country still abounds with thieves, thus making it necessary for every one who passes this way to go under guard. This guard is furnished travelers by the sheik of the country, whose headquarters is at the Apostle's Fountain, about four miles east of Jerusalem. Our Savior seized upon the event of the man falling among thieves and being shunned by the priests and Levites, but ministered to by the good Samaritan, to teach the world charity, and to treat every one as his neighbor.

he took out two pence,⁴ and gave them to ^{the} host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever⁵ thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, ^{He} that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, ^{Go}, and do thou likewise.

38 ¶ Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village;⁵ and a certain woman, named ^{Martha}, received him into her house.⁶

39 And she had a sister called Mary, which also ^{sat at Jesus' feet}, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was ^{cumbered} about much serving, and came to him and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art ^{careful} and troubled⁹ about many things:

42 But ^{one thing is needful}:¹ and Mary hath chosen that ^{good part}, which shall not be taken away from her.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Christ teacheth to pray, and that instantly: 11 assuring that God so will give us good things. 14 He, casting out a dumb devil, rebuketh the blasphemy of the Pharisees: 28 and sheweth who are blessed: 29 preacheth to the people, 37 and reprehendeth the outward show of holiness in the Pharisees, scribes, and lawyers.

AND it came to pass, that as he was ^{praying} in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, ^{Lord}, ^{teach us} to pray, as John also taught his disciples.¹

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, ^{Our Father which art in heaven}, ^{hallowed be thy name}. ^{Thy kingdom come}. Thy⁴ will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 Give⁵ us day by day³ our daily bread.

4 And⁶ forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead⁷ us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

9 And⁶ I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

15 But some of them said, ^{He casteth out devils through Beelzebub the chief of the devils.}

16 And others, ^{tempting him}, sought of him a sign from heaven.

17 But he, ^{knowing their thoughts}, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.

scorpions' are here to be understood, not the animals so named, but satanic agents, more poisonous to the soul than they to the body. That the promise of exemption from the power of serpents may, however, be also literally understood, is manifest from Mar. 16.18; Ac. 28.3,5. C.

Ver. 33. Samaritan. The object of our Lord in selecting a Samaritan was to show how a people whom the Jews hated and despised were capable of kind and generous actions, that thereby he might soften down national prejudices, and prepare the way for the union of all nations under one King. C.

Ver. 37. Go and do likewise. That is, neighbour includes not merely our friends by the ties of nature or grace—two points the lawyer never questioned; but also every one, friend or stranger, countryman or alien, who may stand in any need of our aid, and whom we have the means and the opportunity to serve. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great are the difficulties of faithful gospel ministers, and proportionate their assistance. Alas! that so few should be laborious, skillful, and faithful, or successful! If their authority, qualifications, help, and success depend wholly on Christ, with what earnestness should their ministrations be attended to and improved! and cheerfully ought their hearers to provide them a subsistence. Ministers ought to appear altogether disentangled from carnal cares and pursuits. And dreadful is their case who reject a purely-preached gospel and the faithful preachers of it.

—Happy is it to be instrumental in advancing the kingdom of Christ, and depressing that of Satan. But more so to be enrolled in heaven, as the loving people of God and heirs of his glory. How exhilarating are the views of that divine grace which, by the almighty influence of the Holy Ghost, God bestoweth on all the world the saving blessings and distinguished honours of the new kingdom! But it is absurd for men to seek righteousness and life by a law which they can never fulfil; or to attempt reducing the broad law of God to the standard of their own heart and life. Never ought any to inquire concerning eternal salvation from a captious or even curious intention, but with the most serious concern. And it is comely when love to God and to men streams powerfully through every action of life, and the miseries of strangers and enemies awaken our tender compassion. Never should ministers or others make visits without leaving a savour of Christ behind them. Everywhere they should labour to render men wise unto salvation. And no secular cares should ever hinder spiritual concern. Thrice happy are they who have the saving knowledge of, and an interest in, Christ! If once we have this, neither none but ourselves can deprive us of it; and Jesus will encourage our solicitous care about it, and seek our eternal possession of it.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 2-4. The prayer here is an abridged form of that contained in the sermon on the mount, Mat. 6.9-12, but was delivered on a very different occasion. This was revealed to one applicant for instruction, the former as an example, in the course of the sermon, Mat. 5.3-9, equally addressed to all. C.

Ver. 5. Midnight. The call 'at midnight,' that would appear so unlikely in the colder northern climates, would be perfectly natural in the warmer latitudes, in which, during summer, journeys are often taken at night, for avoidance of the oppressive and even dangerous heat of the day.—Three loaves may appear a large and unnecessary quantity, but the Jewish loaves were merely thin biscuits, each weighing but a few ounces. While it is also to be recollected that eastern hospitality required an amount of provision for a friend far beyond his necessity. See Ge. 43.34. C.

Ver. 12. Scorpion. The scorpion is generally about two inches in length, and in structure resembles a lobster. It has a jointed tail, said to increase with its age, at the end of which is a small curved sharp-pointed sting, capable of inflicting a most poisonous and often deadly wound. Aelian, Avicenna, and others, describe a white species, of an oval form, and much resembling an ordinary egg. C.

Ver. 45. Lawyers. That scribes and lawyers are sometimes used indiscriminately is certain, from comparing Mat. 22.35 with 19 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your sons cast them out? therefore shall they be your judges.

20 But if I with the "finger of God" cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21 When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

22 But when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

23 He that is not with me is against me: and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.

24 When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out.

25 And when he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished.

26 Then goeth he, and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.

28 But he said, Yea, rather blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

29 ¶ And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30 For as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

32 The men of Nineve shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

15 This is an evil generation, because, instead of hearing the word of God, and keeping it in memory to practice, they seek a sign, which they do not need, and which, if it were shown to their utmost wish, they would still disregard. Note, This implication is founded on the principle that he who from pride or love of sin rejects sufficient argument addressed to the understanding, would continue to reject evidence addressed to the senses.

16 He that will not believe the Bible to be the word of God will assuredly deny a miracle to be the work of God. Of this the Jews gave sufficient example, when they ascribed our Lord's miracles to Satan, and paid for a falsehood to impugn his resurrection.—C.

13 Those who attempt to measure the language of our Lord by any standard of worldly refinement, may readily pass sentence upon him for unnecessary severity: but what is called refinement is generally wanting in truth, the place of which it supplies by suppression, falsehood, and flattery—simply seeking to render the speaker agreeable, but having no regard for making the listener better. putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

35 Take heed, therefore, that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

37 ¶ And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 But rather give alms of such things as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

42 But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

43 Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

47 Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

Mar. 12.28. But 'scribes and Pharisees' being both already mentioned, ver. 44, and the lawyer here concluding that he and his brethren were thus condemned by implication, it is evident there was a class of the learned professions specially called lawyers who yet were not called scribes. From ver. 52 it is probable some of 'the lawyers' were teachers in the colleges; and, from the influence ascribed to them, ver. 46, 47, that others were magistrates or judges. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need that Jesus Christ should teach us to pray to God, as our gracious and heavenly Father, for all temporal, and especially spiritual blessings, with holy reverence and adoration; with firm faith, strong fervour, and persevering importunity; and with a charitable and forgiving temper of spirit, that God in all things may be glorified. If we thus pour out our requests in the name of our Redeemer, it is impossible they should fail of a gracious answer. But while some learn to pray, how many, contrary to all means used with them, reject and learn to blaspheme the glorious Deliverer from sin and Satan. None are held neuter in religion, but are either Jesus' friends or enemies. They, therefore, who seemed to be once reformed, often become the vilest apostates and distinguished slaves of Satan. How ready are others to imagine real happiness to consist in outward connections with Christ. But it is only they who believe and obey the gospel that are happy indeed. How dark is the gospel to persons destitute of faith and depraved in judgment! But aggravated is their guilt, and inexpressible their misery, who remain wilfully blinded by pitiful prejudices amidst the clearest gospel light, and who are influenced by a superstitious, hypocritical, and persecuting temper. Fearful sorrow awaits them who prefer external ceremonies to the substantial duties of love and obedience; or who are zealous of fair shows of religion while they secretly indulge themselves in the vilest abominations; or who 48 Truly ye bear witness that ye allow³ the deeds of your fathers; for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I¹ will send them prophets and apostles, and some² of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That³ the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation:

51 From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, "It shall be required of this generation.

52 Woe⁴ unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered.⁵

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things:

54 Laying⁶ wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Christ preacheth to his disciples to avoid hypocrisy, and fearfulness in publishing his doctrine: 13 warneth the people to beware of covetousness, by the parable of the rich man who set up greater barns. 22 We must not be over-careful of earthly things, 31 but seek the kingdom of God, 38 give alms, 36 be ready at a knock to open to our Lord whensoever he cometh. 41 Christ's ministers are to see to their charge, 49 and look for persecution. 54 The people must take this time of grace, 58 because it is a fearful thing to die without reconciliation.

IN the mean time, "when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude² of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware³ ye of the leaven³ of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 For⁴ there is nothing covered,⁵ that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known.

3 Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops.⁴

4 And I say unto you my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

condemning ancient persecutors, do themselves rage against and persecute Christ, his gospel, and followers. Perseverance in national sins certainly issues in national ruin. And it is highly criminal and dangerous to hate, conceal, or misinterpret the Scriptures, or to hate reproof, and rage against Jesus Christ and his Word for condemning our faults.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 29. Neither be ye of doubtful mind. The original seems to refer to those who are superstitiously guided by meteors, as both individuals and nations frequently are—any regard to which unmeaning portents (of superstition begotten, and by superstition expounded) God expressly forbids. See Je. 10. 2. A literal translation would stand thus: "Neither be ye meteorized," carried about as clouds "by every wind of doctrine," tossed up and down between hope and fear of the means of support. C.

Ver. 32. Even nominal Christians are still a "little flock"—only about 175,500,000; while 482,000,000 are heathens, 140,000,000 Mohammedans, and 2,500,000 Jews. But of these 175,500,000 nominal Christians, how (comparatively) few can even charity reckon as real followers of the Lamb! Yet, however few, it is their Father's good-will to prevent them now, by grace, from following a multitude to do evil, and to make them the founders

7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God:

9 But he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost³ it shall not be forgiven.

11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.⁶

13 ¶ And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

14 And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

15 And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits⁸ and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, Thou fool! this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

22 ¶ And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought³ for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider⁴ the ravens: for they neither of that spiritual kingdom that shall yet obtain dominion over all the earth. C.

Ver. 35. Let your loins be girded about. This direction is generally considered an allusion to the order of the passover, Ex. 12. 11, and to the long, flowing, and entangling robes of the Orientals, which, however graceful in domestic use, required to be bound around the loins before a journey. But on considering ver. 37, where the master, it is said, "will gird himself," and recollecting the act of our Lord, when he "girded himself with a towel," Jn. 13. 4, it would seem rather to refer to the preparation of servants to wait at their master's table, than to the preparation of travellers to set out upon a journey. C.

CHAPTER XIII.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.¹

2 And Jesus answering said unto them, ¹Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things?

3 I tell you, Nay: but ²except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.²

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners³ above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, ¹Nay: but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable: A certain man had ²a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, ¹Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: ²cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it:³

9 And if it bear fruit, well: and if not, then after⁴ that thou shalt cut it down.

15 Whom Satan hath bound. New come and others have attributed this and similar expressions to the popular language of the Jews, by which diseases and infirmities were attributed to Satan or the devil. Now if by popular language be meant the language derived from the Old Testament, the popular book of the Jews, there can be no objection to the statement; but if by popular language is meant the language of vulgar ignorance, prejudice, or superstition, then is the statement to be altogether repudiated. It is the glory of the Jews that in this case, their popular language was the language of truth, and that in the revelation of God till this hour, and till the last enemy shall be destroyed, Satan has the power of death (He. 2:14), and consequently, as in the case of Job and his family (Job 1:22; 19:2, 6, 7), in some sense of reality, the power overall that produces it.—C.

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had a ¹spirit of infirmity² eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, ¹he called her to him, and ²said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

14 And ¹the ruler of the synagogue answered ²with indignation, ³because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath-day, and said unto the people, ⁴There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath-day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, ¹Thou hypocrite! ²doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, being ¹a daughter of Abraham, whom ²Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, ³be loosed from this bond on the sabbath-day?

17 And when he had said these things, ¹all his adversaries were ashamed: ²and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

houseless exile (all which things were literally true of this Herod), is, most probably, the scriptural interpretation of the message of our Lord—a message at once descriptive of the past, and prophetic of the future. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great care should we guard against uncharitable censures of those whom God hath sorely afflicted, remembering that his strokes on them are warnings to us, and that nothing short of evangelical repentance can prevent our eternal ruin. Severe censures of others but prepare ourselves for unmixed wrath from God. He takes the most exact notice of every season and means of grace we enjoy, and of our unprofitableness under the same. The opportunities of his mercy and patience are often unexpectedly lengthened out through the mediation of his Son and the prayers of his ministers. And if he spare, ministers ought to be diligent. The most unfruitful sinners may be renewed and turned to God by the gospel: but the obstinate abuse of this will at last issue in men's just and inexpressible ruin. Cries for mercy will then become vain, hopes and pleas from external privileges will be defeated, and there will be none to intercede for the sinner. Let not therefore curious inquiries about the number of the saved, but earnest care about my own believing in Jesus Christ, be the labour of my soul. And to quicken my diligence, let me remember that few comparatively are saved: and to raise my admiration, and encourage my faith, let me think how often the most improbable in appearance are converted, while others choose to perish in their sins. And let me behold how ready Jesus was to instruct the ignorant, heavenly Father whose kind providence extends to the meanest creature, and has prepared for us an everlasting kingdom. Surely this is worthy to be sought for as our principal treasure, and prepared for as our inexpressible happiness. Why should we set our hearts on worldly portions, which only procure envy and contention; or which, by their abundant increase, precipitate their owners into everlasting perdition? And it is base and shameful when ministers neglect their infinitely important work, and perplex their minds, or waste their time, in civil affairs. Yea, the more light men sin against, the greater will be their punishment. Alas that, while Jesus Christ died to reconcile men to God, and to one another, men's lusts, passions, and prejudices should make his conciliating gospel an occasion of strife and confusion! But if we be persecuted for a prudent and disinterested adherence to truth, he will enable us to defend our conduct. How perversely men are set against the Saviour, when they hate and persecute their nearest relations for his sake! And many are very prudent with respect to temporal, and fools with respect to spiritual and eternal concerns. Sinners are in unceasing danger of falling into the hand of God's displeasure. And if, in their present day of grace, they do not, through faith, obtain reconciliation with him, unavoidable, unsupportable, and endless must be their ruin. Alas, who amongst us can abide with deep anguish, or dwell with everlasting remorse!

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1-9. The ruin of the Jewish nation. About forty years after Christ, was, like that of the Galileans and the Jews crushed by the tower of Siloam, most sudden and dreadful, chiefly occasioned by their attendance on their ceremonial services, and near to the temple.—The parable of the fig-tree imports, that notwithstanding their long-continued barrenness of good tempers and works, yet, by means of the intercession of Christ and his ministers, they should, for about forty years, enjoy a gospel dispensation, and afterwards be fearfully destroyed on account of their unfruitfulness and wickedness.

Ver. 24. And shall not be able. The reasons of this inability are:—(1) They 'seek' when they ought to 'strive.' (2) They seek at the wrong time—not when the Master (Christ) was sitting in intercession, but when he had risen up to judgement, He. 7:25; 10:12, 13. (3) They 'seek' in the wrong place, for they 'stand without,' Jn. 15:2, 6—that is, not in Christ's faith, name, and righteousness. (4) They seek upon the wrong plea—not that they had submitted to him and trusted in him, Ep. 1:12; He. 5:9—but merely that they had followed him in eating and drinking—that is, professed his gospel as far as it was pleasant and profitable; and belonged to a Christian land where he had taught in their streets; but affording, by their ignorance and presumption, a melancholy evidence that the Spirit of truth and holiness had not taught in their hearts, Jn. 14:26. C.

Ver. 32. That fox. According to modern ideas, the fox is the emblem of cunning, hypocrisy, and robbery; and, consequently, its application to Herod has been considered as a condemnatory allusion to his crooked and unrighteous policy. For this interpretation, however, the Scriptures furnish no foundation. The fox is mentioned in Scripture, (1) As employed by Samson, Ju. 15:4, to burn the corn of the Philistines. (2) As destroying the vines, Ca. 2:15. (3) As inhabiting desolate ruins, La. 5:18. (4) As burrowing in holes, Mat. 8:20. Of these facts, therefore, and not from any modern ideas, must the meaning of the title be collected. A political firebrand to his kingdom: the destroyer of her agriculture and commerce; the desolator of her cities, and a 20 ¶ And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It^a is like leaven,⁷ which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And^d he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying towards Jerusalem.⁸

23 ¶ Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few⁹ that be saved? And he said unto them, 24 'Strive' to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

25 When^o once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

26 Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 But^t he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 There^r shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

29 And^d they shall come from the east, and from the west, and sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 ¶ The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected.

33 Nevertheless, I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following: for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34 O^b Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!

alarm the careless, and heal the diseased. Indefatigable was he in his labours. Highly he regarded his Father's ordinances, and contemned the terrors of wicked men; and was even ready to die for his people. Carefully was he preserved by Providence till his hour came. And the most tremendous ruin has or will overtake his obstinate opposers. Yea, the greater our privileges abused, the greater the miseries we shall incur.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—There is great need of divine instruction how to observe the weekly Sabbath, and how to connect works of necessity and mercy with acts of devotion. And at our meals, and every other season, our talk ought to turn upon the important points of religion, and tend to the glory of God. Nor should the presence of enemies, who watch for our halting, deter us from our duty. In their nature and tendency, how base is pride, and how valuable humility, both before God and men! And earthly honours and esteem are contemptible when compared with the honours of humble souls at the last day and in the eternal state. Luxurious feasting marks men's pride and sensuality, robs the poor, and abuses the bounty of God. But astonishing is the grace of God in preparing a feast, a gospel dispensation, and an eternal happiness, on the flesh and blood of his Son and the fulness of his promise; and in inviting and 35 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

CHAPTER XIV.

2 Christ healeth the dropsy on the sabbath. 7 teacheth humility: 12 to feast the poor: 15 under the parable of the great supper, sheweth how worldly-minded men, who contemn the word of God, shall be shut out of heaven. 25 Those who will be his disciples, to bear their cross must make their accounts aforehand, lest with shame they revolt from him afterward, 34 and become altogether unprofitable, like salt that hath lost its savour.

AND it came to pass, as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees, to eat bread on the sabbath-day, that they watched him.¹

2 And, behold, there was a certain man before him, which had the dropsy.²

3 And Jesus answering spake unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day?

4 And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath-day?

6 And they could not answer him again to these things.

7 ¶ And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms;³ saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not⁴ down in the highest room; lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But^t when thou art bidden, go and sit down⁵ in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship⁶ in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 ¶ Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours;⁷ lest beseeching sinners, Gentile sinners, even the chief, to share thereof! And however many Jews or others, on the highest carnal pretences, reject it, multitudes even of the most unlikely, shall come in, till Christ's church on earth and mansions in heaven be found. With great faithfulness and labour ought ministers to teach every man, and warn every man, and call every man, for this effect. For strict is the account they must give of their conduct and success. But redoubled misery, and tremendous exclusion from God's mercy, await those who refuse Christ. And if we would be interested in his blessings, he must have the highest preference in our heart above self and everything earthly. And practical religion must begin or there were many

JEWISH WAILING PLACE. [Luke, xiii:35.]—Every Friday afternoon the Jews gather at this place, turn their faces to these big stones in the wall—which are supposed to be part of the very building material that entered into the structure of Solomon's temple—and bewail their fate. This is just outside of the wall that encloses the Mosque of Omar. Travelers passing this way during the hours devoted by the Jews to wailing are solicited to make contributions, which they usually do. One cannot help but observe in Jerusalem to-day the devotion of the Jews to their city. All the years of change and war and bloodshed and fire and persecution have not been able to destroy the affection which this ancient people of God have for their Holy City. They have been scattered over all the world, but continue to love Jerusalem, the city of the Great King.

they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, 'call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: 'for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 ¶ And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed² is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.⁸

16 Then² said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And² sent his servant at supper-time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And 'they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20 And another said, 'I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house, 'being angry, said to his servant, 'Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the 'poor, and the maimed, and the 'halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, 'it is done as thou hast commanded, 'and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, 'Go out into the highways and hedges, and 'compel them to come in,⁹ that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, That 'none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

25 ¶ And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them,

Inasmuch as our Lord gives this man no direct reply, it seems most probable he was, like the apostles themselves at this date, fully convinced that JESUS was the Messiah, but still expecting merely a temporal kingdom, in which banqueting would constitute a principal source of happiness. From these gross ideas, our Lord seeks to lead him, by showing him, that, whereas all men would willingly partake of a temporal feast, his is a kingdom whose spiritual banquets are contended, and whose tables nothing but divine compulsion can fill.—C.

Compel them to come in. This command will not sanction any physical compulsion to profess what men do not believe. The feast to which the guests are compelled to come in is the true feast of the kingdom of God (ver. 15), and that kingdom is neither meat nor drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, Ro. 14.17; and the compulsion is that of truth, exhortation, reproof, instruction, long-suffering.

CHAPTER XV.

3 The parable of the lost sheep: 8 of the piece of silver: 11 and of the prodigal son.

2 And the Pharisees and scribes 'murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

3 ¶ And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

4 What⁶ man of you, having an hundred such consideration and principles as will dispose us to endure everything for his sake. Dreadful and eternal shame shall cover those professors who are at last found empty and graceless. How valuable are the doctrines and graces of our Redeemer, when lodged in the heart and practised in the life! and what a preserving, purifying, and savoury blessing they render us to all around! But very pernicious are all errors; and unprofitable and hurtful now, and miserable hereafter, are loose, carnal, corrupt, careless, and erroneous ministers and professors of the true religion. O my soul, consider these things, and take heed that I never draw back unto perdition! And if I think I stand, let me take heed lest I fall.

CHAPTER XV.—The scope of all these parables is to represent the exceeding riches of God's grace to sinners, especially the Gentiles. The lost sheep brought back represents them as sought and restored to Christ, the chief Shepherd, to be saved by him; but stupidly wandering on in deserts of ignorance, idolatry, and other wickedness and misery, but followed after by a laborious and faithful dispensation of the gospel, apprehended by Christ's Spirit, and by his power and grace converted to God, instated in his promise, and made members of his church. The lost piece of silver recovered represents them as dear and precious in God's account, and wholly incapable of doing anything for their own relief; but, by means of shaking providences, the gospel dispensation, and conscience-convincing and heart-renewing influences, converted to Christ. The prodigal son reformed represents them as God's honoured creatures apostatizing from him, and perverting their natural powers and the blessings of Providence to the basest purposes of iniquity, till they had rendered themselves slaves and worshippers of Satan, wicked and miserable to the last degree; but at last, by strokes of affliction and convictions of conscience, encouraged by gospel invitations, made to apply to God for his free and full salvation—choosing him and received by him, clothed with the everlasting love of Christ, endowed with his Spirit and grace, as a pledge of their eternal inheritance; helped by gospel promises and influences to walk in God's ways; and feasted on the flesh, blood, and fullness of Christ, and made glad with the light of his countenance. The joy attending the recovery of the lost sheep, piece of silver, or prodigal son, imports that God is more glorified in the redemption of men than in the preservation of angels who never sinned—in the conversion of the Gentiles than in the preservation of the Jewish church—in the conversion of notorious sinners than of such as have been always civilized—and in the conversion of all ranks and degrees of sinners than in the pretended religion of self-righteous persons; and that he and his angels more rejoice therein. The elder son denotes the Jews, particularly the scribes and Pharisees, who took such offence at God's calling the Gentiles into his gospel church, and honouring them above themselves, who had long been his peculiar people, that they obstinately refused to embrace the gospel, and unite with them in one church. He may also represent all self-righteous professors, and even peevish believers, who take offence at God's vouchsafing his singular favours to persons converted from notorious wickedness.

Ver. 30. This thy son. Unkind man! He is 'thy father's son' but is he not 'thy brother!'—Thy living! No! ungenerous accuser of thy erring brother! whatever he has wasted was his own, freely, but legally, conveyed to him by his father, ver. 12.—Note. How great the need of watchfulness! The world has its snares, but alas! so has the closet. The one leads to forgetfulness of God, the other betrays to an overestimate of self, and an undervaluing of others. 'The Lord guard his sons from turning either to the right or left to do evil!' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the grace and condescension of Jesus Christ to the very chief of sinners, and base the heart that rages against his love. Alas! how bent are sinners to wander from God, and expose themselves to danger and ruin! Unable to recover themselves, they are plunged in, and covered with, wretchedness and guilt. Yet, madly prodigal, and haters of God's presence and government, they are puffed up with a self-conceit of their excellency and merit; and imagining all that they have their own, covetous of a present portion, and regardless of every-sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, ^{he} layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

7 I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.²

8 ¶ Either what woman having ten pieces of silver,³ if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?

9 And⁴ when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

11 ¶ And he said, A certain man had two sons:⁴

12 And the younger of them said to his father, ⁵ Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. ⁶ And he divided unto them his living.

13 And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And⁷ when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And⁸ he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.⁵

17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I will arise and go to my father, and will and the same was accused unto him that he had^b wasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said unto him, How^c is it that I hear this of thee? ^agive an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward.¹

3 Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: ^aI cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

4 I^d am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 So he called every one of his lord's debtors ^aunto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

6 And he said, An hundred measures² of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred measures³ of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done ^awisely: ^afor the children of this world are in their generation wiser than ^athe children of light.

9 And I say unto you, ^aMake to yourselves friends of the mammon⁴ of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.⁵

10 He⁶ that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon,⁶ who will commit to your trust the ^atrue riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in ^athat which is another man's,⁷ who shall give you that ^awhich is your own?

13 No^a servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other: or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. ^aYe cannot serve God and mammon.

14 ¶ And the Pharisees also, ^awho were covetous, heard all these things: and they ^aderided him.

15 And he said unto them, Ye are they which 18 The main point and lesson of this difficult parable is, that men in their own sphere, an example and incentive to Christians in their sphere. It is the far-seeing wisdom of the steward which is alone commended.

The right or wrong of the act is not taken into account at all, but merely the object he had in view, and the end he accomplished. There is no commending of dishonesty; but there is a lesson taught from an example of worldly prudence. The special lesson seems to be this:—We are all stewards of God; to whom belongs our worldly goods. These worldly goods are called 'mammon' of unrighteousness, because the source of so much sin. We are to make ourselves friends by a right use of our means—charity to the deserving poor, support of the people and work of the Lord, so that when we die those godly people whom we assisted on earth, and have gone before us to heaven, may receive and make use of our everlasting habitations.—P.

35 This is a most touching picture, and its painful truthfulness, of the earnestly exemplified around us, makes it one of the most impressive of our Lord's parables.

The rich man—his raiment, regal; every meal, a banquet. The poor man—with out a home, lying helpless at the gate, full of sores, his food, stray crumbs that had fallen from the table of others; his clothing, rags; his only companions and sympathizers, the street dogs. This is the earthly picture.

Contrast it with the heavenly. Lazarus carried to heaven by angels, and full of peace and joy in Abraham's bosom.

The rich man buried in the earth, the corruption of the sepulchre. His soul in torment; and there, in the agony of suffering, asking that the poor despised beggar might be comforted with a drop of water to cool his tongue.—P.

^ajustify yourselves before men; but ^aGod knoweth your hearts: ^afor that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

16 The law and the prophets ^awere until ^aJohn: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 And^a it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle⁹ of the law to fail.

18 Whosoever^a putteth away his wife,¹ and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery.

19 ¶ There^a was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

20 And^b there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, ^afull of sores,

21 And^d desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover ^athe dogs came and licked his sores.²

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and ^awas carried by the angels into Abraham's ^abosom: ^athe rich man also died, and ^awas buried;

23 And^j in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and ^aseeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

24 And he cried and said, 'Father Abraham, ^ahave mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that ^ahe may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.

25 But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime ^areceivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And beside all this, between us and you there is a ^agreat gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; ^aneither can they pass to us, that ^awould come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, ^aThey have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

able entrance into, and station in, heaven with him; and that rich men, who wallow in sensual pleasures here, shall, in the other world, fall into the most aggravated miseries; and that, however damned men may wish to prevent their partners in guilt coming thither to torment them, no means of conversion but the Scripture shall ever be allowed them.—Perhaps, too, he represented to these Pharisees that, however much they now contemned him in his poor and debased estate, he should quickly be exalted to glory; and they who now rioted in wealth and honour be thrust down into hell, and the generality of their nation be reduced, for many ages, to the most deplorable and unpitied wretchedness on earth, in which they should earnestly wish for the now contemned appearances of the Messiah, but they should be utterly denied them.

Ver. 6. Measures of oil. Measures called baths in the Old Testament, 1 Ki. 7.26. According to Godwin, the bath held four gallons and a half. Some think nine gallons and three quarts.—Take thy bill, &c. Hence it would appear that at least one evidence of an account was, not as in modern times, the name of the debtor attached to the bill, but the account itself being in his current handwriting. And if this bill, as some suppose, was a lease for a term of years, securing payment in produce, and of which the superior held a copy in the tenant's handwriting, and the tenant a copy in the steward's, then the obligation of the tenant to the steward must have been increased, because the iniquitous benefit was to continue for years.

Ver. 7. Measures of wheat. Measures, or ephs, the same as the homer, Eze. 45.14. Godwin calculates this measure at five bushels and five gallons; others, at fourteen bushels and two quarts. C.

Ver. 9. Make to yourselves friends. How? By repenting of your sins, whether in coveting, getting, loving, holding, or expending (see ver. 13, 14), whereby there will be 'joy in heaven, ye fail, ye shall be received into everlasting habitations.' See ver. 32.—Mammon of unrighteousness. The 'unrighteous mammon' (ver. 11) being opposed to 'true riches,' and to 'everlasting habitations,' ver. 9, the conclusion seems probable that it should be translated 'mammon of deceitfulness,' or 'deceitful riches' (see Mat. 13.22), either because they are often deceitfully acquired, deceitfully expended, or that they deceitfully 'make to themselves wings and flee away.' C.

Ver. 19. This appears to be a narrative of facts, and not a parable, else why is the very name of the beggar, 'Lazarus,' introduced, ver. 20? Lazarus signifies 'the help of God.' C.

Ver. 21. Crumbs. Whether the rich man gave or denied the crumbs, does not appear: one thing is certain, the beggar (rather, 'the destitute man') expected no better; and how unfit this food of dogs (Mat. 15.27) was for such a patient, it requires not medical skill, but humanity, to discover. The rich man was, therefore, deeply culpable, even though he granted the crumbs, for he could have afforded better, and rich and generous diet was essential to the comfort, or, humanly speaking, to the recovery of the miserable sufferer. C.

Ver. 22. Abraham's bosom, being interpreted as a figure for heaven, is supposed to establish the parabolic character of the narrative. But without having recourse to the Hebrew method of naming places, it is sufficient to remark, that until we know more of heaven, it behoves us to use much caution as to what we

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

n The object of this parable is to illustrate the necessity and extent of Christian duty. God is our Master. As our Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, we are bound to serve him; as our Redeemer, we are bound by even a deeper and holier obligation. Everything we can do, we are bound to do. There is no merit in it, for it is only the discharge of a duty. Considering the relation in which we stand to God, our service ought not merely to be one of duty, but of love.—P.

say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.⁷

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:⁸

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, 'Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.'

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, 'Go show yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.'⁹

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, 16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.

17 And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

19 And he said unto him, 'Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.'

20 ¶ And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation:¹

21 Neither shall they say, 'Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you.'²

22 ¶ And he said unto the disciples, 'The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.'

23 And they shall say to you, See here; or, see there: go not after them, nor follow them.

24 For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven; shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.

pronounce figurative, and what literal, in its constitution. That, however, there is a spiritual kindred and genealogy in heaven, different from natural kindred and genealogy on earth, appears unquestionable (see 1 Co. 4.15; 1 Th. 2.19), and that this may present a specimen of it, it is neither wise to deny nor affirm. The Lord knoweth: and secret things belong to the Lord. C.

Ver. 24. This is the only example in Scripture of prayer to a dead saint. Let those therefore who teach the doctrine of prayer to the saints consider this, and be ashamed of their miserable, hopeless, and forbidden refuge. C.

Ver. 27, 28. The anxiety of this man is not for the salvation of his brethren; but as he had initiated and educated them in his own luxury and debauchery, he dreads the increase of misery their condemnation and reproaches may bring on him through eternity. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Whatever things we enjoy in this world are but a trust committed to us by God to do good with. We cannot long hold them; but quickly, in an hour we think not, our reckoning for them must come. O that we may then be found faithful! It is self-contradicting and absurd to pursue earthly riches with more earnestness and industry than eternal treasures, and dangerous to neglect a single opportunity or advantage in favour of everlasting happiness. It is necessary to watch against all unfaithfulness and injustice in worldly enjoyments, which so many make instruments of unrighteousness. Lesser sins lead to greater, and pride and laziness often plunge men into the vilest dishonesty. The abuse of less important trusts provokes God to withhold what is more excellent. And as none can serve both God and the world, it is wise to prefer God in due time. But proud covetous hypocrites, enslaved by their own lusts, hate and scoff at instruction.—What is most esteemed and desired by men is generally abominable before God. His gospel dispensation does not make void, but establish the law. And blessed be God that both Jews and Gentiles have with earnestness crowded into the New-Testament church. Happy are the poorest of its true members: their adversities will quickly issue in everlasting honour and unutterable delight. God lightly values the wealth and honour of this world, which often absorbs the attention and claims the time of even those who profess Christ. Awful thought! to have only uncertain and unsatisfying enjoyments, which shall quickly issue in insupportable and everlasting emptiness! Inexpressibly different, and irreversibly fixed, is the future state of both saints and sinners. How delightful is it for the one to review his conversion to, and walking with, Christ; and how dreadful for the other to remember in what an absurd manner he lost his soul for the sake of sensual or carnal trifles! And terrible companions will they make in hell who had been partners in sin upon earth. With great diligence should we now earnestly search, believe, and practise God's Word; for, if it be neglected, no other means of salvation will ever be afforded us.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 20, 21. The kingdom of the Messiah will not be erected by temporal authority or force, nor make any pompous appearance in temporal riches or grandeur. Nor will he confine his throne and court to any particular place or nation; but his kingdom, being spiritual in its nature, power, and tendency, suited to the benefit of the soul, and for another world, works inwardly in men's hearts and consciences; and is already begun in the preaching of the gospel and conversion of some among you.

Ver. 5. Note (1). The petition for increase of faith plainly intimates the belief of the apostles that our Lord possessed power over the spirits as well as over the bodies of men. (2) Our Lord's reply proceeds upon the principle that it is our duty more to use what measure of faith we have, than to desire or pray for any ⁵ The full credence and testimony which our Lord here gives to the historic truthfulness of one of the most remarkable incidents recorded in the Pentateuch, is worthy of special attention in these days.

Whatever philosophers may say, there can be no doubt that Christ believed the Mosaic narrative. The Gospels and the Pentateuch must therefore stand or fall together.—

increase. (3) That the least amount of living faith is, from its nature, an increasing faith, and is, at all times, equal to whatever work the believer has to do, or whatever trial he has to endure. C.

Ver. 19. Thy faith hath made thee whole. Had not faith then made the nine whole? It appears questionable whether the nine really believed, or whether they superstitiously sought a cure; yet the Lord cleansed them all—even as he fed all Israel in the wilderness, though few of them regarded the work of his hands. What advantage, then, had the tenth that the nine had not? All were healed in body—he, through faith, was healed in body and spirit. C.

Ver. 22. One of the days of the Son of man. Days of such quiet, peace, and opportunity as ye now enjoy, of instructing the ignorant in the knowledge of Jesus; days of his power to cast out devils and do other wonderful works, such as ye have so often witnessed; and, finally, days of his power to destroy all the works of the devil, all which things (being sorely afflicted in the world ye shall earnestly desire for your own and the world's deliverance, but shall not see. By which delay he will try your faith and that of his whole church, till the 'set time' shall come, when he 'will take to himself his mighty power and reign.' C.

Ver. 32. She was killed by the sulphureous vapour, and lost by a single look backward!—Note. If those who are commanded to flee, and who are, moreover, angel-led, be so endangered, what is the danger of those 'who have put their hand to the plough,' if they should 'look back'?

Ver. 37. Eagles—generally taken to represent the Roman armies, whose standards were eagles. But the origin of the emblem seems rather to be Eze. 17. 3, 7, where Babylon and Egypt are both represented as eagles, unto whose nests came the Roman empire, and whose armorial bearing and device, as it were, they possess, together with their persecuting and enslaving spirit. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! that so many offences and injuries should be found among professed Christians! Many are grieved, stumbled, and eternally ruined by means of them. And tremendous woes must fall on their heads whose corrupt principles or practices occasion such things. How prone are most to offend God, and cause their neighbour to stumble out of his way! Yet most offenders are very averse to repent, and, if offended, to forgive injuries. Yea, it is impossible to perform self-denying duties without strong faith; and great is the need that Jesus should be daily increasing it. With great humility ought we to perform every commanded duty, and with great gratitude to receive distinguished mercies. And yet often both are wanting where they might have been most, and found where they could have been least expected. How many amuse themselves about the circumstances of Jesus' kingdom, instead of earnestly receiving him into their heart, that he may subdue their lusts and govern their spirits! But the erection of his spiritual kingdom in the world is generally attended with some fearful judgments on its opposers. Self-indulgence in sensual gratifications is a common forerunner of fearful and sudden destruction. And none are more certainly exposed than hardened apostates who refuse to take warning from the calamities of others before them. But if men will not heartily part with the world as their portion, they must perish with it.—In great wisdom and mercy the spread of God's anger among the obstinate Jews was made a mean of spreading the gospel among and of saving the Gentiles. Fearfully he resents the injuries done to his faithful servants, and pities and rewards them that suffer for his sake. Yea, marvelously he distinguishes them in his protections here and his eternal glories hereafter.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 35. Luke and Mark mention but one blind man (ch. 20. 30) describes two. This variety, however, presents no contradiction. Matthew records the fact of two blind men having been cured; Luke, writing at a time when it is most probable only one of them survived, mentions but that one; and Mark (ch. 10. 46) mentions one by name as authentic and living evidence of the miracle he narrates. The apparent contradiction lies in the assertion of Matthew (ch. 20. 29) that the miracle took place 'as they (Jesus and his disciples) departed from Jericho,' and of Mark (ch. 10. 46) that it occurred 'as he (Jesus) went out of Jericho,' while Luke assigns it to the time 'when he (Jesus) was come nigh unto Jericho.' The attempt to reconcile these contradictions by changing the translation 'when he was come nigh' to 'when he was nigh' seems utterly unsupported by any sufficient authority. The reconciliation must therefore be sought for from another source, and that source is opened in a modern example. London, as a general geographical name, includes Westminster, Southwark, &c. &c. One historian accordingly, in speaking of a public occurrence, affirms it took place 'as some one departed from London,' though, in another geographical sense, he really departed from Westminster. Another, relating the same event, affirms it occurred as the party described 'was come nigh to London,' meaning thereby, not London inclusive of Westminster, &c., but London as specially commencing at Temple-bar. Now, is there any contradiction here? None whatever. Why then are the Scriptures condemned where a secular historian is acquitted? Besides, Jericho consisted of an old and a new town, as Josephus records. Our Lord therefore may have performed his miracle as he 'departed' from Jericho, the one town, and as he 'was come nigh' to Jericho, the other. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The fervent and importunate prayer of faith is always effectual at last. A gracious answer cannot be delayed beyond the best time. And all the injuries done to the saints shall be fearfully resented, though God often patiently delays his justice till religion be almost utterly extirpated. What a mixture is in our worshipping assemblies on earth! Different tempers, manners, and ends have different effects on the very same duty. Pride, formality, and hypocrisy indulged, render men's persons and worship detestable to God. But not the greatest sinner, who humbly asks mercy through Jesus' righteousness, shall be denied a full justification unto eternal life. It is criminal for professors to withhold children from Christ, who delights to bless them. And very honourable to be like them in teachableness and humility.—No external privileges or duties are in the least to be rested in.

Men may go inconceivable lengths in apparent holiness, and yet their hearts remain unrenewed and attached to the world. Awful is the state when God's law does not convince men that they need a better righteousness than their own to justify them! and when love to Christ cannot wean their hearts from the world. Earthly enjoyments indeed often entangle and ensnare men to their everlasting ruin. And there is need of almighty power to deliver us from a carnal mind, and to make us content to forego all for Christ. But everything suffered for his sake, from principles of faith and love, will be gain at last. And nothing is too much to suffer for him, who suffered so much for us. Yet, alas! how slow of heart are men to conceive aright of his sufferings and glory! It is a great mercy to be awakened to prayer by curiosity or any means. Jesus is ready to take notice of, and grant relief under, all our troubles. And a deep sense of sin and earnest desires of mercy will quickly issue in grateful praise and holy obedience.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 3. And he sought to see Jesus who he was. Rather, 'what kind of person he was.' It is a fact that we scarce can hear or think of any remarkable person without forming in our minds an imaginary likeness of him, or desiring to know his bodily appearance. On this point the Scriptures afford not the least shadow of information. Of stature, of complexion, of expression, of voice, of manner, they breathe not a word, either for the painter or historian. His moral portrait they draw at full length, but of his bodily appearance believers shall know nothing till 'they see him as he is,' and themselves be 'fashioned into the image of his glorious body.' Yet as the desire of Zacharias to see 'what kind of person Jesus was' on earth brought salvation to his house, so the desire to 'see him as he is' in heaven still continues to bring salvation to the souls of believers and their children, Phi. 3. 21; 1 Jn. 3. 2. C.

Ver. 23. At my coming. The object of the parable was to correct the fond imagination of the immediate restoration of the kingdom of David in Jerusalem (see ver. 11); wherefore our Lord represents his restoration by a candidate for a kingdom—not taking immediate possession, but going into a 'far country,' and followed by the opposition of his citizens; then finally returning after a successful solicitation, and adjudging—not to servants sustained and stimulated by his presence, but to servants tried and confirmed during his absence—their several rewards, according to their works, Mat. 16. 27. C.

Ver. 40. It is spiritually as impossible for these to be silent as for the stones naturally to speak.—Note. There is a spiritual necessity, perfectly consistent with the freedom of an accountable agent, which yet is absolutely certain in its results, because it is dependent upon the very nature of God and of man—his intellectual and moral image: whereas all that is called a physical necessity, being dependent upon the mere will of God, and the relations he has established between unintelligent and unaccountable agents, may be superseded in a moment, and give place to a new order of things, the very reverse of that which preceded it. See 1 Co. 15. 44, 51; 2 Pe. 3. 7, 11, 13. C.

Ver. 43. Cast a trench. Rather, 'a rampart,' which, it would appear, from the exact meaning of the original, was supported by a strong paling, or stockade, in front. This prophecy was literally fulfilled by Titus, who, finding it impossible to take the

THE DEAD SEA—WHERE ONCE STOOD THE CITIES OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH. [Luke, xvii:29.]—"But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all." The part of the Dead Sea upon which we look, which is the northern inlet of it, is supposed to occupy the place upon which once stood the celebrated cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. Part of the sites of these cities is under the sea and part on the shore.

The mountains we see in the distance are the mountains of Judea. We are looking toward the west. To the east of us are the mountains of Moab. Sodom and Gomorrah once stood between the mountains of Judea and the mountains of Moab. The photograph you see was taken just a little after sunrise. The weather here was very hot even as early as that.

THE PLAIN OF JERICHO—OVER WHICH MOSES LOOKED FROM NEBO INTO THE PROMISED LAND. [Luke, xix:1.]—"And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich." The view we behold was taken at the foot of the Judean hills and furnishes us the opportunity of looking over the whole plain of the Jordan between the mountains of Judea and the mountains of Moab, which we see rising in the distance. At the foot of the mountains in the far distance flows the River Jordan. The little village to the left of the picture is Jericho, and the plain lying before us is perhaps the most historic portion of the world. Over this plain Moses looked from Nebo into the promised land.

Dreadful indeed is their condition whom even his compassion cannot deliver. It is strange that any should envy him a lowly triumph; that professors should hate him for purifying his temple, instructing the ignorant, and healing the diseased; and that ought

MOUNT OF OLIVES, FROM JERICHO ROAD. [LUKE, xix:37.] Our Savior always had to pass over the Mount of Olives in going from Jerusalem to Bethany. While coming down this mountain the whole multitude of the disciples met Christ and began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen, saying, "Blessed be the king that cometh in the name of the Lord. Peace in heaven and glory in the highest." The supreme interest of the road from Jericho is that it was trod by our blessed Lord when He came up to Jerusalem for the last time, passing the Mount of Olives, at the base of which he was to bow in anguish, and from whose eastern slope He was to ascend to heaven. There is infinite fascination for tempted mortals about this lonely mount to-day.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Christ avoucheth his authority by a question of John's baptism. 9 The parable of the vineyard. 19 Of giving tribute to Caesar. 27 He confuteth the Sadducees concerning the resurrection. 41 How Christ is the son of David. 45 He warneth his disciples to beware of the scribes.

AND it came to pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders,

2 And spake unto him, saying, Tell us, by what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority?

3 And he answered and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing; and answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then believed ye him not?

6 But and if we say, Of men; all the people will stone us: for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, that they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

9 Then began he to speak to the people this parable: A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season, he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard; but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him, when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

15 So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

16 He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

1 As he taught the people and preached the gospel, in modern times there have arisen professed ministers of the gospel, who undervalue the ordinance of preaching, and place the efficacy of religion chiefly in baptism, the Lord's Supper, or fasting and prayer. Without once undervaluing any of these ordinances of God, let the teaching and preaching of the Lord furnish a rebuke to all such imaginations, which implicitly undervalue what Jesus practised, as the chief means of converting sinners, and of building up believers, through faith, unto salvation.—C.

e The spot on which this incident occurred will easily be recognized by any one who travels from Bethany to Jerusalem by the caravan road. The road winds round the southern brow of Olivet. On reaching the summit Jerusalem in its full extent and beauty bursts suddenly upon the view. Moriah, with its temple, was in the foreground, just beyond the narrow deep glen of the Kidron. Zion rose higher still, beyond Moriah, and was crowned with the palace of 16. Ho. 11. 8.

f It was on reaching this spot the multitudes who accompanied the Saviour raised the triumphant shout. Jesus advanced, descending diagonally till he reached a point directly facing the temple, and there he doubtless uttered this pathetic prophecy.—P.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen;

38 Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered and said unto them, I tell you, that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

41 And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, 42 Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 And he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him, 48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him.

but the fear of inferiors should hinder some from murdering the divine Saviour or persecuting his people!

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—Fear of men may restrain persecutors from murdering, but not from cavilling. Satan and his emissaries will always oppose Christ and his gospel, and his spiritual headship over his church, to their utmost. And it is but lost labour to attempt persuading such as are resolved to shut their eyes against all conviction, and who will take the most base and false evasions to avoid it. Surprising is the patience and mercy of God, that so long affords un-fruitful and rebellious sinners such means of grace which they spurn and reject. But dreadful will be their condition at last, when all the injuries they had done to Jesus and his ministers shall come back upon them, and he shall glorify his power in spite of all their sinful opposition. Faithful ministers have great need to be always on their guard against deceitful brethren. Pretences to piety, and of regard to civil rulers, and cavils of carnal reasoning, will be all tried to ensnare or expose them. But let us at once fear God and honour the king, and hold fast plain Scripture truths, in the well-grounded hope of a glorious resurrection. It is necessary that we believe God's truths with all our heart, but not that we should be able to answer every wicked cavil against them. And in the faith and contemplation of Christ as God-man in one person, let us hate hypocrisy and avoid hypocrites.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 11. By fearful sights and great signs from heaven, cannot be intended, as some suppose, the comet hanging over the city like a flaming sword, and other aerial appearances mentioned by Josephus (Bell. Jud. vii. 12), for God had expressly forbidden any regard to these things, Je. 10. 2. Nor can any natural or even supernatural wonder become 8 And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that¹ this poor widow hath cast in more than they all.

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had.

5 ¶ And² as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which³ there shall not be left one stone⁴ upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

7 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Master, but⁵ when shall these things be? and what sign will there be⁶ when these things shall come to pass?

8 And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived: for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9 But when ye shall hear of wars⁷ and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by.

10 Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

11 And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12 But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13 And it shall turn to you for a testimony.⁸

14 Settle⁹ it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

16 And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake.

18 But there shall not an hair of your head perish.

19 In your patience possess ye your souls.⁵

20 And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.⁶

21 Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in 22 For¹ these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.

23 But² woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.³

35 ¶ And^a he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now,⁴ he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, °And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end:

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, °It is enough.⁵

39 ¶ And^a he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

41 And^a he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed, 42 Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove⁷ this cup from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done.

46 And said unto them, °Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, °behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus °to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?⁹

Here we have another and very remarkable instance of angelic ministrations.
An angel strengthened our Lord—gave him more physical power, which, from the details of the agony in the succeeding verse, he appears to have required.
The earnest prayer,
and the bloody sweat, show how terrible must have been the struggle, and how exhaustive on his physical frame.—C.

This appears to be the Lord's answer to the question—'Shall we solves by saying—'Suffer even to beto the soldiers who had seized and bound him: 'Suffer, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.

54 ¶ Then^a took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high-priest's house. °And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst² of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But °a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.³

57 And he °denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

58 And^a after a little while another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.

59 And about the space of one hour after, °another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a Galilean.

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew.

61 And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, 'Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

64 And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophecy, who is it that smote thee?

65 And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.

66 ¶ And^a as soon as it was day, the elders of the people and the chief priests and the scribes came together, and led him into their council, saying, conclude that, as he recurred to the same petition in three successive prayers, he also recurred to it more than once, and in various forms, in each prayer—one of which forms would be equally true, and verbally exact. C.

Ver. 53. This is your hour—when you are permitted to have power over me, 'and this (your successful violence) is the power of darkness' over you, Jn. 3. 10, whereby 'the god of this world has blinded your eyes,' and so brought you under 'the power of darkness' that you can neither see nor acknowledge my divine mission, 2 Co. 4. 4; Col. 1. 13. C.

Ver. 61. The Lord turned and looked upon Peter. Note, How ready are believers to forget their Saviour, when, as it were, his back is toward them—he is absent from them. But as one look of sight sent Peter out to weep, surely such as 'walk by faith, and not by sight,' will not forget, when they are tempted, that each should meet the temptation with, 'Thus it is written'— 'Thou, Lord, seest me!' C.

Ver. 70. Ye say that I am. This being that very thing which the Jews most obstinately denied, how did they say it? Might not the words be better translated, interrogatively, 'Do ye say (admit or deny) that I am?' The subsequent neglect or refusal of reply practically verifies, at the moment, the prophetic accusation, ver. 68. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Whether should I here most admire the lengths in wickedness to which sinners will go when left to themselves—the covetousness, treachery, unbelief, hardness of heart, malice, and malignity, manifested in plotting against, betraying, apprehending, condemning, reviling, and murdering the Son of God and Saviour of mankind—or his love, in patiently undergoing everything severe and shameful; in feasting, warning, directing, and comforting his disciples; in solemn resignation of himself to his sufferings and death; in miraculously healing one of his miscreant apprehenders; in graciously converting him who most criminally denied him; and in avowing himself a divine person, at the hazard of his life!—How extensive were his sufferings in soul—in body—in character! And yet all the malice of his enemies was so overruled as only to accomplish the fulfilment of prophecies, the honour of God, and the salvation of men. Marvellously he changed the ancient passover into a crucified Redeemer, and a delightful feast on his fulness. Let us always then observe it in the faith of his institution, in obedience to his authority, and aiming at his honour.

It is an awful thing for professed disciples and dignified clergymen to betray their Master; and highly shameful to indulge carnal pride and ambition in the presence of a suffering Redeemer, whose kingdom is not of this world. But seasonably preserved, highly honoured,

THE SPOT WHERE CHRIST PRAYED—GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE [LUKE, xxii:41].—
The Garden of Gethsemane is enclosed by a wall. To the north of the Garden and outside of it there is a spot pointed out as the place where Christ uttered the last prayer. A lamp hangs here and burns all the day and all the night long. It is a sad and touching scene to stand in the presence of this place and to watch the reverent and devoted saints stand and look upon it with sympathy and love. Many looking upon this scene do not pretend to conceal the tears which flow down their cheeks. This serves to bring before their imagination the agony and grief of the last hours of our Savior's life, when He uttered that last prayer for his disciples and for the world. Of Himself He never seemed to think; it was of those He came into the world to teach and redeem.

70 Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am.⁶

71 And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

CHAPTER XXIII.

¹ Jesus is accused before Pilate, and sent to Herod. ⁸ Herod mocketh him. ¹² Herod and Pilate are made friends. ¹³ Barabbas is desired of the people, and is loosed by Pilate, and Jesus is given to be crucified. ²⁷ He telleth the women, that lament him, the destruction of Jerusalem: ³⁴ prayeth for his enemies. ³⁹ Is reviled by one of the malefactors, but confessed by the other. ⁴⁶ His death. ⁵⁰ His burial.

AND the^a whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to^b accuse him, saying, We^c found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying that he himself is Christ a King.¹

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him, and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, I find no fault^a in this man.

5 And^b they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning^c from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod,³ who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 ¶ And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was^a desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and^b he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; but^c he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood and^b vehemently accused him.

11 And^a Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a^b gorgeous robe,⁴ and sent him again to Pilate.

12 ¶ And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ¶ And^a Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people,

14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people; and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:

15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and plentifully rewarded, are they who continue faithful in times of trouble. Great is the danger of pride, self-confidence, and unwatchfulness; or of rashly entering into temptation; and there is need of Jesus' intercession to preserve his people's faith when it is sorely shaken. And if we experience his influences, let us improve them for the warning and strengthening of our fellow-Christians. But sins of infirmity in his saints greatly differ from the presumptuous rebellion of hardened sinners. How shocking it is for men to interrogate Jesus concerning his person, doctrine, or work, merely to strengthen their own and others' prejudices and, lo, nothing worthy of death⁵ is done unto him.⁶

16 I^a will therefore chastise him, and release him.

17 (For^a of necessity⁷ he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And^b they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas:

19 (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.

21 But^a they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And^b he said unto them the third^a time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 And^c they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 And^d Pilate gave sentence^a that it should be as they required.

25 And he released unto them him^a that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 ¶ And^a as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great company of people, and of women,¹ which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.²

30 Then^a shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.

31 For^b if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?³

32 ¶ And^a there were also two others, malefactors,⁴ led with him to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place which is called^a Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 ¶ Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

4 I find no fault.

The Roman government now was too strong to be moved with jealousy at our Lord's claim to be King of the Jews.

Pilate, therefore, disregarded the imputed charge of rebellion against Cæsar. It is not improbable that Pilate was also moved by the sight of what he would consider fallen greatness. But, by whatever moved, his feelings were overruled by Providence to produce a judicial Gentile testimony to the innocence of our Lord, and an abiding record of the injustice and cruelty of his persecutors.—C.

Rather, a white robe; for the word translated "gorgeous" is applied by Polybius to the toga worn by such as were candidates for office at Rome, which is well known to have been always white. CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 8. Since Herod believed that Jesus 35 ¶ And the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ,^a the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers^b also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar, 37 And saying, If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

38 And^a a superscription also was written over him, in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 ¶ And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other, answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41 And^a we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss.

42 And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.^a

43 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.^a

44 ¶ And^a it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.^a 45 And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 ¶ And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

47 ¶ Now when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

48 And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned.

49 And^a all his acquaintance, and the women

¶ Two men. Two angels in human form.—C.

¶ Two angels are here mentioned in English version says stood by them, but the original merely signifies 'appeared to them,' without determining in what attitude. Mark mentions only one angel, 'sat by the right side' of the tomb (ch. 16. 5). Matthew also mentions one, who sat on the stone which he had rolled away from the door. The full account may be that they saw one angel outside who followed them in; they saw another inside on entering; and Luke, without stating the whole facts, mentions the two as 'appearing to them.'—P.

¶ Or, him that loveth. Re. 1. 18. He. 7. 8. 1 Ti. 1. 7.

that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

50 ¶ And, behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 (The same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews: who also himself waited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 And that day was the preparation,^a and the sabbath drew on.^a 55 ¶ And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath-day, according to the commandment.^a

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Christ's resurrection is declared by two angels to the women that came to the sepulchre. 9 These report it to others. 13 Christ himself appeareth to the two disciples that went to Emmaus: 38 afterwards he appeareth to the apostles, and reproveth their unbelief: 47 giveth unto heaven.

NOW upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

2 And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3 And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments.^a

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: remember the darkened sun, the quaking earth, and the rent veil, concur to attest his Messiahship!

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 26. 'Ought he not to have suffered,' in obedience to the divine will, in manifestation of eternal love, in fulfilment of all prophecy (Ge. 3. 15; Ps. 22. 1, &c.; Is. 50. 6; 53. 1, &c.; Da. 9. 26), and to respond to all the types by which he was represented in the history of providence and Mosaic sacrifices. C.

Ver. 30. The similarity of the expression and of the act to those of the original institution of the Lord's supper, seems to indicate that it was here again celebrated by our Lord as introductory to drawing the attention and opening the eyes of his disciples. See ver. 35. C.

Ver. 52. They worshipped him. This must have been divine worship; for, according to Ac. 1. 9, 10, they continued gazing, looking up, after him, until the angel spoke, after which no worship but divine worship could be offered to one that was absent and invisible. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How certain and sweet is the news of our Saviour's resurrection! Yea, often he surprises the most unlikely and unworthy with such discoveries of himself as they are apt to think too great or too good to be true. They who seek him early find him quickly; and they who talk of him have their eyes enlightened and hearts warmed by his presence. How seasonable are his visits! and what light his explications cast on the Scriptures, which relate to his sufferings or glory! And if men insist upon and plead for could work miracles, why did he not acknowledge him to be the Messiah? Because he attributed his admitted power of working miracles not to the power of God working in attestation of his divine commission, but to his knowledge of mere natural causes, and superior skill in some occult philosophy, such as the Egyptians and Persian magi were supposed to possess. Thus the Pharisees had also admitted his miraculous power, yet rejected his claims to be Messiah, because they attributed his miracles to Beelzebub. In all this, Herod and the Pharisees erred alike in looking merely at the miracles, and disregarding the prophecy by which they were preceded—which preceding prophecy is essential to the evidence of a divine commission, Re. 19. 10. C.

Ver. 33. Calvary. A little hill north-west of Jerusalem, in Hebrew called Golgotha, the place of a skull, from its resemblance, as is supposed, to a human skull. Calvary is derived from the Latin calvus, bald. Some have described it as a public cemetery; but the Jewish modes of burial, and care and avoidance of the bones of the dead, as well as the singular, 'skull,' not 'skulls,' will not countenance that opinion. C.

Ver. 43. Paradise. What differences, local or circumstantial, may be in the 'Father's house' and its 'many mansions,' it were presumptuous to inquire farther than is revealed. The meaning of 'paradise' is, however, settled by reference to 2 Co. 12. 4; Re. 2. 7, comp. with ch. 22. 1, &c., where it is evidently synonymous with heaven and its blessedness and glory, in allusion to that terrestrial paradise in which God and man dwelt together in holy intercourse, Ge. 2. 15. C.

Ver. 47. A righteous man. Instead of 'a righteous man,' Matthew has it 'the Son of God.' These two statements are both consistent with one another and with the doctrine of divine inspiration. Upon the simple principle that the centurion uttered both expressions, while each evangelist chose that one which the Spirit directed as most suited to the first readers of his Gospel. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Sinners often presumptuously charge their own faults upon Jesus and his faithful servants; and many cement their friendship by contempt of him. How strong is the power of prejudice against him! It undervalues and derides him, because he will not gratify curiosity or answer unreasonable demands; it forms the falsest accusations; it prefers every temporal interest, or even a base malefactor, lust, or devil, to him—indignant that he should reign or have any honour in the world. Yea, often they who seem convinced of his excellency, through importunity and carnal fear, or other similar temptations, violate all the bonds of truth, and rights of conscience and honour, to injure him. Many have their affections touched with the cruelty or love of his death whose hearts are never renewed to believe in and love him. But O how astonishing the grace, the infinite grace, of our Lord Jesus, in thus suffering, dying, and praying for his enemies! How great is his power and sovereignty in triumphing over Satan on the cross, and forming one of his fellow-sufferers from a hardened thief into a strong believer, a bold confessor, a fervent supplicant, an immediate partaker of heaven; while the other dies contradicting and blaspheming! And great likewise was the honour with which his Father marked his sufferings.—His judge, his crucifiers, the attending women, and even how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee,

7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And^o they remembered his words,

9 And^o returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It^o was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 And^o their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

12 ¶ Then^o arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves,⁴ and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.⁵

13 ¶ And^o behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus,⁶ which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.⁷

14 And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

15 And it came to pass, that, while^o they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.

16 But^o their eyes were holden,⁸ that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18 And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas,⁹ answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people:

20 And^o how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel:¹ and, beside all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea,² and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

¶ Alford's note on these words is most important. It accords fully with my own view and with my observations on Mat. 5.17. "I take 'the things concerning him' to be something very different from mere prophetic passages. The whole Scriptures are a testimony to him; the whole history of the chosen people, with its types, and its prophecies, is a showing forth of him; and it was here the whole—the Law, the Prophets, the Psalms, the Gospels, the Acts, the Epistles, the Revelation—all the Scriptures—that he laid out before them. This general leading into the meaning of the whole, as a whole, fulfilled in him, would be much more opportune to the place and time occupied than a direct exposition of selected passages. . . . Observe the testimony which this verse gives to the divine authority and Christian interpretation of the Old Testament Scriptures: so that the denial of the references to Christ's death and glory in the Old Testament is herewith nothing less than a denial of his own teaching.—P.

¶ The Jews classified the whole of the books of the Old Testament under three heads or divisions—The Law, including the Pentateuch; The Prophets, including Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Kings, and all the Prophets except Daniel; The Psalms, including the rest of the canonical books. This division was universally known in the time of our Lord. Consequently our Lord here uses the terms Law, Prophets, and Psalms as proper names, and he declares that each division was prophetic, he thus testifies to its inspiration.—P.

24 And^o certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.

25 Then he said unto them, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!

26 Ought^o not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?

27 And^o beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.²

28 And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.³

29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished⁴ out of their sight.

32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, 34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

35 And^o they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

36 ¶ And^o as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them,⁵ and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

37 But^o they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, "Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

39 Behold^o my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and his feet.

41 And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, "Have ye here any meat?

42 And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honey-comb.

43 And he took it, and did eat before them.

44 And he said unto them, "These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and the continuance of his presence, they shall receive still further information which will render them ready and desirous to communicate to others the mercies they have been made to partake of. But, alas! wonderful is the remaining stupidity and groundless fears of many who are really gracious in heart! And great is the folly of that unbelief which contends against the fullest evidence, and against our own best interests. And it is very unchristian, and unlike Christ, to eat our meals

EMMAUS—SHOWING WHERE CHRIST MADE HIMSELF KNOWN TO HIS DISCIPLES AFTER THE RESURRECTION. [Luke, xxiv:13.]—The Emmaus represented in the picture is one of the villages making special claim to be the place where Christ made himself known, after his resurrection, to his disciples. The particular Emmaus given in the above illustration is about five miles from Jerusalem, on the road to Jaffa. There are some noble old olive trees here, and there is an air of repose and restfulness about the place which somehow falls into line with our feelings as to the kind of place Emmaus ought to be. The village is built up near the top of the hill and in quietness and grace conforms very well to the beautiful and divine life that was made known to the disciples, in the breaking of bread, in this immediate locality.

without asking God's blessing on them, or returning him thanks for them, or without attempting to hold fellowship with Jesus in them. Astonishingly great is our Redeemer, in whom all the oracles of God are YEA and AMEN, to his glory. Endearing is his love that blesses his people, notwithstanding their manifold infirmities, and gives them his Spirit to qualify them for every trial or service to which he calls them. In abundant grace he began his work of pardon and conversion upon them who had just imbrued their hands in his blood. Delightful was his departure, blessing his disciples; and exalted and glorious is his dignity in heaven.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF LUKE.

There can be no doubt that Luke was that "beloved physician" who forsook a respected and lucrative profession to become the companion of Paul in persecution and poverty (Col. 4. 14; 2 Ti. 4. 11; Phile. 24). The prescription which Paul gives to Timothy (1 Ti. 5. 23), for his health's sake, was most probably suggested by Luke: the Spirit of God thereby honouring the medical profession in the person of a godly physician. By some he is supposed to have been the unnamed disciple that accompanied Cleophas to Emmaus (ch. 24. 13, 18), and that, from modesty, he has suppressed his own name, as he has also done in the Acts of the Apostles, which internal evidence and history concur in ascribing to him. But whether he accompanied Cleophas or not, is a matter alike uncertain and unimportant.

The authenticity of Luke's Gospel is evidenced even by those called apostoli fathers; and its special value consists in the amount of events and discourses which he minutely records, and which are not contained in the other evangelists, as may be seen by reference to the introductory observations. C.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT JOHN.

John, the writer of this Gospel, and of three short epistles, was originally a fisherman; who, being called to be one of Christ's disciples, became his peculiar favourite. Living long after the other apostles, when the church was first plagued with the denial of our Saviour's essential Deity, he aims more expressly to establish that fundamental article of the Christian religion, and to manifest the inexcusableness of the Jews in rejecting him. What he relates in his Gospel is generally new, and related by none of the other evangelists: viz. John Baptist's directing his disciples to Christ, ch. i.; Christ turning water into wine; purging the temple of fraudulent merchants, ch. ii.; healing the nobleman's son, ch. iv.; and the infirm man at the pool of Bethesda, ch. v.; the blind man at the pool of Siloam, ch. ix.; and his raising Lazarus from the dead, ch. xi. But he especially sets before us his divine discourses—with Nicodemus, touching the new birth, ch. iii.; with the Samaritan woman and his disciples, ch. iv.; with the Pharisees, concerning his equality with the Father in Godhead, working, and worship, ch. 5. 18, 21, 23; with the Capernaumites, concerning himself as the bread of life, ch. vi.; with the Jews, touching his power over the Sabbath-day, and to save sinners, ch. vii.; and his being the Light of the world, the Son of the Father, and teacher of that truth which alone could render them free from the bondage of Satan, sin, and death, ch. viii.; and the chief and divine Shepherd of God's chosen people, ch. x.; and with his disciples, for their direction and comfort, at his last supper, ch. xiii.—xvi.; and his prayer to his Father, ch. xvii., &c.

[According to all antiquity this Gospel was written after the other three, and several years after the war with the Romans, that had terminated in the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jews. It is remarkable that he alone records the name of the disciple who smote Malchus with the sword; for Peter was now beyond the reach of his enemies, and that as Lazarus had, most probably, now also returned to his rest, he alone records his resurrection, which the others had omitted for fear of incensing the Jews, who had purposed to put him to death. It is also remarkable that the other evangelists record our Lord's predictions, and that John omits them; most likely because most, if not all, of them had been already fulfilled; for Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus; and John was not banished to Patmos till the 15th of Domitian his successor, A.D. 95, and was recalled from exile upon the accession of Nerva, A.D. 96, when he returned to Ephesus, where he wrote his Gospel and epistles, and survived till the third year of the emperor Trajan, when he died in the hundredth year of his age. C.]

John's Gospel is in many respects different from the others. The source and nature of its leading characteristics will be best developed by a brief notice of the author. His father was Zebedee, a fisherman of Galilee, apparently of some wealth, since he had hired servants. His son, therefore, would receive a superior education. John must have been thoughtful from boyhood, and the errors of the Jewish religion as then developed in ritual and tradition must have attracted his attention. He was a very young man when he attached himself to the Baptist, and he did not long remain under his elementary tuition. The Baptist's testimony to Jesus produced such an effect on John that he followed him. A deep attachment was formed, arising, as it appears, not merely from intellectual conviction of the truth of Christ's doctrines, but from ardent love for his person, and profound admiration of his character. John was one of the three whom Jesus admitted into the sanctuary of his inner life. They alone witnessed the transfiguration and the agony in Gethsemane. And while the three were favoured above others, John's intense love and devotion seems to have gained for him a still closer intimacy. He lay on Christ's bosom at supper; he followed him to the judgment-hall and the cross; he received from him, as the highest token of confidence and affection, the charge of Mary his mother. John had opportunities of witnessing Christ's power and glory, of seeing the depths of his love, of learning the mysteries of his nature, of observing the results of his work, such as were enjoyed by no other man. It is to this intimate communion of the beloved disciple with the loving Saviour we owe the development of those sublime truths set forth in this Gospel. It is to his profound veneration for, and appreciation of, every word that fell from Christ's lips, we are indebted for those long discourses which this Gospel alone contains. While the other disciples were attracted by his miracles, parables, and prophecies, John's philosophic mind was impressed by the mystery of his deity; by the depths of his wondrous love in assuming our nature and bearing our sin; by the triumphs of his work, in giving light to a dark, and life to a dead world; by the glories of the union established between him and his church, by the promise of the Comforter.

Such was John's training. From the moment he turned away from the Baptist, he seems never to have left the Messiah's side. He took supreme delight in the contemplation of his person and nature. He hung on every word that fell from his lips. He tried to fathom every truth embodied in his discourses. After Christ's death, too, John doubtless heard from Mary many of those displays of wisdom, power, and grace divine which the holy child had displayed from infancy to manhood, and which, as we are told, she 'treasured up in her heart.' John was taught as never man was taught.

The object of the other evangelists was mainly to give a history of our Lord; John's object was mainly to develop his theological system. The synoptists enunciated doctrines, but they did so from a historical point of view; John, on the other hand, narrated incidents, but he did so from a doctrinal point of view. The discourses of our Lord which he reports are all developments of the most sublime and profound doctrines. In this Gospel there is no biography of Jesus, properly so called; 'but there is, in historical form, a representation of the Christian faith, in relation to the person of Christ as its central point; and in this representation there is a picture, on the one hand, of the antagonism of the world to the truth revealed in him; and on the other, of the spiritual blessedness of the few who yield themselves to him as the Light of life.' CHAPTER I. Ver. 1-5. From all eternity the Son of God, the great Speaker for and to men, the medium of divine manifestations to us, and to whom all the Scripture gives testimony, who may therefore properly be called the Word, existed a distinct person, equal to and the express image of his divine Father, and the same in substance with him, necessarily possessed of every excellency of Godhead; and by him were all creatures, from the highest to the lowest, formed of nothing in the beginning of time. From that life necessarily existent in him proceeded all kinds and degrees of life, knowledge, and comfort, found among men. And yet, though he, in the dictates of natural conscience and of revelation, manifests himself to men, such is the sinful ignorance and error of their minds, cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

35 ¶ Again, the next day after, John stood, and two of his disciples;

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God!

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou?

39 He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, A stone.

43 ¶ The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

44 Now Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

46 And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest

OUR CAMP—KHAN JUBB YUSEF. [John, ii:12.]—"After this he went down to Capernaum, he and his mother, and his brethren and his disciples, and they continued there not many days." The artist and the writer left Capernaum about 12 o'clock, noon, and reached this place about half-past two. We passed over between Capernaum and Khan Jubb Yusef, the roughest road, perhaps, on earth. Our dragoon said it was called the devil's backbone. Yet it is the old caravan road from Egypt to Damascus, and has been traveled in all ages. On the last ridge, just before we reach Khan Jubb Yusef, we had our last glimpse of the Sea of Galilee and our first full view of Mount Hermon. Khan Jubb Yusef means the Inn of Joseph's Well, for there is a tradition among the Mohammedans that here Joseph's brethren threw him into the well. There is no doubt but that our Savior often retired into these wild and lonely regions for meditation and prayer.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six⁴ years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

Ver. 16. Grace for grace. There being a fulness of grace in Christ, ver. 14, believers receive a measure of every form of grace in him. It may be illustrated by a garden in which there of our Mediator! He is the eternal God, equal with his Father; he is the Creator of all things, and the original source of all light, life, and honour, in the world.—Marvellous is his person as God-man, and full of grace and truth for our supply! His divine nature puts the most wonderful dignity upon his condescension, and on his offering himself a sacrifice to pardon our sins. And his character and mission are gloriously attested by apostles, by John the Baptist, and by his Father and blessed Spirit. Alas! that any, especially such as enjoy his oracles and favours, should remain ignorant or obstinate rejecters of him! But happy are they whom he persuades by his grace, adopts into his family, conforms unto his image, supplies with his light and life, humbles by his influence, informs by his Spirit, instructs by his visits, and honours in his service. And the more honour God puts upon men, the more humble they ought to be. The more they know of Christ and his work, the more they ought to extol him, that others, particularly their relations, may seek

Christ and h m that other ought to be.

THERE was^a a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:
 2 The same came to Jesus by night,¹ and said unto him, ²Rabbi, ^bwe know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do and follow him. It is habitual not transient fellowship with him that will supply the need and satisfy the desires of real believers. Acquaintance with him is the best answer to all prejudices and objections against him. They who find him cannot but exult in their acquisition. And great is the honour to have his attestation of our secret devotion and universal integrity.—Our views of his glory are but beginning and will be for ever on the advance. And angels and men will eternally behold, and increasingly admire and serve him, in his kingdom above.

Ver. 15. He drove them all that is, the dealers, whom he expelled merely by authoritative injunction, ver. 16, the cattle only he would drive with the scourge. These dealers, being very unpopular because of their extortions, and conscious that they were profaning the temple and violating the law, and seeing Jesus surrounded by so many zealous followers, yield to an authority which otherwise their aversion and self-interest would have prompted them to resist. It is, moreover, not improbable that there was something so commanding in our Lord's manner, and in his character, working miracles, which must by this time have become public, that the most reluctant felt compelled to yield implicit obedience. —Note. It is matter of question whether our Lord cleansed the temple once or twice. Matthew (ch. 21. 12) and Mark (ch. 11. 15) certainly record such a clearing near the end of his ministry, which some act some think John has also recorded, without reference to order of time. The narratives, however, are accompanied by such notes of difference as seem clearly to indicate two distinct cleansings—the one at the opening, the other at the close of our Lord's ministry. See note on ver. 20. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are those weddings which are directed by Christ's law, graced with his presence, and ratified by his blessing! With innocent pleasures friends may feast together, if they act as under his eye. Religion requires us not to be unsocial, but to rejoice with them that rejoice. In the very height of earthly comforts there is indeed something still wanting. But there are no wants in which Christ cannot supply us. And if we wish to receive his blessings, we must not prescribe to him, but follow his directions. Nor need we be discouraged by rebukes and delays; his mercies come soon enough if they come large and sweet in the end. And the more we see of his glory, the more firmly shall we believe in him, and desire to be with him. Jesus makes but a short stay where he is signally contemned. And the most heaven-daring corruptions are introduced into churches by the love of filthy lucre. But wisely Jesus manifests his glory, vindicates the honour and maintains the purity of these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, 'Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again,³ he cannot see the kingdom of God.⁴

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.⁵

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.⁸

14 And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:

15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever be-

All attempts to explain away the plain sense of this verse are futile and ridiculous. The Son of man, the Lord Jesus, the Word made flesh, was in, came down from, heaven, and was in heaven (heav-

up into heaven when he left this earth; and by all these proofs, speaking in the pro-

Lord establish that he alone can speak of heavenly things to men, or convey the blessing of the new birth to them.—P.

17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

18 He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.³

21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

23 And John also was baptizing in Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized.

24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

25 Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.⁶

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.

27 John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him.

divine ordinances, without injuring civil property.—He knows what is in man, and can overawe the spirits of his most powerful and presumptuous enemies. And he had a sovereign power over his own natural life, as God equal with his Father. Alas! how ill understood, much hated, or but feignedly believed, are his words of truth! Corrupt hearts little relish reforming authority. Even believers slowly comprehend the nature of Christ's kingdom. And sometimes it is not till long after they are heard that divine truths are remembered, understood, and believed. There is great need to avoid trusting in men, and to be careful whom we take for our friends. And studiously should we beware of hypocrisy, as Jesus hath an exact knowledge of our hearts.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 3, 5, 6, 8. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you that be a man's moral attainments, religious advantages, or external privileges what they will, he can by no means be a true member of the gospel church, or admitted into the heavenly state, except his heart and life be thoroughly changed in their principles, courses, and ends, and there be a new vital principle of holiness formed in him by the divine influence of the Holy Ghost. Whoever is born of sinful parents, though it were ever so often, must be still sinful, and so unfit for fellow-ship with God. But whoever has by choosing Christ a principle of grace and holiness, working by the Holy Ghost, in all the powers of his soul, and acts accordingly, is made meet for the enjoyments and duties of the gospel state, and for the inheritance of the saints in light.—Nor is it any wonder that you cannot conceive how the Holy Ghost enlightens, quickens, and sanctifies the souls of men, when you cannot even account for the causes and motions of the wind. 11-13. My forerunner and the prophets, and especially I, my Father, and the blessed Spirit, speak and attest what we understand and know to be certainly true; but, through blindness and prejudice, ye Jews neither understand, believe, nor embrace our doctrine. If therefore you do not understand nor believe the nature or necessity of that work of grace which must be experienced on earth in order to salvation, when thus familiarly illustrated to you from earthly similitudes, how could you understand or believe my declarations of the more sublime mysteries of the gospel, relative to the dignity of my person and office, the design of my works, the spiritual nature of my kingdom, and the blessedness of the future state, which no mere man can comprehend, or fully declare to others, but only the Messiah who came from heaven, and who even now is still there, in respect of his divine nature? 14-17. And yet that divine person the Messiah must be put to an ignominious death, in order to his bringing about the salvation of sinners; for as Moses lifted up the brazen serpent on a pole in the wilderness, as God's ordinance for effectually healing all the Israelites who had been mortally bitten by the fiery serpents, and looked on it for a cure, so the Messiah, who appears in the likeness of sinful flesh, though noly, harmless, and undefiled, must be lifted up on the cross, and afterwards exalted in heaven, and exhibited as God's ordinance in the gospel, for sinners to look to, by faith, for salvation; that every one, of whatever rank, degree, or nation he be, who, under an affecting sense of his own sinfulness and obnoxiousness to divine wrath, shall, according to God's appointment, look to and trust in him for salvation, may be delivered from all sin and misery, and be made a partaker of grace here and glory hereafter, however weak his faith be, or great or many his sins have been. For God, who delights in mercy, looking with compassion on the sinful and miserable state of mankind, conceived such an amazing and unparalleled design of mercy and love towards the whole of them, both Jews and likewise Gentiles, that he freely gave his only begotten to be their Mediator and atoning sacrifice, that who eth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: 'this my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He^r must increase, but I must decrease.

31 He^r that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all.

32 And^r what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; 'and no man receiveth his testimony.'

33 He that hath received his testimony 'hath set to his seal that God is true.

34 For^r he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: 'for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

35 The^r Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

⁷ Ps. 45: 7. Is. 11: 2-5; 59: 21; 61: 1-2. Col. 1: 19; 2: 3, 9. ch. 1: 14, 16. Ep. 4: 7.
⁸ Is. 9: 6, 7; 49: 6, 8; 53: 12. Ps. 2: 8; 89: 27. Da. 7: 14. Mat. 11: 27; 28: 18. ch. 5: 22; 17: 2; 13: 3. He. 2: 8, 9.

soever receives him as God's free gift offered in the gospel, and depends on him for salvation, might not perish in his sins, however great or many, but obtain an everlasting life of holiness and happiness. For God sent not his Son into the world to pass and to execute a sentence of condemnation upon all others beside you Jews, as many of you think, but that persons of all nations may be really saved from sin and misery, and blessed with everlasting holiness and happiness. 18-21. And every one, Jew or Gentile, who believes on Christ, as freely offered in the gospel, is freed from the condemning sentence of God's law; but whosoever rejects or neglects him remains under the curse; yea, his guilt is increased, and his sentence of condemnation fixed and extended, through his rejecting the only Saviour and salvation by unbelief. And this will peculiarly aggravate the sin and misery of many, that, when blessed with the clearest light of the glorious gospel, they, both Jews and Gentiles, through attachment to their own corrupt courses, will prefer their vain traditions, superstitious and idolatrous notions and worship, to it. For every one that is resolved to adhere to his sins heartily hates the truths of divine revelation, which oppose and condemn them, stifles convictions, and shuns the light of that knowledge which presents his darling corruptions in their shameful, hideous, and dangerous forms; but an upright saint, who practises whatever divine truths he knows, is sincerely willing to be tried to the utmost, and to know the whole of the divine will, that his whole conduct, being regulated thereby, may evidently appear the effect of God's regenerating power, and the fruit of vital union and communion with him, and may tend to his glory. 27-30. Both Jesus and myself have our whole commission and success from God; nor can any receive our plain instructions without being enlightened and enabled by God. I appeal to you that I openly declared I was not the Christ, but only his forerunner, to prepare the nation for the manifestation of himself. As his friend, I have laboured to gain sinners to him, the glorious Bridegroom of his church; and I exceedingly rejoice to hear and see them following after and cleaving to him, whose property they are. For it is necessary that the manifestations of his glory, and the number of his disciples, should so continue and increase, that there will be no more use for me as his forerunner. 31-34. I, and every one of the ancient prophets, are but earthly in our origin and frame, and cannot of ourselves speak of divine things but in a weak, gross, and earthly manner; but he, being the Lord from heaven, and endowed with the Holy Ghost above measure, understands the whole mind of God, and speaks of heavenly things as one fully acquainted with them. And yet, alas! how few heartily believe and receive his instructions! but every one who believes them solemnly acknowledges him to be the Messiah, in whose person and work all the promises of God are, or will certainly be, fulfilled to the praise of his love. 35, 36. Nay, such is the superlative love of the Father to this his only begotten Son, who freely undertook to be our Mediator, that he has committed to his management all things relating to the kingdoms of providence, grace and glory, that he may judge and subdue the world, and distribute blessings among all people. Whosoever therefore receives his doctrine, and believes on him as the Son of God and Saviour of sinners, hath already in himself the beginnings, securities, and foretastes of eternal life, which may certainly issue in the complete enjoyment of it; and whosoever wilfully and finally rejects him lies under the most awfully righteous justice of God, which shall certainly be completed fully to the uttermost, and for ever.

Ver. 2. This case of Nicodemus is recorded chiefly for the exposition of the new birth from above; but also for the encouragement of timid believers who, in fear of men's ridicule or displeasure, have not obtained full courage to follow conscience, and openly avow their profession of truth and godliness. But 'him that was weak in the faith' Christ received without reproach, and treated with tenderness; let 'them that are strong' go and do so likewise. C.

Ver. 5. Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit. If this be spoken of what Bloomfield, Vailly, and others call 'baptismal regeneration,' then what availed the promise to the penitent thief? and what is the condition of myriads of the children of believers dying in infancy who were never baptized? Should not the passage rather be translated, 'Except a man be born of water, even of the Spirit,' of which water was the scriptural emblem? See Is. 44: 3; Eze. 36: 25-27. And this translation is in perfect accordance with that of many passages exactly similar in construction—such as 1 Co. 15: 24; 2 Co. 1: 3; Ep. 5: 5; Tit. 2: 13; 1n. 4: 9. See Middleton on Gr. Art. ch. ii. pp. 83, 84; ch. iii. p. 93. 'This translation seems absolutely confirmed by our Lord's immediate reference of this new birth (see ver. 6), not to water at all, but entirely to the Spirit. See Mat. 3: 11, where 'water' and 'fire,' as here 'water' and 'Spirit,' denote one thing. C.

Ver. 12. Earthly things. Things that have earthly similitudes, and that take place visibly on the earth.—Heavenly things. These are: (1) The incarnation and mission of the Son, ver. 13. (2) The crucifixion, and salvation by faith, ver. 14, 15. (3) The eternal and gratuitous love of God, &c., ver. 16. (4) The condemnation of unbelievers, ver. 19. C.

Ver. 13. No man hath ascended up to heaven. Moses merely ascended to the top of Sinai—Elijah was taken up—but he that 'came down' is the Word that 'was God,' who 'became flesh' (ch. 1, 14), and 'dwelt among us' as 'Son of man.'—Which is, rather, 'who is being, in heaven,' whose proper dwelling-place is heaven, in 'the glory he had with the Father before the world was.' C.

Ver. 23. Enon. A town on the west of Jordan, fifty-four miles north-east of Jerusalem, and situated in the district of Samaria. No vestige of its ruins is now to be found. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The miracles of Christ were manifestly divine, and his doctrines plain and important. He was ready to cure the most inexcusable ignorance, and to instruct by night such as were ashamed to own him by day. Infinitely important is the doctrine and experience of the Spirit's gracious implantation of new habits or principles of holiness in our nature, when we choose Christ as our Savior. Yet, alas! how many ministers and others are totally ignorant of it, and prejudiced against it! And because their carnal mind cannot comprehend how or why the Spirit works on the heart; how the Saviour can be at once God and man, in heaven and on earth; or how his being crucified and offered in the gospel, and received by faith, heals and saves sinners, they condemn and deny the same! But amazing is the love of God in setting up his only begotten Son as his ordinance for the salvation of sinners, even the chief, Gentiles as well as Jews. And dreadfully criminal and dangerous is that unbelief which rejects the testimony and offer of God; which hates his glory and detests his truth, as a disturber of indwelling lusts. Nothing can save the man 36 He^r that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; 'but the wrath of God abideth on him.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Christ talketh with a woman of Samaria, and revealeth himself unto her. 27 His disciples marvel. 31 He declareth to them his soul for God's glory. 39 Many Samaritans believe on him. 43 He departeth into Galilee, and healeth the ruler's son that lay sick at Capernaum.

WHEN therefore 'the Lord knew how the Pharisees 'had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself 'baptized not, but his disciples,)

3 He^d left Judea,¹ and departed again into Galilee.

4 And^r he must needs go through 'Samaria.

5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which who perseveres in his unbelief. And nothing can damn the soul which by faith credits God's testimony concerning Christ, and receives him as a divine and well-qualified Saviour. It is absurd for professors to be more concerned about external performances of religion than about the real work of grace in their heart. And it is honourable for all, and especially ministers, to view all their gifts and graces as coming from God, and to be content to be debased to the very lowest that Jesus Christ may be exalted, answerably to his Father's love to him, and the authority which he hath given him.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 10, 14. Christ himself, in all his offices, work, and fulness, is God's gift granted freely to sinners; and the water which he gives is the Holy Ghost, in his person, operation, graces, and comforts, which solidly satisfies the soul, weans it from the cares of this world, prevents its perdition, and gradually prepares for, and seek to bring, the eternal and inexpressible holiness and happiness of the heavenly state. 35-38. The coming of yonder crowds of Samaritans to hear and believe on me, betokens the near approach of the gospel dispensation, in which multitudes, both Jews and Gentiles, will be converted to me;—as instruments in which ye shall be honourably owned and supported, and at last amply rewarded, in their and your own eternal salvation;—and shall, together with John Baptist and the ancient prophets, who sowed the good seed of the Word, rejoice in your success;—and being sent by me to preach the gospel in all the world, and having the advantage of all my labours, as also that of the preceding prophets, ye shall perfect that blessed work, which we only began, in the conversion and eternal salvation of men.

Ver. 11. Nothing to draw with. Travellers in the East frequently carry a leathern bucket, with which they draw from public wells by means of the rope and wheel.—The well is deep. Maundrell estimates the depth of the well called Jacob's at thirty-five yards, with five yards depth of water in the bottom. It is cut in the solid rock—what kind is not mentioned—and if it really be the well which Jacob dug, which can scarcely be doubted, it affords an interesting view of the engineering skill, perseverance, and expenditure of those ancient times. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Those who hate the gospel will always be exasperated at its success. And if duty do not require us to stand, it is best to avoid their resentment by flight. Alas, how our sins pained our Redeemer, hunted him to and fro as a vagabond, fatigued him with travel, pinched him with hunger and thirst, exposed him to insult, and the want even of a draught of water! But cheerfully he laboured in seeking and saving that which was lost. Freely was he given by God. Abundant was his fulness of the Spirit, of grace, and every other permanent blessing; and he is earnestly intent on the full bestowal of them! And yet how are his blessings refused, even by such as infinitely need them, and for whom they are prepared! But so pungent are his convictions, so plain his instructions, so spiritual his exhibitions of God and his worship, so attracting his discoveries of himself and his Spirit, that even a heart hardened in whoredom and prejudice could not withstand them. And yet, alas, how often is the believer's sensible fellowship with Christ interrupted when at the very sweetest! A remarkable renovation of heart produces a deep concern for the

JACOB'S WELL, WHERE JESUS TALKED WITH THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA.
 [JOHN, iv:6.]—There has never been the slightest doubt in the minds of all the authorities as to the identity of Jacob's Well. Looking upon this picture we may know that we are looking at the representation of a spot where the Lord Jesus actually sat. Here he conversed with the woman of Samaria while the disciples were gone into the neighboring city to buy meat. The broken columns you see are parts of an old church probably built here in the time of the Crusaders. This is the parcel of ground which Jacob purchased and gave to his son Joseph. The well is now seventy-five feet six inches deep, and seven feet six inches in breadth. The diameter of the opening is seventeen and a half feet. Here Christ gave to the world that marvelous lesson that God was a spirit and sought such to worship him as worshiped him in spirit and in truth.

SYCHAR. [John, iv:5.]—While the Savior conversed with the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well, the disciples went into the city of Sychar to buy meat for their midday meal. The above photograph locates the place to which they went. It was about 12 o'clock when the Savior and the disciples reached Jacob's well on their northward journey. Sychar is about two miles from Jacob's well, and in the time of our Savior was a place of importance. It is only a ruined and wretched village now, and would be the last place on earth a modern tourist would expect to find anything to eat. There is not even a store in town now where anything is offered for sale. The few people now here live by farming. Joseph's tomb is between Sychar and Jacob's well, and this whole region is historic of Biblical event.

is called Sychar, near ^{to} the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.³

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour.⁴

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria⁵ to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for the Jews have no dealings⁶ with the Samaritans.

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God,⁷ and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again:

14 But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith unto him, Sir, Give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands;⁸ and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.¹

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet.

20 Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.²

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

22 Ye worship ye know not what: we know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews.

The main road from Jerusalem to Galilee runs close to the well, across the mouth of the valley. the sanctuary of the Samaritans, rose immediately beside the well, and the ruins of the temple which had been built upon its summit were visible from the spot where the woman stood. The great controversy between the Jews and Samaritans was whether worship ought to be offered up on Gerizim or Moriah. As Christ's words proved him to be a prophet, the woman seized upon the opportunity to have the question solved. Our Lord's answer embodies a great principle, that true worship is the worship of the heart, and is acceptable wherever offered.—P.

29 Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did:⁸ is not this the Christ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 ¶ In the meanwhile his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me,⁹ and to finish his work.¹

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.

36 And he that reareth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together.

37 And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.

38 I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours.

39 ¶ And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them: and he abode there two days.

41 And many more believed because of his own word;

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have salvation of others. No shame, no pains, are counted too much to win them to Christ. Perpetual and powerful are the labours of a Saviour; and inexpressible his delight in saving sinners, particularly the Gentiles. Happy is it when the labours of one generation of ministers prepare remarkable fruitfulness for their successors. And greatly efficacious is the gospel when preached and heard as indeed the Word of Christ.

It often does most good where it could have been least expected; and helps the bitterest enemies cordially to apply Jesus as their own Saviour. But aggravated is their wickedness who misimprove the best opportu-

HORSESHOEING IN TIBERIAS—ON THE SEA OF GALILEE. [John, iv:43.]—"Now after two days he departed thence and went into Galilee." Tiberias is a city of Galilee, and on the Sea of Galilee where Christ performed so many miracles and uttered so many of His wonderful words. During the time of Herod, Roman luxury was introduced into Northern Palestine from the Sea of Galilee to Caesarea Philippi. So there are in Tiberias to-day many evidences of the fact that the Romans were here. Herod Antipas was the founder of Tiberias. It is said that he preferred the seaside to any other place of residence, and here surrounded the palace which he built with dwellings for his court, with amphitheaters, bathhouses and temples. We give a picture of a horseshoeing scene, taken in Tiberias. The ground is so completely covered with rocks in Palestine that it is necessary to keep horses shod all the time.

PILLARS OF AHAB, SAMARIA. [JOHN, v:43.]—In going from Jacob's well at Shechem into Galilee, Christ would pass northward by Samaria, which is about seven miles from Shechem. There is no good reason why the columns in this picture should be called the "Pillars of Ahab," only on the account that Samaria was for a long time the capital of Ahab. These columns were really placed here by Herod in honor of Augustus, and in the days of our Savior this was doubtless a very important city. It is upon an eligible and beautiful location upon a prominence round as a sugar-loaf, from the top of which one gets a sight of the great Jezreel plains and the Mediterranean Sea in the distance. The hill Samaria, upon which the city once stood, is very fertile, and is now cultivated in wheat. The day upon which this picture was taken, our dragoman led us around the city, and the wheat was so high as to be as tall in some places as the tops of our heads while we were upon our horses.

heard him ourselves, and know that *this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 ¶ Now^a after two days he departed thence, and^b went into Galilee.

44 For Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.²

45 Then^a when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen *all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

46 So Jesus came again into *Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman,³ whose son was sick at Capernaum.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought^a him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, *Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, *come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, *Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man *believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

servants met him, and told him, saying, 'Thy son liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in the which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second^a miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

CHAPTER V.

1 Jesus on the sabbath-day cureth him that was diseased eight and thirty years. 10 The Jews ther-fore cavil, and persecute him for it. 17 He answereth for himself, and reproveth them, showing by the testimony of his Father, 32 of John, 36 of his works, 39 and of the Scriptures, who he is.

AFTER this^a there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem by the 'sheep-market,'² a 'pool,'³ which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda,⁴ having five porches.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, *withered, waiting for the moving of the water.⁵

4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever⁶ then first after the troubling of the nities. Happy are those troubles which graciously direct sinners to him and his salvation; and when staggerings of heart issue in the firmness of faith. Happy is it when heads of families, great and small, are given to fervent prayer, and deeply concerned for the real and eternal life of children and servants; and when new favours from Christ, and a comparison of spiritual experiences, confirm men's faith; and especially when whole families are converted by his grace!

CHAPTER V. Ver. 17-23. As my Father, who instituted the Sabbath, continually performs his providential works on that as well as on other days, so I, who am his only begotten Son, partaking of the same nature and perfections, must be allowed to work along with him, as is meet.—My union with him, in nature, operation, and design, is such, that I can do nothing separately from him, but do always act in the same work, and in the same manner, and with the same divine power and authority as he does. And such is our union, will, and affection, that nothing of his counsels or operations is ever hid from me: yea, in co-operation with him, I will perform works still greater than the healing a lame man, that, if you will continue obstinate in your unbelief, ye may at least be astonished and confounded thereat. And as he at pleasure can restore the dead to life, so I, with equal power, can not only restore to natural life whoever I please, but bestow upon all who will receive me as their Savior eternal life, and give them power to resist evil. For the Father hath not reserved for himself, nor doth he exercise immediately by himself, the management of the present concerns of providence, or the future judgment of the world, but has intrusted the same to his incarnate Son; that, instead of being offended at his deep humiliation, men might be induced, by his bearing and executing this high commission, to pay the same religious worship and obedience to him as they are obliged to pay to the Father himself: and whoever neglects to honour him in this manner, is held a neglecter of the honour of the Father, who has authorized and is represented by him. 24-30. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you, that whoever heartily receives my doctrine, relative to my person and office, and believes on my Father, who has constituted me Mediator, has a full title to, and the beginnings and earnest of, eternal life, and is completely translated from under the curse and condemnation of the law into a state of justification of life: and that the time is at hand when not only some, corporally dead, shall be restored to life by my word, but even they who are dead in trespasses and sins, will be regenerated and quickened to the obedience of faith, and live for ever: for as the Father has life essentially and necessarily in himself, and communicates life to every living creature, so he has constituted me, his essentially living Son, a quickening Spirit, full of life in myself as Mediator, and authorized me to communicate it to others. Nor need you think it strange that I say dead bodies and souls shall quickly be enlivened by my power; for, at the last day, the whole race of mankind shall by it be raised from the dead, and brought to my judgment-seat. The true saints, quickened by my Spirit dwelling in them, shall be adjudged to the full enjoyment of everlasting life; and they who died in their sins, raised by my power, shall receive a dreadful sentence of condemnation, to their utter and everlasting ruin.—But in all these things I neither do, nor can do, anything separately from my Father; for in all my administrations I proceed as one perfectly acquainted with his mind, and as his Messiah, instructed by him; and my whole management must necessarily be perfectly right, because I therein neither aim at nor pursue any private will of my own, different from, or opposite to, the will of my Father, but exactly discharge the commission which he hath given me in sending me into the world. 31-39. But I do not rest the matter upon my own mere testimony, as if that alone were sufficient: I appeal to that solemn testimony which John bare concerning me, and which ye cannot object against, since ye acknowledged him an eminent prophet, submitted to his baptism, and, for a time, appeared extremely fond of his instructions, till he offended you by his sharp reproofs and his attestations of my Messiahship. I mention his testimony, not as if it could establish my divine or mediatorial character, but only that I may reason with you upon your own principles, and omit nothing which may tend to your conviction and salvation.—For the miraculous and gracious works which I have performed, or will perform by my own power, are so great and good, as plainly to manifest me the Son of God and the promised Messiah. And the Father himself, in a manner which none of your nation ever before heard or saw, has, by a voice from heaven, attested me as his 'beloved Son, in whom he is well pleased. But it is evident, by your continued rejection of me, that neither his immediate declaration, nor the words of his prophets, make any lasting impression on you.—As ye profess to read and study the books of the Old Testament, as containing the true doctrine of eternal life, and as a mean of securing your eternal happiness, I charge you still more earnestly and impartially to search them, and observe what they teach: for they, in their types, promises, and prophecies, and the Holy Ghost by them, concur to represent me as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world. 40-47. But notwithstanding all this evidence, such is your pride, prejudice, carnality, and wilful obstinacy, that you will not apply to nor trust in me for pardon, peace, life, and salvation, in whom alone they are to be found. I neither need, have, nor seek human applause or external pomp and grandeur, but only aim at advancing the glory of God in the salvation of men. But I know that, notwithstanding all your high professions, ye are quite destitute of the love of God, and have the love of the world reigning in your heart. Hence, when I am come, authorized by JEHOVAH, and sufficiently attested to glorify him, to effect a spiritual salvation from sin and wrath, ye reject me, because I oppose your darling vices, and give you no ground to expect worldly riches, honour, power, or pleasures. But if any mere impostors should flatter you in your sins, and promise you temporal deliverances, wealth, and grandeur, ye will readily entertain and follow them, to your own destruction.—And, indeed, while your hearts are so full of carnal ambition of worldly honours and applause, and so regardless of the spiritual, substantial, and eternal honours which God alone bestows on his people, it is impossible that ye can believe on me, whose appearances are so mean and doctrines so self-denying. But though I charge home your faults upon you for your conviction, I came not to spy out, aggravate, or accuse you of your crimes to God, but to be a merciful Saviour and Advocate. Nor need I turn your accuser, when Moses, by whose law ye expect to be saved, by his writings sufficiently indicts and condemns you for your unbelief and other wickedness: and had ye believed his declarations, ye could not but have believed me, as all the types in his law, and the prophecies recorded by him, evidently point to and are fulfilled in me. But if ye will not be convinced by what he, for whom you profess so high a regard, hath said, it cannot be expected that ye will believe me, whom ye treat with contempt, and run down as an impostor.

Ver. 4. An angel. Some imagine 'a messenger from the Sanhedrim;' and many ascribe the sanative power of the water to

VIEW OF JERUSALEM FROM BETHESDA. [JOHN, v:2.]—"Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep market a pool which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches." Jerusalem is interesting from all points of view, but somehow the view of the Holy City takes on additional interest when we are looking at it from some point connected with our Savior. Perhaps the most suggestive view of Jerusalem is from the Mount of Olives, because looked over from this sacred height by our Lord so often. Bethesda is a very interesting place from which to contemplate the city of David, because here Christ healed an impotent man of an infirmity that had afflicted him for thirty-eight years. It was this miracle of Christ that provoked the wrath of his countrymen, because it was wrought on the Sabbath water stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity ^{thirty and eight years.}

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and ^{knew that} he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, ^{Wilt thou be made whole?}

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, ^{I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.}

8 Jesus saith unto him, ^{Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.}

9 And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 ¶ The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day: ^{it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.}

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed ^{wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, a multitude being^s in that place.}

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in ^{the temple}, and said unto him, ^{Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.}

15 The man departed, and ^{told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.}

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day.

17 ¶ But Jesus answered them, ^{My Father worketh hitherto,^s and I work.}

18 Therefore the Jews ^{sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making^s himself equal with God.}

19 ¶ Then answered Jesus and said unto them, ^{Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.}

20 For^s the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will show him greater works^s than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For as the Father ^{raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them;} even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For the Father judgeth no man, ^{but hath} committed all judgment unto the Son;

23 That^s all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily,^s verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^{The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live.}

26 For^s as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;

natural mineral qualities. But a messenger from the Sanhedrim could have performed no miracle, and as the first stepping in after the troubling of the water was the person healed, the whole matter was a standing, but occasional, miracle, which God, for wise purposes, had been pleased to continue as a witness to an unworthy generation. C.

Ver. 14. Sin no more. Our Lord seems, in this admonition, to refer to some youthful sins of this old man, by which his disease had been induced; and as the man was evidently friendless, ver. 7, and most probably a stranger—so that our Lord could know nothing of his history—in this reference he gives him an evidence of supernatural knowledge as well as power.—Note. As 'the wages of sin is death,' so are diseases the earnest of the payment. That sometimes they are punishments is obvious to the senses, as in the case of intemperance; at other times they are admonitions to watch, pray, and be ready; at other times they are exercises of faith, producing more fruitfulness in the sufferers; and other times they are examples of patience, whereby God is glorified, his children and saints strengthened, and sinners induced to pray that they might 'daint the death of the righteous.' C.

Ver. 18. Because he said that God was his Father, ^{variety} ^{idea}, his own (personal) Father. The whole Jewish nation considered God their Father. They must, therefore, have understood our Lord in a very different and infinitely higher sense. C.

Ver. 19. The Son doeth nothing of himself. No person in the Godhead acts independently of the other. 'These things doeth the Son,' not such things, but 'the same things'—acting in perfect union of nature and consent of will with the Father. C.

Ver. 23. This perfect equality, nay identity, of 'honour' between the Father and the Son not only proves the Godhead of 41 ¶ I^a receive not honour from men.

42 But I^a know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

43 I^a am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

44 How^a can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and seek not the honour that cometh from God only?

45 ¶ Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust.

46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me.

47 But, if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?¹

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ feedeth five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes. 15 Thereupon the people would have made him king. 16 But withdrawing himself, he walked on the sea to his disciples: 26 reprovoth the people flocking after him, and all the fleshly hearers of his word: 32 declareth himself to be the bread of life to believers. 66 Many disciples depart from him. 68 Peter confesseth him. 70 Judas is a devil.

AFTER these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.¹

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.

¶ Job. 2. Ps. 90. 10;
93.4.29.5.

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth² of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks,³ he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.⁴

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.

15 ¶ When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

16 And when even⁵ was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea,

17 And entered into a ship, and went over the sea toward Capernaum. And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.⁶

18 And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs,¹ they see Jesus walk-the Son, but, from the strong declaration of our Lord, both positively and negatively expressed, may be gathered the heinousness of the infidelity that denies his Godhead, involving practical atheism, inasmuch as it makes the Father a liar in the testimony he has so abundantly and frequently given to his Son, 1 Jn. 5. 10. C.

Ver. 25. It is evident, since 'the hour now is,' that 'the dead' to whom our Lord here refers are 'the dead in trespasses and sins,' Ep. 2. 1, whom he 'quickens' into the life of faith by his Word and Spirit. C.

Ver. 26. Given. The Godhead of the Word, of the Son of God, is eternal, and therefore undivided: but everything possessed by Jesus, as the Christ, is 'given' from the Father, whose 'Servant' he became by the incarnation, Phil. 2. 6-7; Heb. 10. 7-10; Ga. 4. 4. C.

Ver. 27. Ye have neither heard his voice, &c. That the whole people of the Jews heard the 'voice' of God at Sinai—that they saw his 'shape,' rather the visible representation of his presence, in the Shekinah, is recorded by Moses—and also that many of them heard the voice of God at our Lord's baptism, is declared by Matthew.—May not the apparent contradiction, however, be fully removed by taking the word 'heard,' as it often is, to mean hearing, 'in attending, believing, and obeying.' See Ex. 6. 12. De. 30. 17. Is. 30. 9; 55. 3; Je. 17. 10; Ez. 3. 27; 33. 31. Mat. 10. 14; 18. 17; Jn. 9. 27; Lu. 18. 21; 1 Co. 14. 21; Ga. 4. 21; Re. 1. 3. The word 'seen' being likewise taken to signify, as it often does, to 'discern, discover, and acknowledge'—is a literal statement of fact:—for when the Jews 'saw' Jesus, they neither discerned, discovered, nor acknowledged any 'form, or comeliness, or beauty,' that they should desire him, Is. 44. 9; 53. 2; Je. 5. 21; Mat. 13. 13; Jn. 3. 3; 12. 40; Ro. 7. 23; 11. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great mercy that our world is not altogether filled with persons diseased, since sin hath introduced such a variety of evils. Marvellous, as well as numerous, were the types by which God prefigured his Messiah. And who, sensible of spiritual distempers, would not gladly wait at the pool of ordinances for relief! Jesus graciously prevents the most needy and miserable with his mercy: and his word powerfully convicts and enables to obedience. And yet much weakness and ignorance sometimes remain for a while. It is wonderful that his kindness should have occasioned to him such malicious hatred and envy. And marvellous is his wisdom, that this abuse of him should be the mean of a more clear manifestation of himself, as the Son of God and promised Messiah. How sufficient is he to save sinners who is both God and man; one with, and equal to, God; knowing, willing, and performing the same things as JEHOVAH his Father! Even in his mediatorial character he is the absolute Lord of life and death, who manages all providences, quickens the dead, examines all causes, and distributes eternal happiness according to men's deeds. Faithfully he executes his office, to the glory of God and the salvation of men. And worthy is he to be honoured and worshipped equally with the Father, that God may be glorified and worshipped in him. What ground is there for the most undoubting confidence in him who hath such attestation from prophets, from miracles, from God himself!—And it becomes us seriously to search the Scriptures, where every saving truth concerning him is to be found.—But, alas! fearful are the effects of ignorance, pride, and carnal ambition. No clear and earnest ministrations of truth can affect such as are under the power of these things.—Owning the authority of the Scriptures, they neither understand, believe, nor practise them. Pretending regard to Jesus, they will never receive him for salvation, and yet are ready to run after the vilest impostors.—It is the highest folly to lean to the broken law for happiness when it so charges us with our sins; and greatly absurd to prefer men to Christ, and yet disregard even these our human favourites when they instruct us concerning Christ.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 27-29. Beware of laying out your principal care and labour about temporal provision or other perishing enjoyments; but chiefly inquire after, and labour to possess, those spiritual and eternal blessings which I, as anointed and miraculously attested by my Father, freely give to every one that believes in me. Your great and important work, which God commands and seeks as a source of obedience and means of acceptance, is cordially to believe on and receive me, as the SENT of God, and his unspeakable gift offered in the gospel. 30, 31. What token can you produce of your Messiahship, and superiority to Moses, who not merely multiplied provision, but for forty years miraculously nourished our fathers in the wilderness with manna from heaven? 32-59. Christ calls himself bread in allusion to the manna, and because he, in his person, offices, work, and fulness, is the mean of all our spiritual and eternal life, happiness, and comfort. He is the true bread, of which the manna and all the bread used in the ancient oblations were but a typical shadow, and which is infinitely excellent, important, and permanent in its virtue. He is living bread, having all life in himself as Son of God, and as Mediator, and as being the Author of all spiritual life to sinful

TIBERIAS, ON THE SEA OF GALILEE. [John, vi:23.]—"Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after the Lord had given thanks." Before us is a picture of this same Tiberias as it appears to-day. We see the little boats out on the sea, doubtless like those used in the time of our Lord. We see the fishermen's nets drying. We see the cactus and the palm trees, and the scattering fig and olive trees. We have in this picture all the things well nigh representative of Tiberias as it is to-day—sea, boats, nets, ruins, palm tree, fig tree, olive tree and one new building. Once the magnificent expression of Roman power and Roman taste in architecture, Tiberias is now the broken and desolate home of about four thousand Jews, who themselves seem also to be desolate and without heart.

ing on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and^a they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then ^athey willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was of the land whither they went.

22 ¶ The day following, when the people which stood² on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there, save that one whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats³ from Tiberias,⁴ nigh unto the place ^awhere they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not ^athere, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum,⁵ seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^aYe seek me, not because ye saw the miracles,⁶ but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 Labour not⁷ for ^athe meat which perisheth, but for ^athat meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which ^athe Son of man shall give unto you: ^afor him hath God the Father sealed.⁸

28 Then said they unto him, ^aWhat shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, ^aThis is the work of God, that ye believe⁹ on him whom he hath sent.

30 ¶ They said therefore unto him, ^aWhat sign¹ shonest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 Our⁴ fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily,

I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven;² but my Father giveth you ^athe true bread from heaven.

33 For³ the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, ^aevermore give us this bread.³

35 And Jesus said unto them, ^aI am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 But I said unto you,⁴ That ^aye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 All⁵ that the Father giveth me⁶ shall come to me; ^aand him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.

38 For ^aI came down from heaven, ^anot to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And⁷ this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, ^athat every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then ^amurmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, ^aIs not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 No⁸ man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw⁹ him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 It¹ is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. ^aEvery man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

men. He is bread of life, which gives spiritual life to dead souls, and nourishes them up in knowledge and grace, comfort and holiness, to eternal life; and none that receive him by faith shall ever perish with hunger, or thirst for any necessary blessings. His flesh is meat indeed, and his blood drink indeed. His person God-man Mediator, and his righteousness, with the blessings secured by it, are eminent and gracious means of our spiritual and eternal life. To eat his flesh and drink his blood, is by faith to receive and rest on him for salvation, as God in our nature, who has fulfilled the law, and secured, and bestows all heavenly blessings upon us;—and by means hereof Christ dwells in us and we in him. There is the closest union and communion between him and us;—he dwelling in us by his Spirit, and we dwelling in him by the permanent habit of faith, and holding fellowship with him by repeated acts of it. 63, 64. Why do ye conceive prejudice against my saying that I came down from heaven, when in a short time some present shall see me ascend back to it? And the eating of my flesh and drinking of my blood must be understood in a spiritual, not in a carnal sense. It is only the operation of the Spirit of God that quickens souls to a spiritual and eternal life. The carnal eating of my flesh could profit no one. My words, which I have spoken unto you, relate to spiritual things: and are the means of conveying the Holy Ghost, and his enlivening influences, into men's hearts. But some of you, who profess to be my disciples, do not heartily believe in me; and are therefore ready to cavil at my doctrine, and put the most absurd construction on my words.

REFLECTIONS.—Worthy of repeated remembrance are the great works of our Redeemer. He often graciously perplexes his people, that he may have the honour of kindly answering their doubts. And if we have him with us, we can never want any good thing. The more liberal we are to others, from a principle of faith and love, the more liberal God will be to us. But we must never waste anything in hopes of his miraculous supply. Carnal minds greatly mistake the nature of Christ's kingdom. And his ministers ought earnestly to avoid every political office and work. Dark nights of desertion, temptation, and distress often quickly succeed the most delightful seasons of fellowship with Christ, and even himself is suspected for Satan. But under all our distresses his word alone can relieve and comfort. And his presence is doubly precious after fearful storms of darkness and grief. Powerfully do his visits hasten forward his people to the haven of glory. They therefore who truly love him, will grudge no pains to find him: and often they meet with him sooner, and more easily, than they expected. But, alas, that ever he should be sought, not from love, but for some carnal advantages!—What a wonderful, well furnished, and divinely authorized Saviour is Jesus Christ! Heavenly and divine is his original;—deep was his debasement, even unto death;—and high his exaltation to his Father's throne. He hath in himself, and gives to our souls, the living, life-giving, substantial, and abundant provisions of his grace.—And freely granted by himself and his Father to sinful men are all the blessings of his love. Yea, even the weakest act of faith on him secures permanent grace, a glorious resurrection, and eternal life! Every poor sinner is invited to him; and no one who comes, however weak or wicked, shall be neglected or turned away. But none either will or can come till they hear the gospel of Christ, and are 46 Not that any man hath seen the Father,⁷ save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily,⁸ verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 I am that bread of life.

49 Your^a fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 This^a is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I am the living bread⁸ which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood,⁹ ye have no life in you.

54 Whoso^a eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life;¹ and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He^a that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As^a the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

58 This^a is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

60 ¶ Many^a therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying; who can hear it?

61 When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

62 What^a and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

63 It^a is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.²

64 But^a there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 ¶ From^a that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

67 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

68 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life.

69 And^a we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

70 Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?³

71 He spake of Judas Iscariot the son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Jesus reproveth the ambition and boldness of his kinsmen: 10 goeth up from Galilee to the feast of tabernacles: 14 teacheth in the temple. 40 Divers opinions of him among the people. 45 The Pharisees are angry that their officers took him not, and chide with Nicodemus for taking his part.

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.¹

3 His brethren² therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples³ also may see the works that thou doest.

quickenod and convicted by the Holy Spirit.—Awful is the thought that many should prefer earthly enjoyments to him and his everlasting salvation;—should ignorantly or maliciously cavil at the declarations of his grace; should apostatize from him, offended with his spiritual doctrines or necessary reproofs; or should adhere to him in profession while carnal lusts are indulged in their heart. Never, O my soul, cavil at his words who is the wisdom of God! Never attempt to deceive him who searches the heart. Never neglect him who is thy food and thy life, and the length of thy days. Never refuse him who is the free, the unspeakable gift of God. Never doubt of that salvation which is intrusted to his care, who shuts out none, and turns away none who accept him as Savior. And never desert him who is Christ the quickening Son of the living God, full of grace and truth.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 3, 4. Stay no longer in this poor obscure country, but go preach and work miracles at Jerusalem, that you may make the great and learned men your disciples; and that, their number being increased, they may, on such a public occasion, favour your designs to set up your kingdom; for if you can do any wonderful works, it is proper you should establish and spread your fame by doing them in the most public manner, and in the most famous places, and on the most public occasions, that men of learning and authority may see and be convinced by them. 6, 7. However safely ye who have the favour of worldly men, being like them in your principles, tempers, and designs, may go up at the very beginning of the feast, it is not proper that I, whom they seek to kill, should go up so early, and give them an opportunity to concert measures against me. 16–18. I did not learn my doctrine which I preach by any human assistance; nor is it an invention of my own. But God hath sent me as Mediator, and qualified me to publish it to the world, not to gain applause to myself, but for the advancement of his honour and glory. And whosoever will, by humble, serious, and impartial reading, hearing, meditation, and prayer, labour to understand the will of God, in order to practise it, he shall experience such delight and power in my doctrine as shall prove it really divine. He will perceive that impostors suit their doctrines to the carnal inclinations of men in order to establish their own reputation and carnal interests; and that, as an evidence of my sincerity, and of the truth of my doctrine, I am wholly intent upon promoting the glory of God, who authorized me, and publish only what tends to humble mankind, and reform them from their errors and corruptions. 19–24.

When ye profess such zeal for the laws of Moses, why do ye so universally break them? Why, in direct contradiction to an unalterable precept, do ye seek to murder me? When on the Sabbath-day ye circumcise children, and apply cures to the wounded, how absurd is it to seek to murder me, because on the Sabbath I perfectly cured the man who had long been infirm at the pool of Bethesda? Beware therefore of partially indulging prejudices against me on account of my mean appearances, or in favour of your chief priests and rulers, on account of their specious pretences and authority over you; but carefully examine things, and judge according to truth and equity. 28, 29. Ye indeed know my earthly parentage, but my office and original are much higher than ye apprehend. My Father, of whom ye are grossly ignorant, hath, in the faithful fulfilment of his love and promises, sent me into the world.—I have a perfect knowledge of his mind and will, for I am from him, by a peculiar and eternal generation; and as the anointed Mediator, I am authorized by him to reveal the way of salvation to men. 33, 34. It is but a short time that I shall continue preaching and working miracles among you; and then I shall, in my ascension, return to my Father. Then, in your miserable extremities, ye shall earnestly, but in vain, wish for my presence and favour; but ye shall 4 For^a there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, show thyself to the world.

5 For^a neither did his brethren believe^a in him.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, 'My time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.

7 The^b world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: 'I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 But when his brethren were gone up, then^c went he also up unto the feast, ^anot openly, but as it were in secret.⁵

11 ¶ Then^d the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And^e there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He is a good man: others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit,^f no man spake openly of him, for fear^g of the Jews.

14 ¶ Now about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up ^hinto the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, 'How knoweth this man letters,ⁱ having never learned?⁸

16 Jesus answered them, and said, 'My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 If^j any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He^k that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: ^lbut he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 Did^m not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? ⁿ'Why go ye about to kill me?⁹

20 The people answered and said, 'Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 Moses^o therefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath-day circumsise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath-day receive cir-

The difficulty will disappear when it is considered that their unbelief respected neither his holiness nor miracles, but his Messiahship; and as they found him declining to be made a king one of Messiah's special offices, they could not believe him entitled to that character, whose office and duties they saw him refuse either to accept or discharge.—C.

t How they concluded that our Lord had never learned, that is, had never studied in the schools of Jerusalem, is not stated. But the total absence of all reference to the traditions of the elders, as any authority for his doctrine, the unaffected simplicity of his style and manner of speech, and the want of any rabbinical dress, are quite sufficient to account for the discovery.—C.

v For fear of offending either his friends or his enemies. A state of society frequently occurring, both in regard to opinions and persons, and which requires great care and charity in judging—great caution to avoid giving unnecessary pain or offence—and great honesty of purpose when an opinion must be given, a truth asserted, a character defended, an error refuted, or a sin reproved.—C.

cumcision, that the law of Moses should not be broken;¹ are ye angry at me, because I have made a man every whit² whole on the sabbath-day?

24 Judge^a not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But, ^blo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. 'Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit ^cwe know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, no^s man knoweth whence^d he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, 'Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: ^eand I am not come of myself, but he that sent me is true, whom ye know not.

29 But I know him: for I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 Then^h they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him, ⁱbecause his hour was not yet come.

31 And^j many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 ¶ The Pharisees heard ^kthat the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, 'Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

34 Ye^l shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, ^mthither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the ⁿ'dispersed among the Gentiles,⁵ and teach the Gentiles?

36 What^o manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, ^pthither ye cannot come?

37 In^q the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, 'If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink.⁶

38 He^r that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 (But^s this spake he of the Spirit, which neither find me to your comfort, nor ever follow me to heaven, where even now I am in my divine nature, either to enjoy or persecute me. 37-39. Let every destitute sinner among you who wishes after happiness believe on me, as the only Saviour, that he may be refreshed and satisfied with an abundant, increasing, and continued supply of blessing, which may flow out from his heart, in plentiful streams of good works, for his own and others' edification and comfort.—This signified that all who cordially believed in and received and rested on him for salvation, should, after his ascension to glory, receive an abundant communication of the gifts, graces, and comforts of the Holy Ghost, to refresh and cleanse their souls, and render them fruitful in good works and useful to others; which communication was not to be granted till Christ should have the honour of sending the Spirit to attest his exaltation and influence in heaven, and the Spirit could glorify Christ in the numerous conversions and remarkable holiness and comfort of both Jews and Gentiles.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a mournful case when the Saviour is banished. And base when men, even in religious duties, chiefly aim at their own carnal advantages. It wears but a very suspicious appearance when professors of religion are the darlings of wicked men. And it is highly shameful when the near relations of instruction, are the most careless or carnal. Faithful ministers must expect to go through various scenes of good and bad treatment, and the more faithful they are the more of the world's hatred will they experience. Men who hate the truth will always find something to quarrel with. But no malice can destroy them till their life be ended. They may therefore proceed boldly but cautiously in it.—Ignorance of Christ and his doctrines will make men doubt their divinity, or they that believe on him should receive: *for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 ¶ Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, *Of a truth this is the prophet.

41 Others said, *This is the Christ. But some said, *Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, *where David was?

43 So^b there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

45 ¶ Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, *Never man spake like this man.⁸

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

48 Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?

49 But this people, who knoweth not the law, are cursed.

50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (he that came to Jesus^a by night, being one of them.)

51 Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth?

52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

53 And every man went unto his own house.

7 By comparing this verse with ch. 16. 7, it will appear that "sent," rather than "given," should be the word supplied. And that he could not be sent until Christ had first been glorified, will further appear from ver. 14, which declares one part of his office to be to "take the things of Christ and show them" to his believers. But "the things of Christ" are, mainly, his incarnation, death, sacrifice, and resurrection — with none of which could he fully be sent until Christ had died, and risen, and ascended to glory.—C.

4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 Now^a Moses in the law commanded us that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, *tempting² him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, ^bHe that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone³ at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.⁴

10 When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn⁵ thee: go, ^cand sin no more.

12 ¶ Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, *Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true: *for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.⁶

raise cavils against them. Prejudice against him will render them blind to the clearest means of conviction, make them reckon appearances realities, and pretend great zeal for God's law while they indulge themselves in the grossest violation of it, and condemn in others what they approve in themselves. But delightfully Jesus vindicates his character, doctrine, and work, to his own and his Father's honour, and to the confusion of his enemies. And serious attention will either convince or confound his opposers. Astonishing are the riches of his grace in offering a full and free salvation to his contemners and murderers. And abundant are the communications that flow from an exalted Redeemer. And it is most dreadful to seek occasions and raise cavils against his kindness. It is dangerous to enjoy ordinances without his presence. And his despisers shall be awfully deprived of him, and all the means of his grace, in a little time. But it is a great mercy that the poor embrace and enjoy him when most men of rank and learning condemn both him and them. Wicked men readily curse whom the Lord hath blessed. But Christ can easily overawe, if not convert, the most stubborn, and render them witnesses for his honour. Easily he can embolden the most cowardly in a time of need, and disappoint and dispirit the crafty. And nothing more plainly manifests a bad cause than that its friends have recourse to persecution rather than to arguments.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 3-6. If he had encouraged them to stone her they might have reproached him with cruelty, in partially ordering a severe punishment against one no worse than the publicans and sinners with whom he conversed, or they might have accused him to the Roman governor as an usurper of judicial authority and an abettor of tumults. If he had declared against stoning her, or bade them refer the matter to the Roman governor, they hoped to incense the people against him as an enemy to the law of Moses and their liberty. 12. Having in myself all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, I am come into the world to direct both Jews and Gentiles into the way of life and salvation by my Word and Spirit. And whosoever believeth on me, and follows my direction and pattern, shall not go on in ignorance, error, sin, or misery, but have the saving light and comfort of a spiritual life here and eternal life hereafter. 13-19. Though in ordinary cases a man's testimony concerning himself avails nothing, yet it is otherwise in the case of one who is light and truth itself, and whose original and commission are from God, and whose return is to him; of all which things ye are wilfully ignorant. Ye judge and condemn me only from carnal considerations and appearances; but I interfere with no civil judgment, and at present condemn or punish no man, but call sinners to repentance and salvation; and yet, though I were to pass or execute judgment, my sentence would be just and valid, on account of my oneness with, and commission from, my Father. Nor is my Messiahship destitute of sufficient attestation, since I myself, as a divine person, assert it; and my Father, by his prophets, and by his immediate declarations from heaven, as well as by many other signs, hath attested it. Notwithstanding repeated instructions, ye continue wilfully ignorant of my person and office, and of my heavenly Father, from whom I come to you. If ye had considered me as one in nature, counsel, and operation with him, ye would have seen his perfections shining forth in me, and discerned the relation in which he stands to me, as his Son and mediatorial Servant. 21-26. Knowing how eagerly they desired that he might be murdered before the time appointed by his

16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

17 It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

18 I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me.⁸

19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, "Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 These words spake Jesus in the treasury, as he taught in the temple: and no man laid hands on him; for his hour was not yet come.

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, "I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins: whither I go, ye cannot come.

22 Then said the Jews, "Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, "Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, "Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I have many things to say and to judge of you: but he that sent me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 They understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, "When ye have lifted up the Son of man,⁹ then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

29 And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, many believed on him.

31 ¶ Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed;

32 And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

33 ¶ They answered him, "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?"

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: but the Son abideth ever.

36 If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed: but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.

38 I speak that which I have seen with my Father: and ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, "Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, "If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham."

41 Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, "If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word."

44 Ye are of your father the devil, and the Father, Jesus said to them, I will soon ascend back to my Father, and ye shall earnestly wish to have me among you to deliver you from your miseries, but shall die under the power and guilt of your sin, especially your rejection of me, and be rendered inexpressibly wretched, both in time and through eternity. Nor shall it be in your power to follow me into the heavenly state, either to bring me back, or to partake of my glory.—Being not only of an earthly origin, but of unregenerate hearts and carnal tempers, ye cannot have fellowship with me, who am divine, and whose affections are perfectly set on heavenly things; but on account of your obstinate refusal to embrace and acknowledge me as the promised Messiah and only Saviour, and other sins attending it, your city and nation shall be fearfully destroyed in this world, and yourselves for evermore terribly lost in hell. I still insist on it that I am the Son of God and promised Messiah. I could easily charge you with a multitude of crimes, and condemn you for them; but as that is not my present work, I only tell you that my Father infallibly performs all his promises concerning me and to me, and them that believe in me, and all his threatenings against those that reject me; and whatever I say to men is exactly according to the commission which I have received from his uncontrollable and awful authority. 28, 29. But however ignorant ye now are of me, when once ye have crucified me, and occasioned my exaltation to glory, either the happy influences of my Spirit, or the miseries on yourselves and nation, shall convince you that I act by my Father's authority, and have faithfully declared his doctrines, promises, and threatenings.—And meanwhile my Father, who is one with me in essence, continues with me the unmeasurable unction of his Spirit, and the tokens of his favour to me, as one who always acts agreeably to his will and for his honour. 31, 32. Jesus said to these weak or pretended believers, If ye really embrace and adhere to my holy doctrine, and subject your whole souls to it, ye shall be proved and owned to be my disciples in truth as well as in name; and ye shall be still further enlightened and confirmed in the certainty, excellency, and importance of my gospel; and by means of it be honourably delivered from everything intrinsically mean, or miserable. 34-36. Notwithstanding your haughty, and even notoriously false boasts of civil and religious freedom, I assure you that, be whose descendants you will, if ye indulge yourselves in the practice of wickedness, ye are slaves under the power of your lusts and the guilt of your sins; and as such all unbelieving Jews, though the natural seed of Abraham, shall be quickly excluded from God's church and favour; while I, the Son of God and eminent seed of Abraham, shall continue as Head of the church, and all true believers abide therein as members. If therefore I, who am the Son of God and Lord of my church, grant you my spiritual freedom, ye shall be really and eminently free from the guilt and dominion of sin, and from the law, as a covenant, and from burdensome ceremonies; and, in fine, free from all evil, and fully possessed of everything glorious and comfortable. 37-41. I know that ye are the natural descendants of Abraham; but ye are so far from being like him in his faith or obedience, that ye seek to murder me, merely because your own proud and carnal hearts cannot relish nor receive the holy, spiritual, and self-humbling doctrine which I preach unto you. I speak and act as one intimately acquainted with, and obedient to, God my Father; and ye act as under the influence of, and in communion and concert with, the devil as your true Father—a very sure evidence that ye are not the genuine and believing children of Abraham. 45-47. Not only do ye discredit the proofs of my Sonship and Messiahship, and the doctrines which I preach, but because I tell you truths which are spiritual and holy, disagreeable to your corrupt inclinations and interests, ye reject both me and them; and so perverse are you, that though lusts of your father ye will do. 'He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And 'because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 Which^t of you convinceth me of sin?⁷ And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?

47 He^a that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 ¶ Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art 'a Samaritan,⁸ and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered, 'I have not a devil; but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 And I seek not mine own glory: 'there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, 'If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a 'devil. 'Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The man that was born blind restored to sight. 8 He is brought to the Pharisees. 13 They are offended at it, and excommunicate him: 35 but he is received of Jesus, and confesseth him. 39 Who they are whom Christ enlighteneth.

AND, as Jesus passed by,¹ he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Mas-ye cannot point out the smallest fault in my behaviour or doctrine, ye obstinately persist in your unbelief. From this it is evident that ye are not lovers of God, who are all of them desirous to know, and ready to receive and observe, whatever he speaks. 49-51. My continual and earnest study to advance the glory of my Father in the salvation of the people, fully manifests that in my work I am no way influenced or directed by the devil; nor am I solicitous about either your reproaches or your applause, as I know that my Father will secure me the regard of all faithful people, and will effectually vindicate my character, and punish all the indignities offered to it. And I solemnly assure you that whosoever heartily embraces and holds fast my spiritual and holy doctrine, in faith and obedience, shall be delivered from every real misery, and enjoy everlasting happiness. 56-58. So highly did your father Abraham esteem me, that he earnestly desired to see my appearance in the flesh, and exceedingly rejoiced in the foresight of it. How young soever I be with respect to my human birth, yet I existed from eternity as the unchangeable I AM.

Ver. 25. From the beginning. The original presents a greater difficulty than appears in the translation, John's customary phrase for 'from or at the beginning' being of very different construction. See ch. 6. 64; 8. 44; 15. 27; 16. 4; 1 Jn. 1. 1; 2. 7, &c. Paul, no doubt, uses a phrase for 'at the beginning' similar to that in the text; but the phraseology of John should rather be interpreted by his own writings. If so, the view of Augustine seems preferable: 'Believe me (ver. 24) to be the beginning, head, or chief of all principality and power (see Col. 1. 18; Re. 1. 8; 21. 6) —that which now I declare myself to you.' C.

Ver. 33. We . . . were never in bondage. Some consider this statement a gross historical falsehood, as the Jews had been in bondage to the Egyptians, Philistines, Moabites, Babylonians, and now were subject to the Romans. But such glaring historical facts even Pharisees could not have ventured publicly to deny. The meaning is therefore to be sought in giving a distinctive emphasis to we; and, in point of fact, up till this period the Romans were rather arbiters and protectors than masters. The Roman bondage did not properly commence till several years after our Lord's resurrection. C.

Ver. 51. These words of our Lord are as literally true of the first as of the second death. That the believer never sees the second death, is unquestioned; but neither does he see the first. Death is literally not death to him. It is a serpent unstung, an enemy conquered, a power destroyed. He thinks not of the world he is to leave behind, but the heaven to which he is removing, and the crown of righteousness and glory. He does not die, he but departs; he falls asleep in Jesus, and awakes in the morning of the resurrection, when death is swallowed up in victory, Ac. 7. 60; 1 Co. 15. 51-57; 2 Ti. 4. 6-8; He. 2. 14. 15. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need of caution in dealing with malicious hypocrites. Very abominable is adultery, and richly deserving of capital punishment. But those who indulge themselves in it, or any like wickedness, are very unfit to be zealous prosecutors of the guilty. Many fear shame on account of sin more than damnation; and by fleeing from Christ, the merciful Saviour, wilfully destroy themselves. Now he is ready to pardon the greatest transgressions; but he will quickly be an inexorable judge. He is come into our dark world to reveal the method of salvation by the gospel, and to illuminate our hearts by his Spirit. Ignorant of and far from him, we shall certainly wander into everlasting perdition. But under his enlightening influence we shall avoid dangerous errors, be freed from spiritual slavery, and safely arrive at eternal life. Being a divine person, one with and sent by the Father, we may safely rest in and abide by his testimony. But no external evidence is sufficient to persuade a carnal heart. Many were the blasphemous contradictions which he endured in the cause of mercy and truth. While he was horribly insulted by the wicked, the hypocritical, the proud, and malicious children of Satan, as if he had been diabolical and mad. And great was the forbearance and meekness which he manifested in his own vindication. It looks ill when men are enraged by reproach. Unprofitable is descent from the most godly parents if we continue strangers to their faith and holiness. And it is base to boast of such while we obstinately persevere in our sins. It is impossible either to know or believe Christ's words while we remain hardened in carnal lusts and under the power of the devil. Yea, an empty profession of the true religion but tends to make our case still the more miserable. And if we drive Jesus the Saviour from us now, he will at last leave us in our sinfulness and ruin. But happy they who know his truth and have it abiding in their heart, who are conformed to his image, and desire after and delight in him! Thrice glorious their gospel-liberties, and unspeakable their eternal felicities.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 3, 4. It was not on account of any particular crime, either of his own or his parents, more than others, that this man was born blind; but that, by opening his eyes, I might manifest my Father's love, and prove myself to be the Messiah, in miraculously curing him. I must therefore improve the present opportunity of giving him his sight as an emblem of my enlightening blind souls. And since the day of my mortal life hastens to a period, as long as I am in the world I must cure not only corporal blindness, but instruct, enlighten, and comfort them that are spiritually blind. 39-41. I am come to establish a rule of judgment; to alter the present state of the church; to try men's spirits; and, by distinguishing grace, to separate the precious from the vile; to open blind eyes, and teach ignorant souls; and to manifest and occasion the increase of their stupidity and perverseness who, through self-conceit, shut their eyes against the light of my word. If you Pharisees, who pretend to so much knowledge and ability to instruct others, were either grossly ignorant or as sensible of your ignorance as many of the common people, your sin in rejecting me would be far less heinous, and there would be hopes of your deliverance from it; but while you are so self-conceited your sin is highly aggravated, and it is most probable that you will remain under its guilt and power for ever.

REFLECTIONS.—We ought to be extremely cautious in our interpretations of providences. Men's sins are not to be judged of from their sufferings. It is enough that God is righteous, and will make all things turn out to his own glory. We have great need to be diligent in working out our salvation while we have life and opportunity to walk in Christ's light. Marvellous is his power and ready his grace towards the unworthy and distressed. He works the most gracious salvation by means the most unlikely. It is his appointment, not any natural virtue, that renders them powerful. And only in obedience to his authority can we justly expect benefit by them.—What blessed experience of his mercy he gives to the obedient! and with cheerful thankfulness it should be acknowledged to his love. He can easily make the weakest of his followers wiser than their teachers—bold confessors of his name, and humble adorers of his majesty. And if men reject and abuse them for his sake, he will reward them with repeated manifestations of his glory. But, alas! how desirous are some to avoid owning him, even after he hath bestowed singular favours upon them. The fear of men causeth a snare. The censures of the church are often turned against her best friends. But inexcusable are they who, through self-conceit, condemn all means of conviction, and upbraid Jesus and his followers. Rage against reproach most plainly discovers real ignorance. But hopeful is the case of such as perceive their own weakness and sinfulness, and dan-

PPOOL OF SILOAM. [JOHN, ix:7.]—Siloam is mentioned but three times in the Scriptures. Isaiah, viii:6, 7, refers to the waters of Siloam, which "go softly," in contrast with the sweeping current of the Euphrates. In Nehemiah, third chapter and fifteenth verse, allusion is made to Siloam, where it speaks of the rebuilding of the gate of the fountains by the hands of Shallum. And in the third place we have the reference to Siloam in John, ix:7, where our Lord tells the man born blind to "go wash in the Pool of Siloam," etc. Luke mentions a tower of Siloam, which by its fall occasioned the death of eighteen men. This tower stood by the Pool of Siloam. Jerome says the Spring of Siloam lies at the base of Mt. Zion. Josephus alludes to Siloam. Its sweet water flows to-day just as in ancient times.

ter, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?²

3 Jesus answered, 'Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents:³ but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,⁴

7 And said unto him, 'Go, wash in the pool of Siloam, (which is, by interpretation, 'Sent.) He went⁵ his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8 ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam,⁶ and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath-day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, 'He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

the truth of the narto the doctrine of

into a living infant—

a doctrine prevalent among the Egyptirather to be—'We

37 And Jesus said unto him, 'Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

39 ¶ And Jesus said, 'For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind.

41 Jesus said unto them, 'If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.'

of salvation and way to eternal life, and the only one by whom ministers can have admission to office in the gospel-church, or people have access to spiritual privileges and saving benefits. All that, before me, pretended to Messiahship, and all that oppose me and teach other methods of salvation, are but mere intruders into their office, who rob my Father and me of our honour and property, and destroy men's souls; but God's people, by the use of their enlightened consciences, shall be able to detect their errors. I therefore insist on it, as a matter of infinite importance, that I am the only true door of the church, and entrance to eternal life. Whosoever therefore enters upon religion by faith in me as the only Saviour, shall certainly be protected from spiritual enemies, delivered from misery of every kind, and obtain eternal blessedness; and shall, under the conduct of my Word and Spirit, find access to, liberty in, and spiritual support, nourishment, and comfort, by my divine ordinances. 10-13. False teachers come only to seduce church-members, murder their souls, or plunder and persecute them; but I am come to manifest the method of obtaining spiritual and eternal life, yea, to secure it for them, and to bestow it upon them, in the most universal, unexpected, eminent, inconceivably large, and everlasting manner. I am the eminently and infinitely good Shepherd of the church foretold by the prophets, and who not only lead, protect, and feed, but give my very life, soul, and self, in the stead of the faithful, to secure their eternal happiness.—But they who from selfish views commence pastors in the church, having no real affectionate concern for their people, are unwilling to hazard their life, reputation, or secular interests in their service; but are always ready to shift for themselves, and leave the people to be seduced or perverted as Satan and his emissaries please. No wonder they are so careless of their hearers' spiritual and eternal advantage when they only entered on their office from a regard to secular advantage. 14-18. And being the infinitely good and the chief Shepherd of the church, I perfectly know, exactly observe, and tenderly care for all faithful people, who are, by my Father's gift, my own sacrifice, and their self-dedication, my peculiar property; and they spiritually know me and my doctrine, and faithfully and affectionately embrace me and hearken to it. And as the Father perfectly knows, loves, approves, and confides in me, I also am perfectly acquainted with him and all his mind, and trust in him, and delight to do his will. Such is my love to him and to all the world that I am willing and ready to lay down my life in its stead, that all may obtain eternal salvation. And besides those Jews which I have called, or will surely call, into my church, I must, in pursuance of my eternal engagements, and in justice to my sacrifice for them, seek to bring in multitudes also of heathen Gentiles, and unite them with those Jews in the gospel-church, new-covenant, or heavenly state, under my tender care, influences, and government.—And not only doth my Father love me as his only begotten Son, but even on account of my zeal for the manifestation of his glory in the salvation of sinful men, in so cheerfully dying for their justification.—No man, by either stratagem or force, can deprive me of my life without my own consent; but, as absolute proprietor thereof, I voluntarily lay it down, and will, by my own power, rise from the dead, after making satisfaction for the sins of the world according to the commandment and love of my Father. 25-30. Not only have I, in the strongest declarations, asserted my Messiahship, though ye perversely refused to believe me, but I have demonstrated it by my divine and miraculous works: yet such is your obstinacy, that no declarations or demonstrations will persuade you; as I know, from your indifference and hardness, that your affections are fixed on the world, and that because of this you do not wish to hear me and obey me.—As I distinctly know, observe, and love all men, I shall seek to lead them to attend to, distinguish, prize, and willingly obey the voice of my Word and Spirit, and readily follow my instructions and example. And I freely give them an irrevocable right to all spiritual and eternal benefits, lead them now into some enjoyment of them, and will strive to put them into the full possession.—Nor shall either their own weakness, unworthiness, or sinfulness, make them fall short of heaven, if they will only by faith hold to my words and by prayer and good works consecrate themselves to God. Nay, my heavenly Father, who loves them, and hath a tender interest in them, and who calleth them to me that I might bring them safely to glory, being infinitely superior to all their enemies in power and wisdom, it is absolutely impossible to defeat his gracious designs towards them, or to entice or force them out of his almighty hands, only by their own unfaithfulness. And my Father and I, being the very same in nature, power, and every other perfection, as well as in will and design, we must be both overcome before the weakest of true believers can be deprived of eternal life. 32. Many great and merciful works I have wrought among you, in confirmation of my character, in feeding multitudes of hungry persons, healing all manner of diseases, raising the dead, and casting out tormenting devils. For which of these do you intend to stone me to death? 34-38. And when the Scripture, which is infallible, and must be accomplished, calls your magistrates GODS, who were but types and shadows of the Messiah, why do you perversely charge me, in whom these types are perfectly fulfilled, and whom the Father hath appointed from eternity, and hath sent into the world to exercise all authority as the true Messiah, with blasphemy, for asserting my oneness in nature and perfections with the Father? If I do not perform works as great and glorious as could be expected from the Father, and which, being superior and contrary to the laws of nature, must be performed by that power which is in the Father himself, I do not claim your belief as the Son of God or promised Messiah. But if I perform works peculiar to God, and in a manner proper to him, then, however ye disregard my person or doctrine in itself, submit to the unexceptionable evidence of my miracles, that ye may be convinced that my Father and I have essential and necessary communion in Godhead.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, 'He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

—Note. When 'the WORD was made flesh' he came into the world 'to do the will of his Father—consequently, as Messiah, did nothing but by the Father's authority or commandment. Oh, that believers would remember this part of the condition of Christ 'in the days of his flesh,' and 'go and do likewise'! C.

Ver. 22. Feast of the dedication. This feast was appointed by Judas Maccabeus to commemorate the purification of the temple after it had been profaned by Antiochus. It began on the 25th of Chisleu (answering to part of our December), and lasted for eight days. C.

Ver. 27. My sheep hear my voice. (1) As a voice of truth. (2) As a voice of love and mercy. (3) As a voice of power.—And I know them. (1) In all their waywardness. (2) In all their weakness. (3) In all their sin. (4) In all their troubles, perplexities, and dangers.—And they follow me. (1) In believing on my name. (2) In denying themselves. (3) In bearing my cross through all danger. (4) In bearing witness for me through all gainsaying. (5) In holiness in all manner of conversation. C.

Ver. 30. I and the (not my) Father are one—one in energy and power; for power is the attribute in question (see ver. 28, 29)—and therefore one in Godhead; which doctrine results from the identity of divine attributes between the Father and the Son. C.

Ver. 36. Sanctified—set apart for himself (Ps. 4. 3) by giving him 'the Spirit without measure,' and dwelling essentially in him, and working the works of Godhead in him and by him, ch. 3. 34; 14. 10; 17. 21. See also ver. 37, 38. C.

Ver. 41. John did no miracle. The performing of miracles is not essential to the proof of a divine commission. All that is absolutely necessary is doctrinal conformity with the Word of God (already established by miracles and prophecy), with holiness of life and singleness of purpose—the visible evidences of the presence, power, and authority of the Spirit of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinitely necessary and useful is Jesus Christ to sinful men, as their shepherd, to seek out, gather, and feed them, as their door and entrance to, and the precious price of, salvation. Indissoluble are his living connections with his people, and kind his regards to them. Unbounded was his love in giving his life for all men, and rising again for their justification. And through him they receive the most holy liberty, inexpressible delight, spiritual supplies, and superabundant and endless felicity. With what transcendent faithfulness, wisdom, and grace, he seeks them out, and strives to bring them into his kingdom and church, and guides, governs, protects, and goes before them through life and death into everlasting blessedness! Infallible is their perseverance, and certain their eternal life, if they continue faithful to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ. But base are the men who, without his commission, thrust themselves into offices in his church, or behave indolently, unconcernedly, or tyrannically therein. Let every one that regards the life of his soul flee from them. The purpose of God certainly stands firm, whether with respect to men's salvation or ruin. But how implacable is the rage which words of infinite grace, offers of unbounded fullness, declarations of truth, and merciful miracles unnumbered, do but heighten and provoke to murder the Saviour! No wonder he abandons such, and offers his presence to others more likely to regard him.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 25, 26. Not only will the Father grant me whatever I request, but I have life in myself, and do quicken, spiritually or corporally, all sinful men. Every one therefore that believeth in me shall be renewed in his soul, and even in his body, at the resurrection; or, likewise in this world also. And no one that, being spiritually quickened, continues faithful, shall ever undergo eternal death, nor shall his body be always continued in the state of the dead. 41-43. Christ never prayed for power to work a miracle, having infinite power in himself; but here he thanked his Father for this opportunity of demonstrating his Messiahship, for the con-

4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he^a goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And ^aa stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.¹

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them: ^abut they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^aI am the door of the sheep.

8 All ^athat ever came before me² are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 I^a am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out,³ and find pasture.

10 The^a thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: ^aI am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.⁴

11 I^a am the good shepherd: ^athe good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.⁵

12 But^a he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the ^awolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I^a am the good shepherd; and ^aknow my sheep,⁶ and am known of mine.

15 As^a the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father:⁶ and ^aI lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And^a other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore^a doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.

18 No^a man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. ^aThis commandment have I received of my Father.⁷

19 ^aThere^a was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, ^aHe hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil. ^aCan a devil open the eyes of the blind?

CHAPTER XI.

1 Christ raiseth Lazarus, four days buried. 45 Many Jews believe. 47 The high-priests and Pharisees gather a council against Christ. 49 Caiaphas prophesieth. 54 Jesus hideth himself. 55 At the pass-over they inquire after him, and lay wait for him.

NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.¹

2 (It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was.²

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day?³ If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.⁵

13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead;

15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe;⁶ nevertheless let us go unto him.

16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.⁸

17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.⁹

18 Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs¹ off.²

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that d Let us risk our lives along with our Master, and die as well as Lazarus.

e Not with Lazarus, as some interpret, for then had he said 'and die like him'; but 'let us die with our Lord,' who thus through love to his friends in Bethany exposes himself to his implacable enemies in Jerusalem.—C.

f It is the universal custom in the East, indeed it is a necessity in such a climate, to bury on the day of death. It would seem from the narrative that Lazarus was already dead when the messenger told our Lord of his sickness; for he remained two days where he was, and then occupied two days more on the journey, going the first probably to Jericho, and ascending on the second to Bethany.—P.

g That is, near two miles.

h The situation of Bethany is on the eastern declivity of the Mount of Olives, completely hidden from the Holy City and the district round it by the intervening hill. The slopes of Bethany are rugged and rocky, and the wilderness of Judea, an extensive view of which commands, is wild and desolate. The village is built on the side of the main road from Jerusalem to Jericho; a shorter footpath to the city leads over the top of Olivet.—P.

j It is very remarkable that this, the greatest, and in its results the most momentous of our Lord's miracles, is only recorded by John, and is not even remotely hinted at by the other evangelists. They could not have been ignorant of it, for it became the exciting cause of that bitter enmity among the Jewish rulers, which resulted in the crucifixion. Any ordinary biographer would have made such an incident one of the most prominent parts of his story. The only reason I can assign for this and similar omissions in the Gospels is, that each evangelist was guided, both in the selection and detail of his facts, by one Divine Spirit, who so directed all as to give to man one perfect picture of the Great Exemplar, and one complete development of his atoning work.—C.

TOMB OF LAZARUS. [JOHN, xi:43.]—The tomb of Lazarus is in Bethany, where Mary and Martha and Lazarus lived. This is a wretched and miserable village now. But because it was once the home of the family where our Savior was so often entertained it has an undying charm for the Christian world. The tomb of Lazarus is a deep vault excavated in the rock and lined with masonry. Christians and Mohammedans alike regard the place with the greatest reverence. It is absolutely certain that Lazarus was buried here. It seems reasonable to accept the place that has so long been looked upon as the tomb of Lazarus as correct. Above the tomb and the village of Bethany is a square tower called the Castle of Lazarus.

thee, That, if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, 'I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always: but 'because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, 'Lazarus, come forth.

44 And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes:⁴ and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then⁵ many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ Then⁶ gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, 'What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.⁵

48 If we let him thus alone, 'all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.'

49 And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high-priest that same year, said unto them, Ye⁴ know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people,⁷ and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high-priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus⁸ should die for that nation;⁸

52 And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then⁹ from that day forth they took counsel together⁹ for to put him to death.

54 Jesus¹⁰ therefore walked no more openly among the Jews: but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called

4 The supper was in the house of Simon the leper, not of Lazarus. The only conclusion we can draw from ver. 2, is that it took place in Bethany. Matthew and Mark mention an introduction of ointment, which Mark says 'she brake,' or 'crushed,' and poured on his head. Though neither Matthew nor John mention the crushing, yet it is his head which had occasion to state. Mark is always characterized by minuteness of detail. John says 'she anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair.' Matthew and Mark say nothing of this, but simply mention the pouring on his head. There is no contradiction. Crushing the box with her hands over his head, the ointment ran down upon it as he reclined. Then with her hands already smeared she stooped and anointed his feet, wiping them with her long loose hair.—P.

'Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.¹

55 ¶ And² the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the passover, 'to purify themselves.'

56 Then³ sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now⁴ both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should show it, that they might take him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jesus excuseth Mary anointing his feet. 9 The people flock to see Lazarus. 10 The high-priests consult to kill him. 12 Christ rideh into Jerusalem. 20 Greeks desire to see Jesus. 23 He foretelleth his death. 37 The Jews are generally blinded: 42 yet many chief rulers believe, but do not confess him: 44 therefore Jesus calleth earnestly for confession of faith.

THEN Jesus,⁵ six days before the passover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the 'dead.'

2 There⁶ they made him a supper, and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took 'Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.²

4 Then⁴ saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him,

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence,³ and given to the poor?

6 This⁵ he said, not that he cared for the poor; but 'because he was a thief, 'and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.

7 Then⁷ said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my 'burying hath she kept this.

8 For 'the poor always ye have with you; 'but me ye have not always.

9 ¶ Much⁸ people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

Ver. 49, 50. Caiaphas, according to his own view, was merely giving utterance to a common sentiment, that 'whatever is politically expedient for a nation is to be boldly executed, however it may be morally wrong in itself or injurious to individual rights.' He does not assert that Jesus for any crime deserves to die, but that, for sake of the people and nation, it is expedient that he should die. But yet, while he thus utters his own opinion, God, unknown to the speaker, overrules his words, ver. 51, and, in honour of the office of the high-priesthood, of which he was personally unworthy, he employs him, in his bloodthirstiness, as he employed Balaam in his covetousness, and draws from him an official exposition of the great doctrine of atonement by sacrifice. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Jesus keeps an exact account of all his people's works of faith and their labours of love. But the most eminent piety cannot exclude afflictions and death. Yet if Christ love us, we may boldly apply to him in our distress. And happy is it if our troubles give him an opportunity to glorify himself, and either prepare us for, or usher us into, everlasting happiness. He often indeed graciously defers relief till it become seemingly impossible. But neither danger nor provocation can make him to neglect his work in its proper season. And with cheerfulness and activity we ought always to follow his example. The death of our godly friends should make life less sweet, death less bitter, and heaven more desirable to us. Dead saints ought not to be lamented as lost, but as gone before, to be with Christ, and to be raised with him to glory.—Many mournful changes may happen in a short time. And it is absurd to pride ourselves in our bodies that may quickly become so ugly and loathsome. It is very friendly to attempt comforting the distressed; but only Jesus' presence can afford solid relief. He at once delightfully acts as the mighty God, the object of faith, and raiser of the dead; and as the affectionate man, whose heart sympathizes with the afflicted, and is burdened with their unbelief. With eagerness then should we run to meet him, and pour our lamentations, as well as our requests, into his bosom. Secret fellowship may ascertain his approaching gracious deliverances. For quickly his salvation comes, whenever our heart is prepared for it by faith. And we never believe aright till we receive and rest on him as God's eternal Son and our given Saviour. With eager delight he lays hold on every opportunity to comfort his people and glorify his Father: and with the greatest ease he can grant instantaneous deliverances to either soul or body. No death, no bands can hinder his work. Alas! that while his marvellous works affect some, they should but enrage others against him. And great must be the wickedness of human hearts that can be thus influenced. But none are more furious enemies to the Redeemer than careless clergymen; and nothing more hurries men into plots and practices against him than worldly views. While all things work together for the redemption of those who love God, the sinful methods taken to preserve nations do but accelerate their ruin. While Christ hides himself, he may be sought for different ends; and though he delay his approach, he will always attend the ordinances of his own grace.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 23-26. This request of the Greeks manifests that the time appointed of the Father for glorifying me, in the salvation of the Gentiles is 10 But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

11 Because by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus.

12 ¶ On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem,

13 Took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, 'Hosanna! blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.'

14 And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written, 15 Fear not, daughter of Zion: behold, thy King cometh, sitting on an ass's colt.

16 These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was "glorified, then remembered" they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

18 For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, 'Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, the world is gone after him.'

20 ¶ And there were certain 'Greeks' among them that came up to worship at the feast:

21 The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

23 ¶ And Jesus answered them, saying, 'The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.'

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, 'Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.'

25 He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, let him follow me; well as the Jews, is just at hand.—Were I to continue to my present state, without dying a sacrifice for sin, I should not have the honour of raising up a spiritual seed to bear my image, and show forth my praise; but being made an offering for sin, I shall be glorified in the conversion, and salvation, and praises of repentant sinners.—And ye likewise must be conformed to me in entering into your glory through much tribulation: for whoever, from love to this life, and the enjoyments of it, denies, disowns, and rejects me, that he may escape persecution and danger, shall certainly fall short of the heavenly felicity; and he that undervalues his natural life, and all its enjoyments, for my sake, shall certainly inherit eternal life as his gracious reward. If any man therefore would be a true disciple and servant to me, let him follow my example, and the instructions of my Word, providence, and Spirit. Then shall he quickly share with me in the felicities of the heavenly world, in which my divine nature is at present, and my human will shortly be; and his unfeigned devoting himself to my service shall issue in his obtaining immortal honours from my Father. 27-30. My soul is inexpressibly distressed, in the views of my approaching sufferings and tribulations from every quarter. If it were possible, I could gladly be excused from it; but I do not insist upon it, as the great end of my coming into the world is to undergo them: I therefore entirely resign myself to the will of God, and beg that, in all I do or suffer, his perfections may be glorified to the highest.—To which the Father, by a voice from heaven, replied, That he had already glorified himself in his obedience, ministry, and miracles, and would further glorify himself in his sufferings and death, and in the complete salvation of Jews and Gentiles flowing therefrom. 31. Certainly and quickly shall both Jews and Gentiles be tried with regard to their thoughts of me; the righteous shall be distinguished from the wicked, and they shall be acquitted or condemned answerably to their believing or not believing in me. And Satan, who hath long reigned over most part of and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

27 Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

31 Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

33 (This he said, signifying what death he should die.)

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶ But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, 'Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?'

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, 40 He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jesus washeth the disciples' feet: exhorteth them to humility and charity. 18 He foretelleth, and discovereth to John by a token, that Judas should betray him: 31 commandeth them to love one another, 36 and forewarneth Peter of his denial.

NOW before^a the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew¹ that "his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, "having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.²

2 And "supper being "ended,⁴ ("the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him;)

3 Jesus knowing that "the Father had given all things into his hands, and that "he was come from God, and went to God;

4 He⁴ riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to "wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter⁵ saith unto him, Lord, "dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, "Thou shalt never wash my feet.⁶ Jesus answered him, "If I wash thee not,⁷ thou hast no part with me.

of glory above. 44-50. He that truly believes in me as the promised Messiah, believes not in me only or ultimately, but, together with and through me, believes in my heavenly Father, who sent me into the world to seek and save lost sinners. And he who, by faith, discerns my person and office, is thereby led into the knowledge of my Father's nature, perfections, and will. I am come into this world to dispel the darkness of ignorance, superstition, and idolatry, and to bring life and immortality to light by the gospel, that whosoever receives and trusts in me should not continue under the power of spiritual blindness, nor wander in the way to eternal misery, but be instructed and guided in the way to everlasting blessedness. And if men, who have had opportunities of hearing and knowing my gospel, wilfully refuse it, and me in it, I will at present neither accuse them to the Father, nor pass nor execute upon them any sentence of condemnation; as the direct design of my coming into the world is not to accuse, condemn, or punish, but to secure, offer, and graciously give spiritual and eternal salvation to all that believe, whether Jews or Gentiles. But he that contemns and rejects me and my doctrines, shall, in due time, find an impartial Judge to try, condemn, and punish him: and the truths which I have preached shall be the rule of judgment, and the awful means of aggravating his offences in the last day. For the holy, excellent, supernatural, and gracious nature of the doctrines which I have taught, and my manner of delivering and confirming the same, manifest that I have uttered them as one directed and authorized by my Father. And whatever ye think of it, I know that what I preach by his authority is the only means of bringing lost sinners to everlasting life; and it is at your infinite peril to reject it.

Ver. 3. Some consider this event distinct from that of Matthew (ch. xxvi.) and Mark (ch. xiv.)—(1) Because this was six days before the passover, that only two, Mat. 26. 2. (2) This seems to have occurred in the house of Lazarus, that in the house of Simon the leper, Mat. 26. 6. (3) In this Mary anointed the feet of Jesus, in that a woman unnamed poured ointment on his head, Mat. 26. 7. Others consider the three narratives identical, though the circumstances differ, judging it more probable that Matthew and Mark should have dislocated the chronology of the events, than that our Lord should have twice been anointed within four days. C.

Ver. 24. This statement of our Lord, and that of Paul, 1 Co.

15. 36, have been impugned as contrary to fact; for, say the objectors, if the grain of wheat die, there can be no produce. This objection is a melancholy specimen of ignorance. When a man dies, the outward body dies—the inward "spirit returns to God who gave it." So, when the outward parts of the seed are chemically changed by moisture and heat, the inward germ, the embryo plant, is developed, and presents, if not an intended type, yet a natural parallel and illustration, of the resurrection. C.

Ver. 27. If our Lord prayed to be saved and was not answered, how can it be said that "the Father heareth him always?" ch. 11. 42. Two simple and efficient answers present themselves:—(1) The words may be taken interrogatively: "What shall I say? (Shall I say) Father, save me from this hour? (Nay) but for this cause came I unto this hour." (2) A more literal translation will totally remove the difficulty without the interrogation: "Father, save me out of this hour"—(which prayer was literally fulfilled, for out of that hour of darkness he arose more bright than ever):—"but for this cause came I into this world," and therefore know I must patiently endure till thy name is glorified in my sufferings. C.

Ver. 41. The glory which Isaiah saw, ch. 6. 1, 5, 8, 9, and the person of whom he spoke, was certainly JEHOVAH, JEHOVAH OF HOSTS; and certainly the words of Isaiah are here applied to Christ. The conclusion is, therefore, inevitable—Christ is JEHOVAH "manifest in the flesh." C.

REFLECTIONS.—Grateful acknowledgments should never be long delayed. While true believers think all expense and service for Christ too little, hypocrites grudge him either heart, hand, or purse: and it is not regard to the poor, but love to the world, that sways them. While some gospel-hearers relish the report of Jesus and his works, others are thereby filled with murderous rancour. And the more Christ honours men, the world will hate them the more. Yea, the stronger evidence of his character Christ gives, obstinate unbelievers are the more exasperated; and if God check them, they become more resolute in wickedness. But let them rage as they please, Jesus will royally triumph over all opposition, fulfil his Father's promises, and honour his perfections, in both his sufferings and glories.—Thrice happy is it, if even curiosity lead us to the saving knowledge of him, and if regard to his people occasion our intimacy with himself!—Great is the virtue of his obedience and death for glorifying God, vanquishing Satan, and converting Jews, and especially Gentiles, to God. Much self-denial is necessary in following him aright. And transcendent is their reward who faithfully serve him, and, by faith, improve the light of his gospel while they have it. But great is their guilt and misery who indulge spite, devise cavils, and shut their eyes against the illuminations of his Word; or who, for secular honours, avoid the open profession of his name. Abandoned by God, they go on in the ways of ignorance and self-deceit, till they land in the depths of hell. Dreadful will be their case when he, who came into the world to save men, shall judge and condemn them at last. Yea, nothing will more fearfully aggravate their guilt and punishment than abused means of salvation.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1, 7. You know not the reasons of what I am now doing, and little think what is my meaning in it; but I will in a little time somewhat explain my design; and when the Holy Ghost shall be poured out from on high he will further acquaint you with it, and make you to experience the benefit of it. 8. You may think your refusal is a humble aversion to my disparaging myself; but you cannot be my disciple if you set yourself against my authority, wisdom, and love; and you can have no fellowship with me, or interest in my saving blessings, unless you be spiritually washed in my blood, and, by my Word and Spirit, from the guilt and filth of your sins. 10. He who is once justified and sanctified by my blood and Spirit, needs only to be further cleansed, in the daily exercise of faith and repentance, from the guilt and defilement which, through remaining corruption, he perpetually contracts by his conversation in the world. And most, though not all, of you present are cleansed in this respect. 18. I do not expect you all to be either obedient or happy. I know that, though I have chosen you all to the apostleship, there is one among you, sitting familiarly with us at table, that is not seeking faith, holiness, and salvation, and who will ungratefully desert and betray me. 31, 32. Now the hour is just at hand when I, the Messiah, shall, by more remarkable sufferings and death, gloriously fulfil all my engagements in the room of sinners, conquer sin, Satan, and all his assistants, and secure an eternal redemption; yea, all the perfections of my heavenly Father shall be harmoniously exalted in this my astonishing self-abasement, and therefore shall he honour me in my sufferings by amazing signs and wonders, and with testimonies 9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, ^{not} my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is ^{washed} needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, ^{Know ye what I have done to you?}

13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

17 If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 ¶ I speak not of you all: ^I I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, ^{He that eateth bread with me} hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me: and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, ^{he} was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, ^{Verily, verily, I say unto you,} that one of you shall betray me.¹

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

18 This is the commencement of Christ's last discourse to his disciples. At first there is a dialogue between him and them as they sat at table—they asking, and he replying; then when they had risen from the supper (ch. 14. 31), the discourse which Christ took a higher form: surrounding their Master the disciples listened to the words of life, and seldom spoke. Finally, in the sublime prayer of the great High-priest, the whole soul of Christ flowed forth

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom ^{Jesus} loved.²

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned³ to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then lying⁴ on Jesus' breast⁵ saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus⁶ answered, He it is to whom I shall give a sop,⁷ when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.⁸

27 And after the sop ^{Satan} entered⁹ into him. Then said Jesus unto him, ^{That thou doest, do quickly.}

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because ^{Judas} had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, ^{Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.}¹

30 He then, having received the sop, ^{went immediately out: and it was night.}

31 ¶ Therefore when he was gone out, Jesus said, ^{Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.}²

32 If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, ^{yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.}

34 A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 ¶ Simon Peter said unto him, ^{Lord, whither goest thou?} Jesus answered him, extorted from enemies themselves; and shall speedily and suitably reward me with a glorious resurrection, ascension, and exaltation at his right hand. 34. The command of brotherly love is here called NEW, not as if it had not all along existed in the law of God, but because Christ revived it when it was sadly corrupted and almost forgotten, and enjoined it by a new example, and with new explications, motives, and enforcements, that it might be observed with a new spirit and temper, and in a new manner, as a fundamental law of his kingdom, written in his people's hearts by the spirit of the New Testament; and because it is most excellent, and will be eternally in full force.

Ver. 1. The former chapter having closed John's account of our Lord's public teaching and procedure, here commences a specimen of his private instruction and domestic intercourse with his disciples—a portion of the Word most deeply interesting, both as the best example for fathers and mothers, and the highest practical authority for the use of family prayer.

Ver. 10. He that is washed. Rather, 'He that is bathed,' whose whole body has been washed (for so the original signifies), needs not but to wash his feet. That is, he that has once truly received the gospel, who has been 'justified by faith,' and entered into 'peace with God,' will never again require such renewal; but will require, nevertheless, continual watchfulness and prayer, that in his daily walk he may 'keep himself unspotted from the world.'—C.

Ver. 14. Had this precept been literal, there would doubtless have been some subsequent mention of it in the Acts or Epistles. The precept, however, is not literal, but emblematic, as the act of which it is the exposition. It is annually caricatured at Rome, when he who proudly professes to be the successor of Peter, and blasphemously asserts himself to be the vicar of Christ, washes the feet of a company of poor; and it is truly fulfilled whosoever one Christian, of whatever rank, performs an act of mercy and kindness to another; but it is violated whenever pride despises, indifference neglects, or covetousness refuses to condescend and relieve. C.

Ver. 26. The 'sop' was a portion of the paschal supper, collected in the fingers and dipped in the sauce, and handed to a guest as a mark of attention.—Note, From considering the position of our Lord and his disciples, and the fact that our Lord, while John was reclining on his bosom, could not have reached to any considerable distance, it seems probable that Judas lay immediately to his left, so that had our Lord laid down his head as John did it, it would have rested on the breast of the traitor. C.

Ver. 31. Now is the Son of man glorified. In the translation the prophetic present is put for the future; in the Greek it is the preterite, used also prophetically to express the nearness or certainty of an event; see ch. 15. 6. The Son is glorified by the resurrection, the victory over death and hell, speedily to be achieved. 'God (the Father) is glorified' in the manifestation of his love to sinners through Jesus. C.

Ver. 32. In himself. Either in the Father 'himself,' by again receiving the Son into the bosom of eternal love, or in the Son 'himself,' by exhibiting in his Godhead-glory the power of his resurrection, ascension, and kingdom. C.

Ver. 34. A new commandment. 'New' to you; for you have hitherto been ambitious and envious, and at strife for supremacy, that can never operate but in a 'new' heart, enforced by a 'new' and unchangeable sanction, 'as I have loved you;' and that will abide for ever 'new,' as the sun in the firmament that waxes not old or dim—the emblem of myself, 'the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.'—O.

REFLECTIONS.—How affectionate and permanent is Christ's love to all men! Astonishing was his condescension for their instruction and advantage. And it is impossible to be his disciples unless he wash us by his blood and Spirit, and we are willing to obey his command, and imitate his condescension and kindness. If his providences be dark, we must wait till he explain them, and meanwhile daily apply his Word, Spirit, and blood, for the further purification of our heart and life. Without hesitation we must always submit to his authority, and put all the knowledge which we have of his truths into practice. To know better, and do worse, is doubly criminal. And, alas! awful is the thought that any who are in profession Christ's disciples, and under the highest visible relation and obligation to him, should kick at and betray him! But fearfully Satan leads men captive at his will when they are left to their own corruptions. Yea, never is he more ready to enter into men than when they are employed in solemn acts of religion; and desertion of godly society is a common inlet to final apostasy.—It is a great mercy that the Lord knows them that are his, and will assist them in their spiritual state and gracious course, if they are only faithful and walk in him as they received him; and that, notwithstanding the most dreadful falls, he seeks to restore by his love, and afterwards bring them to his glory. Transcendent were the glories of our Redeemer in his death and exaltation to heaven; and marvellous the displays of the divine perfections in him, as manifested, and to be for ever manifested, in the salvation of men. Strong, then, is the reason, and plain the duty, of following him through good report

Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, "why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, "Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Christ comforteth his disciples with the hope of heaven: 6 professeth himself the way, the truth, and the life, and one with the Father: 13 assureth their prayers in his name to be effectual: 15 requesteth love and obedience: 16 promiseth the Holy Ghost, the Comforter: 27 and leaveth his peace with them.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1—3. Be not discomposed or terrified at my being betrayed, nor at my approaching ignominies and death, nor at the disappointments and sufferings which ye may be called to undergo on my account; but labour to live by faith, not only on God's promises, but also on my character, offices, relations, work, and fullness, as represented in the gospel, as the blessed means of quieting your hearts. For in heaven, where my Father dwells in the highest manifestations of himself, there are many delightful abodes, and some in which ye shall have eternal rest and satisfaction after your toil and trouble on earth. If it had been otherwise, I would have faithfully and kindly undeceived you; but I am going away from you by death to secure that glory for you, and, by my ascension, to take possession of it in your name, and to prepare everything in the best manner for your arrival thither.—And when, and as surely as, I go in this manner to prepare heaven for you, I will quickly return, by my Spirit, to prepare you for it; and will receive your souls at death, and your whole persons at my second appearance, into my immediate presence and fellowship, that ye may be for ever in a state of freedom, honour, and delight, where I already am in my divine nature, and shortly will be in my human. 6, 7. I myself am the only mean of access to and acceptance with God, and of your receiving grace and eternal blessedness from him. I am the Way, as, by my own blood, I am entering into the holy place, and will thereby open a path for you to follow me. I am the Truth, as all the legal types and ancient promises are fulfilled in me, and as I attest the truths of God and teach you the sure way to heaven. And I am the Life, as I have life in myself, and am the author of spiritual and eternal life to all that believe in me; so that no man can acceptably approach to God in worship, or have any comfortable communion with him, by faith and love here, or any personal admission into his immediate presence hereafter, in any other way than by me. And if ye had known what I am in my person, nature, and office, ye would have known what my Father is, who is one with me in all essential properties. And as ye have begun to see him in the manifestations which I have made of his power and goodness, ye shall hereafter, by the descent of the Holy Ghost, and by other means, know more and more of him. 9—11. Whoever is duly acquainted with me, who am his express image, in my person, offices, and work, hath seen the most lively displays of the Father's perfections. Why, then, after so long acquaintance with me, do you unadvisedly desire a visible representation of him to satisfy all your doubts? Do you not yet believe that I and my Father, though distinct persons, are essentially united, and have the most real, mutual, and intimate communion in Godhead? For neither do I preach the doctrines which you have heard, nor perform the miraculous works which you have seen, but as inseparably united to and sent by him. Believe therefore upon the authority of my Word, and upon the credit of my miracles which I perform in so godlike a manner, that I and my Father have an essential and inseparable inbeing in one another. 12—14. And I assure you, my disciples, that if ye believe in me, according to the declarations which I have made of myself, ye shall be enabled to do as great miracles as ye have seen me do; nay, be instrumental in the far greater and more extensive work of converting multitudes of Jews and Gentiles through all nations of the world; because I will ascend to heaven to intercede for and send down my Spirit upon you and them. And whatsoever ye shall ask for the glory of God, and your own assistance, acceptance, and success, upon the ground of my grant and promise, and with humble dependence upon my wisdom and power, faithfulness and grace, merit and advocacy, I will certainly perform it in answer to your prayers, that the Father may manifest his glorious perfections through my obedience and sufferings, and in my gracious and almighty works. 15—17. Since such shall be the fruits of my departure from you, instead of being anxiously concerned at losing my bodily presence, or at the disappointment of your secular expectations, show your affection to me in a conscientious respect to all my commandments.—And to encourage you herein, I, as your High-priest and Advocate, will intercede effectually with my Father for you; and he, in concurrence with me, will send you another Counsellor, Advocate, and Comforter, to supply the want of my bodily presence, in instructing, assisting, and exciting you to every duty, in pleading your cause against your enemies, and comforting you in all your tribulations: who shall not abide with you a little while, as I have done, but in every period of time and eternity—even the Holy Ghost, who, being of the same nature with me and my Father, is truth itself, infinitely faithful, and the author and teacher of all truth; and whom carnal and unregenerate men do not entertain or embrace, because they have no true knowledge of or affection towards him; but ye who are enlightened and renewed by his operation have an experimental acquaintance with him; for he at present dwells, and works, and manifests himself in you, by his gracious and miraculous influences; and shall quickly further manifest himself in you with increasing light, power, and consolation. 18—20. And though I am going from you by death, I will not leave you destitute, exposed, friendless, and forlorn, but will pay you repeated visits after my resurrection; and will return, by my Spirit, after my ascension, to your unspeakable comfort and advantage. Shortly these wicked men who reject, despise, and abuse me, shall see me no more on earth, but ye shall see me alive after my passion; and because I am the living God, and shall rise again to an immortal life in my manhood, and always live in heaven as the head of my mystical body, ye shall, in union to my person, in fellowship with me, and by virtue derived from me, live spiritually, in a state of justification, sanctification, and consolation, in this world, and of glorification in the next. And when I have risen from the dead, as a triumphant conqueror over sin and Satan, death and hell, and have poured out my Spirit upon you, ye shall begin more clearly to understand that I am essentially one with the Father, and that ye are spiritually united to me as the source of your life. 21—24. Whoever, by virtue of this union with me, not only hears, but receives, hides in his cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

18 I^a will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you.

19 Yet^a a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you.

21 He^a that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas saith unto him, (not Iscariot,) Lord, how^a is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

24 He^a that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But^a the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.^a

27 ¶ Peace^a I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father: for my Father is greater than I.

29 And^a now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.^a 31 But^a that the world may know that I love the Father; and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The consolation and mutual love between Christ and his members, under the parable of the vine. 18 A comfort in the hatred and persecution of the world. 26 The office of the Holy Ghost, and of the apostles.

I AM^a the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman.

2 Every^a branch in me¹ that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now^a ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 Abide^a in me, and I in you.^a As^a the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

Wherefore, as in Jesus 'dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily,' from him, as our Mediator, must ever ascend the voice of all our necessities to the Father, and through him must come down, in reply, 'every good and every perfect gift.' C.

Ver. 23. We will come unto him, &c. The union of Jesus and the Father in one word, 'we,' and in one action, 'we will come;' and in one permanent 'abode' with every believer, is surely an assertion of the Godhead attribute of omnipresence common to the Father and the Son which is not to be resisted or gainsaid! Had the speaker been a mere man or the highest angel, the language had been folly, falsehood, and blasphemy! C.

Ver. 28. My Father is greater than I. This is the accustomed stronghold of all who deny the Godhead of the Son. But surely, whether they assert Jesus to be mere man or highest angel, the declaration that God was 'greater' in power than either man or angel amounts to the merest and most useless truism, conveying no new information. How, then, is the Father greater than the Son? Even as every believer is greater, not in nature, but in work, because the Son has gone in righteousness to the Father (see ver. 12), and thence supplies him with grace and power, ver. 13. Thus also the Father is greater, not in nature, but in working for the glory of the Son, than was the Son, either for his own glory or the glory of the Father. In the days of his humiliation he 'finished the work which the Father had given him to do,' but no more.—But the Father has reserved 'in his own power' (Ac. 1. 7) the 'greater work' of progressively subduing all the enemies of the Son, even to the last enemy, death, 1 Co. 15. 28. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a safe and suitable object of faith is our Redeemer! All his Father's perfections shine in him as his only begotten Son and mediatorial Servant. There is no saving knowledge of, faith in, or fellowship with God, but through him. Infinite was his condescension in becoming his Father's servant, and cheerfully yielding up himself to obedience and sufferings. And great is the glory to which he is advanced as his reward. It is a sure confirmation to our faith that all his predictions are exactly accomplished. And strong is the consolation to our souls that he is our new and living way to God and glory; and that he has risen from the dead, and in our nature ascended to heaven, to secure our interest there, and provide delightful mansions for us. In death, and at the resurrection, he will therefore receive us to, and keep us for ever with himself. His life secures ours, spiritual and eternal; and his and his Father's presence, and his Spirit's indwelling influence, shall refresh and com-heart, and faithfully observes, my commandments, manifests his love to me; and shall in return be accepted and approved of, and delighted in, by me and my Father; and we will favour him with the peculiar manifestations of our glory; multiply the tokens of our special presence with him, by our Word, ordinances, and Spirit, and continue to hold the most free and intimate fellowship with him, as the spiritual house and temple in which we desire to dwell. 26, 27. But when, after my death and ascension to heaven, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father shall, for my merit and upon my intercession, send as a Guide, Advocate, and Comforter, to supply my room and carry on my work, is come unto you, he shall lead you into a more clear and extensive acquaintance with all truths necessary to be known or preached, and shall revive in your minds the remembrance of all the particulars which ye have heard from me, that ye may fully apprehend and properly improve the same. And meanwhile, as your parting and dying friend, I not only earnestly wish for you, but promise, and graciously bestow upon you, all that solid and substantial peace and happiness which I secure and enjoy, and which the world neither can give you nor take from you. Let therefore no apprehensions of my approaching death, nor of your own loss or trouble, discompose your minds. 28, 29. I have told you that I am just going to leave you with a design to return and receive you into my Father's heavenly palace. If your love to me were truly spiritual, regular, and considerate, instead of being troubled, we would, both for my sake and your own, rejoice at my departure to my Father, that I, his servant as man and mediator, may with him enjoy the utmost blessedness, and all power in heaven and earth, as the reward of my obedience and suffering, to exercise it for your advantage.—And I have told you these things beforehand, that when you see them accomplished ye may be the more confirmed in your belief of my being the promised Messiah, able and ready to fulfil whatever I have promised to you. 30, 31. I shall have little opportunity of discoursing more to you before my death; for Satan, who formerly pretended to offer me all the kingdoms of this world, and who powerfully works in the hearts of its rulers and people, is now making his last effort, stirring up his evil instruments, to unite their stratagems and force for murdering me. But he can find no corruption in me to work upon by his temptations, or to give him power over me. Nor can he hinder my death from tending to the glory of my Father, the salvation of believers, and destruction of his own kingdom, or even bring it about, without my own free consent. But to make it evident, both to friends and foes, that I love my Father, and am now heartily willing to obey his commandment in laying down my life for all the world, let us therefore rise from this table and retire to the garden, whither my enemies are coming to apprehend me.

Ver. 9. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. God, in his infinity of being and perfection, must be essentially invisible to every finite creature; for it is manifestly impossible for the finite, either by bodily or mental sight, to comprehend the infinite. God therefore becomes 'manifest in the flesh,' and he that has, on examination and conviction, acknowledged Jesus to be the 'Son of God,' has seen all that man can see of the eternal love, the tender mercy, the overflowing goodness, the unerring wisdom, and the saving power of 'God the Father.' C.

Ver. 12. This promise has undoubtedly a special reference to the apostles, and was most literally fulfilled when Peter, not by a power inherent in himself (as was the power of our Lord), but merely by a power derived from the name of Jesus, converted, by one sermon, 3000 (Ac. 2. 41, 47), and by another, 5000 souls (Ac. 4. 4); and when Paul turned to the Gentiles, preached the gospel in every nation, and reared up churches in every city. And greater by far than all miracles upon their bodies were these miracles of converting grace upon the souls of men. The promise has moreover an encouraging reference to every believer; for he that 'attempts great things for God' will also, in due time, perform great things for God.^a See, for instruction and encouragement, almost every history of Protestant missions to the heathen. C.

Ver. 16. I will pray the Father. If Jesus prayed to the Father, then, say the deniers of the true and proper Godhead of the Word, how could he be God? for God would thus be found praying to God. This objection proceeds upon two oversights—1. That Jesus was as truly man as he was truly God. 2. That man prays only in proportion as he is God-possessed.—

11 These* things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you,⁶ and that your joy might be full.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1-5. In my peculiar relation to the church, I am the fountain of spiritual influence, and the means of conveying it to her members: and my Father plants and takes care of me, and of all that are connected with me. Such members of the church as are united to me only in profession and appearance, without bringing forth the fruits of holiness, he, in his righteous judgment, cuts off as unprofitable and injurious. Such, as being spiritually and vitally united to me by my Spirit and faith, bring forth fruits of righteousness, he, by the various methods of his Word, ordinances, influences, and rods, purges from their remaining corruption, that they may abound more in good works, and have their end everlasting life. Now therefore, Judas being gone, ye are all my living and fruitful members, partakers of my Spirit, and inwardly purified by faith in my Word, which works truly in you: adhere therefore more and more closely by faith and love to me, as your source of perpetual support and supply; for whatever be your present attainments in grace, ye cannot continue to perform holy obedience any otherwiser than by continued union and communion with me. And the more abundantly ye cleave to me by faith and love, and have my Spirit dwelling in you, the more ye will abound in spiritual fruits, to the glory of God, and your own and others' advantage: for separate from me, and without my continual influence, even ye, my real members, can do nothing truly good and acceptable to God. 6, 7. Such church members, as do not thus adhere to me by faith and love, shall quickly be stripped of all relation to me or my church; and their gifts, profession, and specious appearances shall wither and die; and they shall be gathered together at the last day as fit fuel for divine wrath, and cast into everlasting remorse. But they who steadfastly cleave to me, and have me and my Word dwelling in their heart by faith, to guide, govern, quicken, and establish them, shall have everything which they request of God, for his glory and their own edification and fruitfulness, granted them to the utmost of their desires and wants. 8-11. By your thus abiding in me, and I in you, and having your petitions answered, my Father's wisdom, faithfulness, and grace are gloriously manifested; for thus he enables you to abound in holy tempers and works, by which he may be still further glorified; and ye may more plainly appear to yourselves and to the world as my true disciples, and be approved, esteemed and owned by me as such. For as my Father dearly loves and delights in me, not only as his eternal Son, but as the root and medium of all gracious communications to you, so I dearly love and delight in you, as branches united to me, and deriving virtue unto all holy fruitfulness from me. Cleave therefore affectionately and steadfastly to me, that ye may be still further approved of and delighted in by me. And if, from a principle of faith and love, ye cheerfully obey my commandments as your Lord and Saviour, ye shall continue to be approved and owned by me as my dearly beloved friends, even as I, in the character of man and mediator, have cheerfully fulfilled all righteousness in obedience to my Father's commandment, and am continually approved by him, and know that he loves me.—These things have I thus freely and plainly declared to you, that I may rejoice in you as my fruitful members; and ye may rejoice in your union with me, and in my abiding love to you; that through the influences of my Spirit, ye may have fulness of joy to support you under all your troubles and losses; and all may issue in your complete and everlasting joy with me. 12-17. The great command which I now insist on, as a proof of your sincere affection and discipleship to me, is, that you be affectionate, and ready to perform all kind offices one to another for my sake, in consideration and in imitation of my fervent love to you in laying down my life for you. For greater love I cannot show to you, who were naturally my enemies, than in dying for you, as if ye had been my most important and endeared friends. And ye will manifest yourselves to be my true friends, and be esteemed and owned by me as such, if, from the sense of my love to you, ye make conscience of a ready and impartial obedience to all my commandments.—I neither have nor will use you as mere servants, who are kept ignorant of their master's secrets, but as friends, to whom I have imparted, and will further impart by my Spirit, all the blessed love of my Father, which is profitable for you to know or preach.—And not from natural goodness of yours, but out of love, have I called you either to salvation or to the apostleship, but by my own grace have I made you my servants and friends, that, by virtue derived from me, ye may bring forth the fruits of righteousness in your lives and ministrations, and persevere in them, till ye and your converts propagate my cause on earth, and arrive safe in heaven: and that my Father may grant you everything you ask in my name, as your prevailing advocate and friend, to promote these holy purposes. These things I require of you, in order that ye, after my example, may heartily love one another, as members of the same body, partakers of the same blessings, and as servants, disciples, and friends of the same Lord. 18-21. Do not wonder if carnal and worldly men, the children and subjects of Satan, hate, oppose, and persecute you; for ye know that they began with me, and have been as full of rage and spite

19 If^e ye were of the world,⁹ the world would against me, your head and chief, as they can be against you.—If ye were of the same carnal temper and disposition with worldly men, encouraging them in their sinful courses, they would esteem you as persons of their own party and likeness; but because ye are not conformed to them in their corrupt principles, manners and customs, but are through active faith in my sacrifice set apart to exemplify and preach my spiritual and holy gospel, they have an irreconcilable antipathy to you. In order therefore to prevent murmuring at the maltreatment which you must meet with, often consider that you are not worthy of, nor warranted to expect, better treatment than I, your Lord and Master, have found. If then these carnal men have reviled and persecuted me, ye may expect they will do the same to you: and if, instead of receiving the truth in the love of it from me, they have carped and cavilled at my doctrine on account of its contrariety to their depraved sentiments, tempers, and views, they will, for the same reason, set themselves against it when delivered by you.—And on account of your relation and likeness to me, and your zealous profession and publishing of my gospel, they will thus hate, oppose, and persecute you, as they have no true knowledge of God, nor of his sending me into the world to secure the salvation of men. 22-25. If I had not in the plainest manner asserted and demonstrated my Messiahship among them, their sin, in refusing to believe in me, had been less: but since they have had so long the enjoyment of the clearest evidence of the divinity of my person, office, and doctrine, their sin is so highly aggravated, that they can plead no excuse for it.—And whoever hates and opposes me, is an enemy to my heavenly Father who sent me, and hath given public testimony to me as his beloved Son.—Nay, if I had not wrought among them such a multitude of merciful and public miracles, as neither Moses nor any other man ever wrought in such a gracious and godlike manner, they might still have had some pretence of excusing their infidelity, or at least of lessening its guilt: but their persisting in it, notwithstanding their being eye-witnesses of all, must proceed from a rooted enmity at the holiness and authority of both me and my Father; and is, as the psalmist David typically foretold, a hating me without any just provocation. 26, 27. But notwithstanding their most furious and causeless enmity to my person, truths, and interests, they shall triumph over all opposition; for when that divine Counsellor, Advocate, and Comforter is come, whom I have promised, and with my Father's concurrence will send unto you,—even the Holy Spirit, who is infinitely faithful, and the inditer of all inspired truth; and who, in a divine manner, proceeds from the Father as well as from me,—he will direct, encourage, comfort, and support you under all your difficulties and dangers, and will attest my dignity and character by the further revelations which he will make, and the miraculous operations that he will enable you to love his own: but ^abecause ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember the word that I said unto you, The^a servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; ^aif they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

21 But^a all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin:^a but now they have no cloak^a for their sin.

23 He^a that hateth me hateth my Father also.

24 If^a I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: ^abut now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.

25 But this cometh to pass, ^athat the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause.

26 ¶ But ^awhen the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

27 And^a ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.

1 They had not had sin—that is, without being able to plead the 'excuse' of ignorance. But now that 'excuse' is taken away, and they stand guilty not only of rejecting me, but of hating both me and my Father. See ver. 23, 24, 25.

2 Or, excuse.

33 Ac. 1, 8, 21, 22, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

34 Ac. 1, 8, 21, 22, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

35 Ac. 1, 8, 21, 22, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42,

9 Of sin, because they believe not on me;
10 Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;
11 Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you.

15 All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall show it unto you.

16 ¶ A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father.

17 Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we cannot tell what he saith.

¶ The two clauses of this verse are not antithetical. There is no contrast or comparison between the asking of Christ and the asking of the Father in his name.
In Greek the words rendered 'ask' are quite distinct. The first signifies to ask for information;—

the Holy Spirit shall be given to you, ye with what precedes;

it is an independent

12. 16-18.

¶ Ac. 2. 34, 35; 4. 20.
26, 27.

19 Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye inquire among yourselves of that I said, 'A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me?'

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 And ye now therefore have sorrow: but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in proverbs: but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall show you plainly of the Father.

But when the Holy Ghost, who is faithfulness and truth itself, shall come to do his work upon and by you, he shall give you a complete understanding of the whole of divine truth relative to my gospel kingdom. And he will reveal these things unto you, not as separate from, but as one with me and my Father, and entirely acquainted with our whole mind and will. He will also acquaint you with all that is necessary for you to know, or make known to the church, relative to time or eternity. And his manifesting to you the things relative to my person, offices, cause, and kingdom, will tend to my honour, and make you to have clear, exalted, and endearing thoughts of me, of my love, fullness, office, and work. For in this he will manifest to you what concerns my Father, as I am one with him in nature, perfections, counsels, and property; and the administration of all that he does is committed to me. 16, 20, 22. In a few hours I shall be taken from you by death and burial, and after that ye shall have but for a few days an opportunity of seeing me, and then I will ascend to my Father.—My sufferings and death shall quickly overwhelm you with sorrow and mourning, while my carnal enemies will triumph and rejoice, imagining that they have ruined me: but very soon after, by my personal visits, and the pouring out of my Spirit upon you, I will turn your sorrow into the greatest joy, the foundation of which neither men nor devils shall ever be able to shake, and of which no one can rob you. 23-27. And under this comforting light, and these influences of my Spirit, ye shall neither need my bodily presence, nor to ask information as ye now do. But I solemnly assure you, that whatever ye, by the assistance of the Spirit, shall ask my Father and yours, with faith in my name, as your only Mediator, High-priest, and Advocate, he will readily grant it on my account. Hitherto ye have had recourse to me in all your difficulties, and have not well understood how to plead with him upon the ground of my righteousness, and interest with him for you.—But henceforth, in all your wants, present your petitions and pleas with faith in my atonement and intercession, that, by the gracious answers which you receive, your joy may daily increase, till it be completed. These things I have delivered to you in short substantial sentences, which, by reason of your ignorance, sorrows, and prejudices, ye do not well understand; but in a little time after my resurrection, and afterwards by my Spirit, I will make to you a free, open, and full discovery of my Father, and of all his gracious mind; of my own person, office, and work; and of your proper method of fellowship with us: and then shall ye, by the assistance of the Spirit, offer up all your requests, with express mention of my name, and entire dependence on me.—Nor need I again inform you that I, as your great Advocate, will recommend your persons and prayers to the Father's acceptance: nay, he himself will delight to hear your prayers thus presented to him, and to manifest his affection towards, and bestow his favours upon, you as my disciples, who believe in and love me as his Son and the appointed Saviour of mankind. 28. I, who was with the Father from everlasting, voluntarily came forth from him, in a way of peculiar manifestation, into this world; and in a little time I am to leave this world and return to the Father in my ascension, that I may be glorified together with him, and may manage the concerns of my people in heaven, and by my Spirit apply my complete salvation to all who believe. 31-33. Do ye now at last clearly apprehend, and firmly believe what I have said? or do ye imagine that ye are so established in the faith, that ye shall no more stagger through unbelief? Nay, to manifest my omniscience, and to warn you to be humble and watchful, I assure you that within a very little time, even this same night, ye shall all, suddenly affrighted, leave me to my murderous enemies, and disperse yourselves, for your safety, among your friends. But though you will thus shamefully desert me, my Father will assist, own, and carry me through all the sufferings which I have consented to undergo in his service and for his honour. Now, all these things I have delivered to you in this farewell discourse, that, by virtue of your union with me, and by faith in me, ye may enjoy the most refreshing peace with God and your own consciences. While ye continue in this world, great troubles and persecutions for my sake will attend you; but courageously trust in me, and expect a happy issue; for, having vanquished all opposition from men and devils, I am going, through my death and resurrection, to the heavenly mansions, that, by my intercession and the outpouring of my Spirit, I may prepare all believers to dwell with me for ever.

Ver. 8-11. Reprove. Rather 'convict' (comp. ch. 8. 9, 46; 1 Co. 14. 24; 1 Th. 1. 9; Ja. 2. 9). Ver. 9. Sin—their own sin, unbelief. Ver. 10. Righteousness—consequently their own imaginary righteousness. Ver. 11. Judgment—their own unrighteous judgment in condemning the Holy One.—Note. Are not these three acts of the Spirit, though commonly considered as descriptive of the process of conversion, rather a description of that threefold evidence whereby he shall convict the world, the unbelieving, self-righteous, Christ-condemning world, of that 'blasphemy against the Holy Ghost which shall not be forgiven, neither in this world, neither in the world to come?' Mat. 12. 31, 32. C.

Ver. 26. And I say not unto you, &c. That is, 'I do not merely say that I will pray the Father for you:—I need not farther assure you of it, for the Father himself loveth you; and therefore I never can either forget, neglect, or cease to love and intercede for you. C.

Ver. 33. I have overcome the world—its flatteries, its ambition, its honours, its pleasures, its hopes, its injustice, its malice, its calumnies, its sorrows, its fears, and its god. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Blind bigotry often raises the most furious persecution in the church; and her best friends are frequently reproached and murdered as her worst enemies. True believers are sometimes grieved at that which, properly understood, is a real ground of their joy. For how much more advantageous is it to have Jesus, our exalted Forerunner and Advocate, on his throne, than to have him always continued on earth! How great is he!—possessed of all perfections and property equally with his Father and the Holy Spirit. And thrice happy is it that this divine Spirit, who perfectly knows all the designs and mysteries of the Godhead, comes to acquaint us with all needful truth, and to glorify Jesus Christ, in revealing and communicating his fulness to us. Powerfully he convinces men of sin, righteousness, and judgment—all to the honour of Christ.—Kindly Jesus suits his instructions to our capacities and circumstances.—But great is our dullness and ignorance that we rightly apprehend but few of them. Powerfully he dispels our griefs, and turns them into joy by his gracious visits. But never, when we are self-conceited, are we far from danger and shame. Let me therefore always be clothed with self-diffidence, and given to pour forth prayers in his name. The Father, who loves him, and us for his sake, will not refuse us a gracious answer. And faith in and love to him will graciously secure his Father's delight to do us good.—What a scene of sorrow is this world! Quickly the triumphing of the wicked issues in everlasting disappointment and misery; and children are certain crosses, but uncertain comforts. They but come into a world of sin, snares, troubles, and griefs.—But if we meet with great tribulation, it is but the predicted lot of Christians. If friends forsake us, so they did Christ our Saviour. If his peace compose and victory comfort us, nothing need discourage us; and if he and his Father abide with us, our light and tran-

26 At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, 'Do ye now believe?'
32 Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.
33 These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Christ prayeth to his Father to glorify him, 6 to preserve his apostles, 11 in unity, 17 and truth: 20 to glorify them, and all other believers with him in heaven.

THESE words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the story afflictions shall work for us an exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 1-3. O Father, the time fixed in thy eternal love for completing my course of obedience on earth is now come! Own and support me as thy Son, under my sufferings, that, in finishing all righteousness, triumphing over sin, Satan, and death, and in ascending to heaven, I may manifest and spread the honour of all thy compassion in the world; that in the exercise of that mediatorial authority over all mankind which thou hast allotted me as the reward of my obedience, I may freely and graciously bestow the great blessing of eternal life upon all those who come unto me and accept me as their Savior and abide in me. And the way to, the beginning, earnest, and evidence of right to, this eternal life, and even the complete enjoyment of it, is by an approving and fiducial knowledge of thee as the only true and faithful God, in opposition to all idols; and of me as the anointed Savior and the only Mediator, in opposition to all others. 4, 5. As I have invariably intended and manifested thy glory in the whole of my doctrine, miracles, and practice, and am just ready, without fail, to honour all thy perfections by my death, which will complete that work of the work of redemption which was intrusted to me, do thou therefore, according to thy affection to me, advance my incarnate person to the highest glory at thy right hand, where I may appear in my human nature and mediatorial office like myself, and shine forth in that divine majesty which I had with thee from eternity, but which has been obscured in my humble state on earth. 6-8. As for those true believers who through faith have accepted me as the Savior of the world and have determined to walk in me as they received me, I have begun to give them a spiritual understanding of thine excellencies, mind, and will, and of my relation to thee and commission from thee; and they, under my powerful influence on their hearts, have embraced and adhered to thy truths which I taught them; and by my instructions have been made to know and believe that all things which I, as Mediator, have undertaken, taught, performed, or suffered, are by thy love and blessed, and the fruits of thy infinite wisdom and sovereign grace. 9, 10. I therefore affectionately recommend to thy care, these my disciples and those who through their ministry accept me as the Redeemer of the world as the members of my mystical body, to be redeemed and saved by me, that thou mayest perfect everything which concerns them. And as thy right in them is so inseparably and entirely the same with mine, I pray that thou wouldest perform in them all the good pleasure of thy goodness, that I, together with thee, may be glorified in their redemption and blessedness, and in their faith, love, worship, obedience, and eternal salvation. 11-13. And now the time is come that I must die a sacrifice for all sin, and afterwards be but little with men in this world, to instruct, defend, and comfort them; yet these my apostles, as well as my other disciples, must for a time remain in it, compassed about with many infirmities, temptations, and dangers.—And as I am coming to appear in thy presence for them, I beseech thee, by thy mighty power and infinite wisdom, and for thine own name's sake, to preserve them steadfast in their faith and holy profession, that, as my witnesses and chief ministers, they may be entirely united in heart and affection, testimony, interest, and designs, as we are in ours.—While I have been personally conversant with them, I have, according to thy commission, by my doctrine, example, and powerful influences, so confirmed and preserved them from apostasy, that not one of them has miscarried, except the perfidious Judas, who, by forsaking and betraying me, is just now bringing inevitable ruin upon his own head, agreeably to the ancient predictions concerning him. But now, as I am coming to be glorified at thy right hand in heaven, leaving them without the benefit of my company to guide, protect, and comfort them, I thus supplicate thee in their hearing, that they may rejoice in hope of thy preserving, teaching, and comforting Spirit, and that their joy may be more abundant than ever it was in my personal presence. 14, 15. I have given them a spiritual understanding of, and commission to preach, thy gospel; and carnal and unbelieving men are filled with enmity, rage, and violence against them, because their principles, tempers, doctrines, and views, as well as mine, are utterly disagreeable to their carnal lusts, sentiments, and interests. However, I do not plead that thou, to deliver them from their troubles, shouldest deprive this world of their holy example and useful ministrations; but that thou wouldest preserve them from the temptations of Satan and their own remaining corruptions, and support them under, sanctify to them, and carry them through, all the persecutions which they may meet with before they have finished their work. 16-19. They are already of such a religious temper and disposition, and engaged in such excellent work, as is directly contrary to the inclinations of carnal men, even as I myself have been before them. Let this holy temper and practice be maintained and increased in them by means of thy Word; and by the anointing of thy Spirit, let them be consecrated to serve thee in propagating gospel truth. For as thou hast sent me into the world with a commission to preach thy important and infallible truths to mankind, I have authorized them to carry on the same work, wherever Providence may cast their lot, after my departure from them. And for this, as one great reason, have I devoted myself to the mediatorial office, and am going to consecrate myself by suffering and death, that they, through the truth, may, by the Holy Ghost, be consecrated to, fitted for, supported, and succeeded in preaching it. 20, 21. Nor do I only pray for such preserving, supporting, sanctifying, and comforting influences to my apostles, but to all who, in this and the following ages, shall be brought to a saving faith in me, by means of their publication of the gospel—that the whole number of believers, in all generations, may be joined together as one body, in faith and love, worship and obedience, by one spirit, in as near a resemblance as possible to that union which we have by our mutual inbeing; and that, in their measure, they may be united to us; that others, beholding the powerful effects of the gospel on them, may be induced to believe in me as the promised Messiah. 22, 23. And in pursuit of this great design, I have given them an interest and subordinate partnership in that glory which thou hast given me, as their Head, Representative, and Trustee; that, as members of my mystical body, and joint heirs of God with me, and partakers of my Spirit, they may be united in the most close, honourable, and beneficial manner. In order to which I will dwell in them by my Spirit, according to their measure, as thou dwellest in me by him without measure, that they, being joined to me, may attain to the most perfect union they are capable of, in one spiritual body, under me as their Head—that by means hereof multitudes of both Jews and Gentiles may clearly and satisfactorily perceive and believe that I am the Christ whom thou hast sent into the world for the redemption of men; and that thou hast a peculiar, affectionate, and delightful love to them for my sake, some way resembling that supreme love which thou bearest to me as thine eternal Son and their Mediator. 24. And I further claim that, according to my sacrifice and suffering, all those whom thou hast called to receive eternal life be given the opportunity of repentance and acceptance of heaven, where I already am in my divine nature, and for ever shall be in my entire person, that there they may have an appropriating, blissful, and transforming vision of that glory which thou hast bestowed on me as their Head and Representative, because from all eternity thou hadst an infinite delight in me, as thy Son and their Savior, who sought to glorify thee in their salvation. 25, 26. All these things do I ask from thee, not only as thou infinitely hatest all impurity, and lovest me and them for my sake, but as thou art a righteous and faithful Father, ready to give men whatever I have secured for them. As for the unregenerate worldlings, they are ignorant of and reject thee and thy counsels; but I am thoroughly acquainted with thy nature, perfections, and will; and these my apostles have known and received me as the true Messiah whom thou hast sent for the salvation of Israel.—And as, according to my commission, I have fully declared to them whatever was proper, and have savingly enlightened them in the knowledge of thyself, I will, after my resurrection, by personal visits, and after my ascension by the effusion of my Spirit, more clearly and fully acquaint them with thy glorious perfections and will, that the infinite love with which thou hast from eternity loved me may extend to and manifest itself in men, and that I may dwell in their hearts by faith till they arrive at that perfection of eternal blessedness which, in thy distinguishing love, thou hast prepared for all and for all who receive me by faith.

Ver. 1. It is recorded of our Lord that he continued all night in prayer, but this is the longest of his prayers of which the Spirit has left any verbal record. C.
Ver. 3. The only true God. This, like ch. 14. 28, has been a special stronghold of all who deny the supreme deity of the Son of God; yet requires merely the application of one Scripture rule, the 'comparing of spiritual things with spiritual,' 1 Co. 2. 3, to show itself in perfect accordance with that essential doctrine. (1) Then, be it remembered, that our Lord teaches us to say, 'Our Father who art in heaven.' (2) That the gods of the nations are idols—false gods—always on earth—never in heaven. (3) That 'THE WORD WAS GOD,' Jn. 1. 1, 'and dwelt among us.' (4) That, as such, he is called 'the true God,' 1 Jn. 5. 20. Wherefore, the Father is called 'the only true God'—God in heaven—not in opposition to Jesus Christ, who is 'the true God'—'God manifest in the flesh,' dwelling among us on earth; but the Father is so called in opposition to idols, which are vanity and a lie. C.
Ver. 4. I have finished the work. The work of instruction, of miracles, of witness-bearing—the work of contending with Satan and his auxiliaries—and now I am about to enter upon the sufferings I have been appointed to underlie. C.
Ver. 9. I pray not for the world. When Christ prays he is certainly heard, Jn. 11. 42. But he prays not at this time, for the impenitent world, his whole mind at this time was upon his disciples. C.
Ver. 12. None of them is lost, &c. None that were given are lost; but 'the son of perdition' is lost, 'that the scripture might be fulfilled.' Not as if Judas were lost that the prophecy might become true, but the prophecy is verified in the fact of his treason. C.
Ver. 13. My joy. The joy derivable from me.—Fulfilled. By the presence of the Holy Spirit—one form of whose precious fruit is joy in the birth, doctrine, death, resurrection, kingdom, and victories of Christ, Lu. 2. 10; Ga. 5. 22; Re. 12. 12. C.

14 I^e have given them thy word; and ^athe world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary to conclude important advices, and prepare for impending temptations, by fervent and solemn prayer, and with heart and eyes lifted up unto God. In what a dignified manner Jesus intercedes for all men, particularly his ministers, upon the footing of his own finished righteousness, and his Father's perfections manifested and promises ratified thereby! It is impossible for those to fall short of grace or glory who are interested in such prayers, which so closely connect the glory of God and the good of men.—Marvellous is his exaltation and his saving power! And thrice happy are they who have the saving knowledge of him as the only Mediator, and of his Father in him. His glorification of his Father's perfections, by fulfilling all righteousness in our stead, wonderfully secures eternal glories to himself, and conversion, deliverance, and everlasting happiness to all faithful members. And by our holding fast his doctrine, by our holiness in heart and life, and giving him the glory of all that we are and do, we mark our relation to him as his true children.—Great is the mercy that all our spiritual knowledge, faith, holiness, and eternal happiness are secured in and by him; and that though he be no more in this world, his Word and Spirit are left to supply his room. This polluting and insaring world is the greatest enemy to his saints. But while multitudes of professors, and even noted preachers, are eternally ruined by its influence, Christ's prayers, the directions of his Word, and the influences of his Spirit, will carry all who are faithful safely, and even comfortably and honourably, through it. If we be not carnally disposed, we shall quickly get to heaven, out of the reach of carnal men. For if Jesus devoted himself to sufferings for us, he will advance us to glory with him. Whatever good work he once begins will not fail on his account; and if his ministers need to be eminently holy, steadfast, and faithful, he offers up particular prayers in their behalf; and if he send ministers, he will make their labours powerful for increasing, uniting, and edifying his mystical body the church. Let carnal men deride it now as they will, they shall be made to know that Christ and his people are one in law, spirit, temper, and design. And while the wicked are ruined by their sins, the good shall be admitted into the most immediate vision of and fellowship with him, in his glory and in his Father's love.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 11. It is no time for fighting; nor is my kingdom or cause to be propagated

VALLEY OF JEHOSHAPHAT. [John, xviii:1.]—This is also called the valley of the Kedron, but is generally known as the Valley of Jesoshaphat. The Jews believe that the final judgment will be held here, and for this reason they regard it a great privilege to be buried on the sides of the Mount of Olives, so when they arise from the dead to be judged they will be close to the place of the final accounts. This belief among the orthodox Jews is based on Joel, iii:2-12. The Moslems have also adopted the belief of the Jews, and so they have turned the sides of the valley next to the walls of Jerusalem into a cemetery. In this valley are the tombs of Absalom, Zechariah and St James. The brook Kedron flows through it. When the name "Valley of Jehoshaphat" was first applied to this place is not known. The date is not mentioned in the Bible.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.¹

3 Judas^a then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.³

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled which he spake, Of them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 ¶ Then^a Simon Peter, having a sword,⁴ drew it, and smote the high-priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 ¶ Then^a the band and the captain, and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound him,

13 And led him away to Annas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high-priest that same year.⁵

14 Now^a Caiaphas was he which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die⁶ for the people.

15 ¶ And^a Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another⁷ disciple: that disciple was known unto the high-priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high-priest.

16 But^a Peter stood at the door without.

But as the band, which was doubtless of Roman soldiers, must have heard much of the miraculous powers of Jesus, and as they had with them such light as would give full display to his person, it is not improbable that some indescribable heaviness in his appearance, manner, or voice, produced an effect upon them which, if not directly miraculous, was in every sense supernatural, and amounted to an acknowledgment of his knowledge and dignity. And perhaps (as Boothroyd supposes) our Lord intended by this power over the soldiers to show to his disciples that he could have escaped if he had pleased.—C.

18 h The phrase eat the paschal lamb, then our Lord must have been crucified on the 14th of the month, and could not have eaten the paschal supper with his disciples. Yet the other evangelists say he did. Mat. 26. 17-20, &c. The word passover, therefore, must have some other meaning. John employs it to denote the whole festival, ch. 3. 13; 6. 4, &c.; but the word eat limits it here to some particular act. We know that it was customary to kill voluntary peace-offerings on the 15th, and the word eat is used by the offerer and his friends who were ceremonially clean. To these offerings the term passover was applicable; and these doubtless the evangelist refers in this passage.—P.

Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high-priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not.

18 And^a the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals;⁸ for it was cold: and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶ The^a high-priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by struck Jesus^a with the palm of his hand,¹ saying, Answerest thou the high-priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou me?²

24 Now^a Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high-priest.

25 ¶ And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One^b of the servants of the high-priest, being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter^c then denied again: and immediately the cock crew.³

28 ¶ Then^a led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment:⁴ and it was early; and they themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover.⁶

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

by force of arms. I am not destitute of almighty power to rescue myself; but from regard to the glory of God, and to manifest my own love in the salvation of sinners, I freely and cheerfully submit to all the tribulation and wrath which he hath appointed me to undergo, and I will allow of no opposition to it. 20, 21. Whatsoever I have taught has been with all openness, plainness, and freedom to all sorts of people, in the most public places, and on the most solemn occasions. Nor did I ever teach aught in private that I did not teach openly.—Let then my hearers, whether friends or foes, be examined as to what they heard me deliver. 36, 37. My kingdom is altogether spiritual and heavenly, consisting in a dominion over men's souls and consciences, and not over their secular affairs.—Nor does it in the least interfere with, or tend to the disturbance of, civil government; if it had, I should have allowed my followers to fight for my protection or rescue.—I freely own myself a king; but, to satisfy you that my kingdom is not of a worldly constitution or design, know that God hath sent me into this world, that, by my preaching and miracles, I might reveal and confirm the truth, and that alone, concerning God and myself, and the way of salvation to sinful men. This is the mean of my conquests and government; and every one that is acquainted with and awakened by the word of truth may believe and embrace my testimony, and become my willing subject.

Ver. 2. This garden may have belonged to some friend of our Lord; or, more probably, have been one of those public gardens which are common around cities both in Asia and Europe.—Note. The life of our Lord is strikingly diversified between extreme activity and publicity, and the love of quiet and retirement. There never appears, however, any morbid preference either for publicity or solitude; but the one is diligently employed as the means of doing good to men, the other is thankfully received as an occasion of more private converse with his disciples, or of communion with his Father. C.

Ver. 28. Defiled. They were defiled with hypocrisy, malice, falsehood, and bloodthirstiness: with all these pollutions within them and upon them they were ready to eat the passover as a rite of righteousness; but they would neither enter the prætorium nor come in contact with a Gentile soldier, lest they should be disqualified. They were careful to make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter; but the interior of the sepulchre, but forgetful or regardless of the death and rottenness within.—Note. Let this ceremonial scrupulousness and moral defilement of the Jews furnish to every Christian a special note for self-examination before prayer and the Lord's supper, and every other act of religion! C.

REFLECTIONS.—Garden retirements should at once lead our thoughts to Adam's ruining fall, and to the gracious promises and redeeming sufferings of Christ. Amazing was his willingness to die for us who thus went forth to meet his murderers. And after showing his ability to strike them dead, he readily resigned himself into their hands, in obedience to his Father's will. Why then should danger or death ever deter us from faithfully owning his cause? Kindly he proportions his people's trials to their strength, and preserves them by offering himself a sacrifice for them. And his cause is to be maintained by his ministers by weapons not carnal, but mighty through God. Yea, the most hasty in their zeal are seldom the most steadfast in his service. But hardened indeed are men when even awful miracles cannot restrain their wickedness and folly. Dreadful is the nature of sin, that brought God, in our nature, under such sorrow and suffering. And infinite was his kindness and condescension cheerfully to submit to all for our sake. O my soul, let the treachery of Judas, the rage of Jews, the repeated denials of Peter, the cowardly injustice of Pilate, serve me as a glass to view myself, as a warning to watch ^f Behold the man! From this example, as well as in ch. 18:38, it is apparent that Pilate was a sentimental and laconic speaker, nor is it easy in either case precisely to pronounce upon his meaning. The Scriptures have left us not a single trace of the personal appearance of our Lord; yet it is not improbable that Pilate saw in the countenance of our Lord such evidence of sincerity, guileless simplicity, innocence, that he makes this appeal to the compassion of the Jews—as if he had said, 'Behold the man you have accused, and let his meek, subdued, patient, and innocent aspect, excite your pity, while I pronounce his release!—Ade. While such was, probably, the secret thought of Pilate, Providence overrules it to make him still further a witness for, and, as it were, a preacher of Jesus.—C.

this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Christ is scourged, crowned with thorns, and beaten. 4 Pilate is desirous to release him, but being overcome with the outrage of the Jews, he delivereth him to be crucified. 23 They cast lots for his garments. 26 He commendeth his mother to John. 28 He dieth. 31 His side is pierced. 38 He is buried by Joseph and Nicodemus.

THEN Pilate^a therefore took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers platted^b a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail,^c King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 ¶ Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him.³

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!⁴

6 When^a the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, 'We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;⁶

9 And went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, 'Thou couldest have no fulness, and to avoid fellowship with sinners! And let the wisdom, meekness, and boldness of Christ be my pattern. Let me adore that wonderful providence which overruled all for the fulfilment of scripture, the glory of God, and salvation of men. And never let me condemn persons or things because they are run down by the multitude.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 11. Therefore, &c. To discover the grounds of this conclusion has greatly perplexed commentators. Might we venture to suggest one additional solution, it would be this:—Take the words 'Thou couldest have no power at all against me except it were given thee from above' as parenthetical, and consider the words 'Therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin,' as a reply to Pilate's assertion of despotic authority, 'I have power to crucify thee, and I have power to release thee,' and the reply is most applicable.—'Therefore he that delivered me' (to a judge determined to assert and act upon power, and not upon justice and mercy; 'has the greater sin—his own sin aggravated by that of the judge his accomplice.'—C.

Ver. 14. Mark says 'it was the third hour, and they crucified him,' ch. 15:25; John says 'it was about the sixth hour,' even before he was delivered to his enemies. The most common method of reconciliation is that of Eusebius, who states that the Hebrew numeral for 'the third' was mistaken for the early transcribers for the Greek numeral for 'the sixth.' In this reading seven of the best MSS. concur; it is also supported by several of the early fathers, and adopted by the most learned modern commentators. But, in opposition to all these authorities, the early versions of this Gospel have all 'the sixth hour'—an evidence of authenticity scarcely to be overborne. Perhaps a better solution of the difficulty may be found in the difference between the Jewish and Roman modes of commencing the numeration of hours. The Jewish numeration commenced at sunrise, the Roman at midnight; so that, 'about the' Roman 'sixth hour' corresponded with the time about the Jewish first hour—most probably half-past the Jewish one o'clock A.M., at which time, according to John, Jesus was 'delivered to be crucified,' ver. 16. Now, as it is evident from Mat. 20:12 that the Jews counted their hours from their commencement, and not from their conclusion, this would leave barely half an hour and a half till the Jewish 'third hour.' And considering the slowness with which the mass of spectators could emerge from the hall and advance through the crowded streets; and allowing a sufficient time for the procession to Calvary, which lay without, though near to the city (He. 13:12; Jn. 19:20; and Robinson's Geography, pp. 64-80); and adding the time necessary for completing the cruel preparations for the crucifixion—it will be easy to perceive how this hour and half harmonized.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—What struggles are there in the breasts of carnal men between the convictions of their conscience and their care of their secular interests—their business and the terrors of God and the fears of men! But indulged lusts dreadfully bear down all religion, truth, and equity.—How shocking is it to behold the men of Israel persecute their divine King with outrage, indignity, and barbarity! Yet more amazing to behold the God of heaven giving up his only begotten Son into the hands of such vile and savage miscreants! But, lo! even the marks of disgrace proclaim his character and spread his renown! Astonishing is his meekness, patience, and holy fortitude, under all his sufferings. Remarkable his filial regard to his mother, and his dying trust in his heavenly Father. And while his hypocritical persecutors pretend ceremonious scruples of conscience amidst their obstinate violation of important precepts, the blood and water streaming from his heart verify the scripture, mark him really dead, and figure out our justification by his blood, and sanctification by his Spirit. And to magnify the grace of God, fulfil the predictions of the prophets, and honour the crucified Redeemer, disciples who had long been timorous and afraid to own him are emboldened at such an important crisis to give him an honourable interment.—Now, my soul, behold the God-man who was falsely accused that I might be honourably acquitted—was wounded and scourged, that by his stripes I might be healed—was clothed with a robe of derision, that I might be clothed with robes of righteousness and garments of salvation—was crowned with thorns, that I might wear a diadem of glory—had his royalty insulted, that I might be made a king unto God—was condemned, that I might be justified—bore his own cross, and was crucified on it, that he might bear my sins and carry my sorrows—was numbered with transgressors, that I might have a cup of salvation, joy, and praise—and finished transgression and suffering, that I might be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation!

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 17. Do not stay now to express your affection to me in this manner, as you will have repeated opportunities of seeing me before I ascend to my heavenly Father; but run quickly to my poor disconsolate disciples, whom, notwithstanding their late defection, I still love as much as ever, and esteem as my brethren, and heirs of the same glory with myself, and tell them that I am risen to an immortal life, and not to set up a temporal kingdom among them on earth; and am, after some time, to

THE ARCH OF ECCE HOMO, JERUSALEM—WHERE THE CROSS WAS LAID UPON CHRIST. [John, xix:16.]—The way along which our Savior was led from the Judgment Hall to the place of crucifixion is called the Via Dolorosa, or the Way of Sorrow. The Arch of Ecce Homo is the second station in the Way of Sorrow, for it is said that here the cross was laid upon Christ. There is something very pathetic about this gloomy street. As one walks along and sees the people kiss the various stations, thereby evidencing their deep love for the Man of Sorrows, it is sufficient to call forth tears from the hardest heart. Beginning with the palace of Pilate and ending with Calvary, the Via Dolorosa is the most loved street in the world, and it is the only street in history made famous by one single person walking over it one time.

power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the ^{greater} sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, 'If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar.

13 When^a Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.⁷

14 And it was ^{the} preparation of the pass-over,⁸ and about the ^{sixth} hour:¹ and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But⁹ they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him! Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, 'We have no king but Cæsar.

16 Then¹⁰ delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ¶ And he bearing his cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, Golgotha:

18 Where¹¹ they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ¶ And¹² Pilate wrote a title,² and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.³

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.⁴

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written I have written.

23 ¶ Then¹³ the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam,⁵ woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, 'They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 ¶ Now¹⁴ there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas,⁷ and Mary Magdalene.

ascend to the right hand of God, who is my Father by nature, and theirs by repentance and faith, and who is my God as their Mediator, and their God as they are my members. 21-23. I now effectually confer as promised peace upon you; and as my Father hath sent me into the world to discharge the office of Mediator, so I, as the Head of the New Testament church, appoint you, as my apostles, to preach the gospel to both Jews and Gentiles, and to confirm it with mira- culous signs wherever you go. And receive ye now the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, which I can as easily convey as I thus breathe upon you, to enlighten your minds, and strengthen your faith in me as a risen Saviour, and as an earnest of that plentiful effusion which ye shall in a short time receive for your spiritual illumination, sanctification, and consolation, and for your assistance and success in the ministerial work which I commit to you. MODERN MOUNT CALVARY—ONE OF THE TWO PLACES AGREED UPON AS THE PLACE OF CRUCIFIXION. [John, xix:17.]—This is here called modern Mount Calvary, because another place contends for the honor of being the spot where our Lord was crucified. The other place is inside the walls of Jerusalem and covered by the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. This is outside of the walls, and many of the best authorities claim that the evidences are in favor of its being the real place where Christ was crucified. It is to the north of the city, just across the Damascus road from the wall. To the right of the picture, near the margin, we see the dome of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. So from this place we really have a view of both of the places where different authorities represent Christ as being crucified.

42 There^v laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.

THE first^a day of the week cometh Mary¹ Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the ^bother disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, 'They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter^a therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did ^coutrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he, stooping down, and looking in, saw^v the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then^b cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,²

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For^a as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then^j the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶ But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, 12 And seeth two angels in white sitting,³ the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw ^kJesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir; if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

o The diversities in the four narratives of our Lord's resurrection present no contradictions; and while they testify that there was no private concert between the evangelists to produce a 'cunningly devised fable,' their textual difficulties may all be removed by the following principles, legitimately deducible from a combined view of the whole:—1. There were two companies of women—one of which immediately after the interment on Friday, returned to the city to prepare (purchase) spices. Lu. 23. 55-56; 24. 1.—A second, consisting of the two Marys and Salome, who still lingered in despondency near the sepulchre (Mat. 27. 55-61), and did not buy their share of the spices till the Sabbath (Saturday) was past, Mar. 16. 1-8. Note. Though Mary Magdalene is mentioned here alone, because she alone ran to tell Peter and John, yet it is evident from Mar. 16. 1 that she had come in as one of a company. 2. That there were two visions of angels, and two separate addresses to two separate parties. 3. That Simon went a first time to the tomb, and returned unbelieving (Jn. 20. 9); and a second time, and renounced 'wondering in himself,' yet unbelieving (Lu. 24. 12); when Jesus appeared to him (Mar. 16. 13. 1 Co. 15. 5), yet left him still in unbelieving (Mar. 16. 14); and finally yielded credence to the reality of the resurrection when sense and prophecy and the Spirit of God rendered further resistance impossible. See for a more detailed solution of the difficulties in the narrative of the resurrection, either Grotius, West, Doddridge, Pilkington, Townson, Cranfield, or Townsend, &c. West is said to have been an infidel, and being determined to write against Christ's resurrection, sat down to study the Gospel narratives. But as he read the Spirit of God enlightened his eyes; and, like Paul, who preached him whom once he persecuted, so he produced an unanswerable defence of that resurrection which, in his blindness, he had purposed to overturn.—Note. The apparent contradictions between Mar. 16. 13, 14 and Lu. 24. 34 may easily be reconciled, by rendering the passage in Luke thus: 'Is then the Lord risen indeed, and hath he (really) appeared unto Simon?' An exclamation of wonder, or question of doubt, not an assertion of belief.—C.

A.M. cir. 4037.
A.D. cir. 33.

GROTTO OF JEREMIAH—THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS BURIED.
[John, xx:1.]—The Grotto of Jeremiah is under the height we have already given under the name of modern Mount Calvary. Those who look upon what we call modern Mount Calvary as the place where Christ was crucified take the position that the tomb of Joseph, in which Christ was buried, is what is now known as the Grotto of Jeremiah. This Joseph of Arimathea, a city of the Jews, asked Pilate for the body of Jesus, and then took it down from the cross, wrapped it in new linen and laid it in a sepulcher that was hewn in stone wherein man never before was laid. Joseph of Arimathea was said to be a native of Ramleh, on the road from Jerusalem to Joppa. His connection with the burial of Christ brings his name to our day.

31 But^a these are written, that ye might believe^b that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that, 'believing, ye might have life through his name.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Christ appearing again to his disciples was known of them by the great draught of fishes. 12 He dineth with them: 15 earnestly commandeth Peter to feed his lambs and sheep: 18 foretelleth him of his death: 22 rebuketh his curiosity touching John. 25 The conclusion.

AFTER these^a things¹ Jesus showed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise showed he himself.

2 There^b were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: ^abut the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, Children,² have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, ^aCast the net on the right side³ of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore ^athat disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is ^athe Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,⁴) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits,⁵) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, they saw ^aa fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.⁶

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three:⁷ and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 ¶ Jesus saith unto them, Come and^a dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus¹ then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now the ^athird time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶ So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, ^aSimon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me ^amore than these?² He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; ^athou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, ^aFeed my lambs.¹

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, ^aFeed² my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time,³ Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was ^agrieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, ^athou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, ^aFeed⁴ my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt ^astretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.⁵

19 This spake he, signifying ^aby what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, ^aFollow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple ^awhom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter, seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and ^awhat shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry ^atill I come,⁶ what ^ais that to thee? Follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what ^ais that to thee?⁷

his own repeated appearances, and even the jealousies of disciples, concur to render it unquestionable. But marvellous was his condescension and kindness to such as had forsaken him in his extremity—to Peter, who had denied him, and to Thomas, who had so perversely indulged the most obstinate unbelief. He gives them his peace, owns them for brethren, and qualifies and appoints them to preach his gospel. Great is the mercy that we have all this recorded by eye-witnesses directed by the Holy Spirit, that we may believe it, to the eternal salvation of our soul; and that we have the weekly Sabbath as a stated season of intercourse with our Saviour. If we love him much, eagerly and early, through darkness and danger, we shall push our way into his presence. For to a tender-hearted Christian the felt absence of his Lord is the most distressing and insupportable. But often that is mourned over which is a great ground of rejoicing.

And Jesus and his consolations are frequently at hand when we know not where to find him. He takes delight to recognize his relation and hasten to our help. And neither shut doors, slavish fears, nor unbelieving hearts, can hinder his gracious visits. Yea, the stoutest hearts ought to melt in confident believing under the transcendent intimations of his love.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 25. Contain. This is no hyperbole, a figure totally incompatible with the derivation of the Scriptures from 'the Spirit of truth.' To 'contain' a book is not to afford it as an article of furniture, but to retain it in the memory and digest it in the judgment. In this sense, a minute and complete narrative of 'all that Jesus began to do and to teach,' Ac. 1. 1, with all the immediate bearings and effects of every word and action, would, instead of a portable volume suited to every man's time and capacity, have formed a library too voluminous for the leisure and study even of the most learned.—Written. These words form an incontrovertible evidence that the Scriptures (and not unwritten tradition or the church) are the true and infallible rule of faith. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Often repeated, miraculous, and manifest are the proofs of Christ's resurrection. And it is highly criminal to doubt of it after so many satisfactory documents. With what wonders of divine power, condescension, and kindness he shows himself to his people! He is often near them while they know it not, and is better to them than they expect; or even visits them before they look for him. The sight of him powerfully draws out the heart of penitent beholders. And neither danger nor death can restrain their running to him. He delightfully prospers the labours, notices the circumstances, and supplies the wants of all people. But if they have been ashamed of or in any way departed from him, their love to him must be thoroughly tried. Happy are they who can prove it by their superlative esteem of and faithful appeals to himself. And if we know that he first loved us, let our former falls lie heavy on our heart; and let

SEA OF GALILEE—SHOWING VIEWS OF CAPERNAUM. [John, xxi:11.]—
 "Simon Peter went up and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three, and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken." This incident took place on the Sea of Galilee after the resurrection. It is probable that it also occurred at Capernaum, where our Savior made his home after being rejected by His own people at Nazareth. The picture above is a representation of Capernaum as it appears to-day. Broken marble, Corinthian and Doric capitals, weeds, desolation, and the ever-moving and ever-changing Galilean Sea, is all that we see now. The proud Capernaum, that was exalted to heaven, is now left utterly in ruins. Here, in the midst of His old home, the Lord appeared to the disciples after the resurrection.

24 ¶ This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and ^awe know that his testimony is true.

us, without indulging vain curiosity, follow him through sufferings and death.—Without his direction ministers spend themselves in vain in fishing for souls; but under his guidance and influence multitudes are brought to him; nor can their gospel altogether fail. The weakest souls must be equally taken care of as the strongest. Nor can ministers ever truly manifest their love to Jesus without earnest care and labour to feed his lambs and sheep with his gospel provision. And blessed be the Lord that his own oracles have no uncertainties and need no human supplements. On their contents we may safely rest the eternal salvation of our souls.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JOHN.

The young student of the Greek language who attempts, in any degree, to become his own teacher, soon discovers some surprising difference between the style of John and that of the preceding evangelists. He can read his Gospel with comparative ease, while he finds the difficulties of the others nearly insuperable. This simplicity of construction forms a beautiful example of the teaching Spirit 'becoming all things to all men, that he might (instruct) some,' furnishing 'milk to babes,' while abounding in 'strong meat' for them who 'are able to bear it.' C.

The training of St. John under our Lord, his mental characteristics, and the circumstances under which he wrote this Gospel, have been sketched in the introduction. From the moment when, turning from the Baptist, he joined Jesus, he seems never to have left his side. He delighted in the contemplation of that nature which was all love and mercy. He hung with devoted attention on every word which fell from his lips. He endeavoured to fathom every truth set forth in those matchless discourses. In the intimacy of companionship he doubtless asked and prayed until the full light of divine truth flashed upon his mind. From Mary, too, after our Lord on the cross had committed her to his care, John doubtless derived much information. She who had watched her son with mingled affection and wonder from infancy could no doubt communicate to the beloved disciple many of those displays of wisdom, love, and power which she alone had witnessed. John was also impressed more deeply than any of his brethren with the promise of the Holy Spirit given during one of our Lord's last interviews with his disciples:—'But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have done unto you. . . . When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak, and he will show you things to come.' And John appears to have realized, in some respects at least, more remarkably than any of his brethren, the fulfilment of this promise, in the way in which he was able to record Christ's long discourses.

John's subsequent career is prophetically sketched in the close of the Gospel, ch. 21. 20–24. After the ascension John seldom appears in the great events of the church's history until near the close of his life. He was a man of contemplation rather than of action. His mind was in all probability absorbed in the study of the deep mysteries of gospel doctrine. He saw others better adapted for the external work of the church, and he was content, while aiding occasionally by his counsel, Acts 3. 1, 11; 4. 19–23; 8. 14–17. Paul speaks of him as one of the pillars of the church at Jerusalem, Ga. 2. 9. His subsequent career is only dimly shadowed in early church history. He is said to have remained in Judaea till the death of Mary relieved him from his sacred trust. Afterwards he seems to have gone to Ephesus, and to have settled there after the close of Paul's work. When he alone was left of all Christ's disciples, and when the trials of the infant church needed his aid, he came boldly forward as a champion of the truth. False doctrines began to spring up. The humanity of Christ was denied by some; the reality of his divine mission by others. A partial conformity to Judaism was advocated on the one hand; and an unholy alliance with idolatrous worship was tolerated on the other. With all these, and probably other forms of error, the aged apostle had now to battle. His profound knowledge of divine truth was now of advantage, and was set forth with equal clearness and simplicity in his Gospel. An age of controversy is apt to be an age of angry feeling. Theological disputes are generally productive of more bitterness than other disputes. But while John met error boldly, and refuted it fearlessly and effectively, he displayed and inculcated a love and gentleness such as could only be drawn from the heart of Jesus himself. He gave to the church and the world in his writings a divine exemplar of Christian controversy.

While John breathed the very spirit of love—while he affirmed that 'God is love'—that the substance of both Law and Gospel is love, the religion which he defended and developed was yet no mere sentiment. The love which John inculcated and exemplified was a love displayed in obedience to divine law, and in the full reception of divine truth. The character of John has been often greatly misrepresented. Christian art has in some degree contributed to this. 'The youthful feminine form which art has assigned to St. John, has served to remove from our minds the stronger features of his nature. Yet these may not be forgotten, for even in this aspect the eagle is his true symbol. His love was no soft feeling, but a living principle, an absolute devotion to truth, as he had seen and known it in the person of his Lord. He stands forth as the ideal of a thoughtful Christian, relentless against evil, and yet patient with the doubting. He tarried till the Lord came, and left his Gospel as the witness and seal of the accomplishment of the apostolic work.'

John was a close follower, and an ardent and enthusiastic imitator of Jesus. Christ's life, Christ's character, Christ's words, formed the constant subjects of contemplation and study. To him Christ was all in all. He sought wisdom from its highest source; he drew his love from the heart of his loving Master. In John we see the noblest powers employed in the noblest work; we see the highest genius consecrated to God; we see, too, his life-work crowned with the noblest reward. P.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

The Gospel by Luke and the Acts of the Apostles are both dedicated to Theophilus; and as the author of 'The Acts' calls the Gospel his 'former treatise,' there is, therefore, internal evidence, with which all antiquity agrees, that the book of 'Acts' was written by Luke. As it continues to the second year of Paul's imprisonment, it could not have been finished earlier than A.D. 64 or 65. The object of the writer was, evidently, not a complete history of the Christian church during the period which his narrative embraces; for he passes over all the affairs of the church at Jerusalem subsequent to the conversion of Paul; furnishes few records of the labours of any other apostle; while some he never mentions at all. Nor was it his object to write a complete history even of Paul, his companion; for he passes over in silence some of the most remarkable events of his life, such as his journey into Arabia, three of his shipwrecks, and his exposure and perils among the robber hordes of the deserts. His objects were higher than these, however gratifying they might appear to a pious curiosity, and however instructive as examples of devotedness and zeal. The object of Luke was mainly to record the wonderful effusion of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, thus teaching the church that, without the Spirit of God, all other qualifications are impotent; to furnish a few specimens of apostolic preaching; to record some of the principal miracles by which the gospel testimony was confirmed; and to bear witness to the admission of the Gentiles into the Christian community.

This being the last historical book of the Scriptures, it is worthy of remark, that not one of the sacred biographers, from Moses to Luke, ever attempts to produce 'a hero'—a man superior to all his contemporaries—the idol of historic worship! The Bible alone tells truth! Paul is introduced as a guilty murderer! and subsequently to his conversion—though the writer passes no opinion—he faithfully records the fact, and leaves us to judge for ourselves, whether Paul or Barnabas was in error in that 'sharp contention' that separated them in the work of the mission, ch. 15. 39. Yet the Bible produces really great characters! Men devoid of every ambition but to do good! Men capable of sacrificing every hour of ease, every prospect of emolument, and hope of honour; of undergoing every toil, of enduring every persecution, of repaying kindness for every injury, of rejoicing in tribulation, of hoping against hope, of enduring to the end; never depressed by failure, nor rendered vain by success.—Self nothing—Jesus all! Such was Moses—such the prophets—such the apostles; and such, in some measure, must be every one who, 'through faith and patience, would inherit the promises.' C.

CHAPTER I.

1 Christ, preparing his apostles to the beholding of his ascension, gathereth them together into the mount Olivet, commandeth them to expect in Jerusalem the sending down of the Holy Ghost, promiseth after few days to send it: by virtue whereof they should be witnesses unto him, even to the utmost parts of the earth. 10 After his ascension they are warned by two angels to depart, and to set their minds upon his second coming. 12 They accordingly return, and, giving themselves to prayer, choose Matthias apostle in the place of Judas.

THE former^a treatise have I made, O Theophilus, ^bof all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2 Until the day in which he ^cwas taken up, after that he ^dthrough the Holy Ghost ^ehad given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:¹

3 To² whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them ^fforty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the 'kingdom of God:

4 And, being assembled together with ^gthem,² commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for ^hthe promise of the Father, which, saieth he, ye have heard of me.

5 For³ John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together³ they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time ⁱ'restore again the kingdom to Israel?

1 Luke here states the scope and purpose of his Gospel in a few words—Christ's life, acts, and teachings, in so far as these were designed to develop Christianity, and to set an example to the church in every age. He began with the advent, and closed with the ascension. Now he takes up the narrative in order to show the subsequent results.—P.

them to accomplish God's great work on earth. The extent of their field of labour is here indicated. It is no longer limited to the Jews. They are no longer prohibited from entering the territory of the Samaritans. Even the Gentiles are now embraced in the apostles' grand commission.—P.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 6. Restore the kingdom. Not merely by breaking the Roman yoke, but by overturning the Pharisaic or Sadducean oligarchy, and re-establishing the constitutional monarchy of David. This idea of an immediate temporal kingdom still haunted the disciples; and, in prospect, is still the hope of the Jewish nation, unless where, alas! they have become totally infidel. The answer of our Lord (ver. 7) seems clearly to intimate that a national restoration is one of the purposes of Providence, though the date of its accomplishment has not been revealed. C.

Ver. 7. 8. Power. The word translated power in ver. 7 is ἐξουσία. The passage there may be rendered thus: 'which the Father hath reserved in his own disposal,' as things unrevealed.—The word here translated power is δύναμις, signifying miraculous power communicated from God. C.

Ver. 13. Upper room. Some have supposed this 'room' to have been in the temple; no opinion can seem more unnatural. If, in the absence of certainty, conjecture may be indulged, might not our thoughts turn to 'the large upper room furnished' in which our Lord and his disciples partook of the last supper? Lu. 22. 12. C. Ver. 25. His own place. The place suited to him, 'prepared' for him, Mat. 25. 41; the place that, in the face of all warning, he had literally chosen, by choosing covetousness and lies, Col. 3. 5. 1 Co. 6. 9, 10; Mat. 26. 48; Re. 21. 8. wicked' hahus. If Jesus was delivered by 'the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God,' why doth he yet find fault? for who hath resisted his will? God hath said it.

But, still it is questioned, if God 'determined' that the event should come to pass, how could those who fulfilled his will be represented as the authors of sin? This, if really a question, is fair and reasonable; but if a cavil, most worthless and foolish.
God cannot be the author of sin; for God is love, Ja. 1. 13; 1 Ja.

14 ¶ But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel:

17 And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out, in those days, of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

19 And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord, shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, 'The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 ¶ Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

38 Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 ¶ Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

42 And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.

43 And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

44 And all that believed were together, and had all things common;

45 And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.

46 And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, 47 Praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

4. 8. God therefore does not, cannot, 'determine' that men should sin; that is, should become 'wicked.' But God 'fore-knows' that men, of their own rebellious hearts, will sin, will be 'wicked;' and God, as a judge, can only give them up to their own hearts' lusts, and to walk in their own 'counsels,' Ps. 61. 12; Ro. 1. 24, 28. So that while men act freely, the event is 'determined,' because the judgment 'allowing freedom' is fixed and certain. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It was impossible that Jesus, who by obedience unto death had honored his Father's law and justice, should be held a prisoner in the grave.

And glorious are the fruits of his resurrection and exaltation to his Father's right hand. Yea, astonishing is the effusion of the Holy Ghost thereby to qualify his preachers and to awaken hearers.—Quickly he comes to them who, with united hearts, wait and cry for his

NAZARETH FROM THE EAST. [Acts, iii:22.]—We are permitted here to look upon the beautiful little mountain city where lived the prophet the Lord raised up, like unto Moses, but greater than Moses, for He who was prophet was at the same time priest and king. In the valley are the olive trees, whose very names call up Palestine and the East. Rising gradually up the sides of the hill are the white two-story houses, built of stone, and furnishing all that is necessary to make a striking and attractive picture. No one can ever tire of Nazareth. Valleys, mountains, transparent atmosphere, and deep, overbending skies unite with the beautiful stone houses to make a picture worthy the brush of Raphael. The Savior, who grew up here, and who spent so many of the years of His manhood here, is gone, but His spirit lends enchantment to the place.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The rulers of the Jews offended with Peter's sermon, 4 (though thousands of the people were converted that heard the word), imprison him and John. 5 After, upon examination, Peter boldly avouching the lame man to be healed by the name of Jesus, and that by the same Jesus only we must be eternally saved, 13 then command him and John to preach no more in that name, adding also threatening; 23 whereupon the church fleeth to prayer. 31 And God, by moving the place where they were assembled, testified that he heard their prayer: confirming the church with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and with mutual love and charity.

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.³

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And Annas the high-priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high-priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶ Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

98 4:5. Joel 2:28. ch. 2:4.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying, "What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it."

17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye."

20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.²

21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old on whom this miracle of healing was showed.

23 ¶ And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is;

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, "Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?"

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, 28 For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word,

30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.⁴

31 ¶ And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together;

if ministers preach Christ faithfully and successfully, they must expect trouble for it. Rich, full, and free is that salvation for sinful men which is in him alone. It is necessary always to believe and receive it, and in our stations to exhibit and declare it. Excellent is the cause of the gospel; and nothing but absurd rage and overbearing violence can ever oppose it. But in the most violent opposition Jesus can inspire his most cowardly servants with wisdom and courage to make most amazing miracles have been wrought. Marvelous is the wisdom and power of God in making even the most daring wickedness of men the great means of bringing about our salvation! And extensive is the instruction, ample the pardons, gracious the reformation, and abundant the blessings which Jesus Christ bestows on the chief of sinners. What delightful encouragement is this to faith and repentance, that, in his seasons of mercy, we may find rest and refreshment to our souls! What excitement to rejoice in his exaltation, and to wait for his return to judgment!

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—Men who heartily hate one another, often cordially unite in opposition to Christ, his gospel, and his servants. But it is delightful when fierce persecution animates to a prudent zeal for Christ's honour, and when he balances it by the conversion of multitudes of hardened sinners. For and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And^a the multitude of them that believed were of one heart, and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.⁵

33 And^a with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

34 Neither^a was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And^a Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite,⁶ and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

CHAPTER V.

⁵ After that Ananias and Sapphira his wife, for their hypocrisy, at Peter's rebuke had fallen down dead, 12 and that the rest of the apostles had wrought many miracles, 14 to the increase of the faith, 17 the apostles are again imprisoned, 19 but delivered by an angel, bidding them to preach openly to all: 21 when, after their teaching accordingly in the temple, 29 and before the council, 33 they are in danger to be killed; through the advice of Gamaliel, a great counsellor among the Jews, they be kept alive, 40 and are but beaten: for which they glorify God, and cease no day from preaching.

BUT a^a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And^b kept back¹ part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.²

3 But Peter said, Ananias, why^a hath Satan filled thine heart to lie³ to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto^a God.⁴

5 And Ananias, hearing these words, fell an open and bold confession of himself and his truths; and by them he can confound their most potent and learned opposers, and even convince their consciences of the inconceivable advantage of fellowship with him. Easily he restrains the wrath of men, and makes the remainder of it to praise him. And it is manifest that, however despised by men in authority, he is the head and Lord of his church. In every case it is much better to obey God than men. He is the almighty JEHOVAH, the Maker and Governor of all things. He rules the world in the interests of righteousness. All events are a fulfilment of his inspired oracles, and expression of his laws. In every time of need let us therefore address him by solemn prayer. Often he hears and answers in mercy while his people are yet speaking. And if he be with us, we need neither fear nor anxiously care who is against us. He knows every plot and every threatening of our enemies; and his presence and blessing are sufficient to encourage our perseverance in much tribulation. Heavenly is the delight and comfort that his Spirit can produce in our hearts. Yea, he can even make us rejoice in persecution for his sake. And glorify ous is the church when ministers are remarkably faithful and useful, and Christians so knit together as to be ready to give all they have for the relief of their indigent brethren.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 31. To give repentance, by giving time for consideration between the warning and the judgment, as God gave to the world between the preaching of Noah and the coming of the flood, and by presenting and applying, through the Spirit, the only sufficient arguments for repentance, the love, mercy, and free grace of God in Christ Jesus. C. Ver. 36. Josephus places an insurrection under Theudas in the fourth year of the reign of Claudius. But this may be true without any impeachment of the accuracy of Luke, for Theudas was a common name among the Jews; and as there were several insurrections, two may have occurred under a leader of the same name. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is impossible to find a church on earth without tares, or much Christianity without some hypocrisy. Satan's temptations and men's own corruptions, particularly covetousness, easily lead them into lying and falsehood. But most heinous is this in dealing with God, as it is a direct contempt of his all-seeing Spirit. And yet, if Satan fill our heart, he will delude us into it; and even our nearest relations will down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then^a fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear⁵ came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 ¶ And^a by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.)

13 And^a of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And^a believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets,⁶ and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.⁷

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

17 ¶ Then^a the high-priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with indignation,⁸

18 And^a laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

23 Saying, ^{The} prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

27 And when they had brought them, ^{they} set them before the council: and the high-priest asked them,

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—It is hard to manage much business without much inconvenience, and even some reflections. But it is shameful that money matters should occasion discontents among church-members, who are otherwise of one heart and soul.—And to prevent this, it becomes us to use the strictest impartiality in the management of the money, and all other matters of churches or states. It is a great sin and reproach to many Christian congregations that the office of deacon, so clearly appointed in Scripture, should be so much contemned. And it is necessary that every church-officer be intelligent, pious, and prudent; and that church-members be always required to choose their own officers, small or great. No

⁵ Peter here takes up the very language of our Lord himself, who said to his apostles before his ascension regarding life, sufferings, death, and resurrection, ^{Ye} are witnesses of these things (Lu. 24. 48). They were charged with the very duties to which Christ had appointed them; and the Holy Spirit, by strengthening them, filling them with divine power, imparting to them divine wisdom—was a joint-witness with them.—P.

⁶ Gamaliel was one of the most celebrated and honoured of the Jewish rabbins. Though a strict Jew he was liberal in his views, and did much to ameliorate the rigour of the Pharisaic traditions. He was grandson of Hillel, and is still better known as the instructor of Paul.—P.
* False systems of religion have again and again succeeded in the world, and still continue, either where they have superseded Christianity, or where they have corrupted it. Does not this experience, therefore, contradict the doctrine of Gamaliel? No.

Two circumstances, totally wanting in Christianity, have always characterized the false systems that have been successful in the world:—1. Every such system has flattered existing prejudices, adopting existing opinions and practices, or ministered to the baser passions of men. All these Christianity rejected, opposed, or mortified. 2. Every such system has had founders possessing such worldly learning, or employing such worldly means as obtained them influence with worldly men. Christianity had none of these means: its preachers were poor unlearned Galilean fishermen; its efforts despised; and their only visible means, preaching boldly, bearing patiently, and praying continually. The eventual success of such a system, sustained by such inadequate means, Gamaliel did, therefore, rightly assume as a certain evidence of its divine origin.—C.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The apostles, desirous to have the poor regarded for their bodily sustenance, as also careful themselves to dispense the word of God, the food of the soul, 3 appoint the office of deaconship to seven chosen men. 5 Of whom Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost, is one. 12 Who is taken of those, whom he confounded in disputing, 13 and afterwards falsely accused of blasphemy against the law and the temple.

AND in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians¹ against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, ^{It} is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.²

3 Wherefore, brethren, ^{look} ye out among you³ seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 But⁴ we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 ¶ And the saying pleased the whole mul-and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For ^{before} these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom ^a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed⁷ him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After⁸ this man, rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: ^{he} also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, ^{Refrain} from these men, and let them alone: ^{for} if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought.

39 But ^{if} it be of God, ye cannot ^{overthrow} it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed: ^{and} when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 ¶ And they departed from the presence of the council, ^{rejoicing} that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And⁴ daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

patrons or presbyteries can pretend more fitness to choose for others than the inspired apostles, who refused it. It is dangerous and awful when ministers give themselves to idle chat, unprofitable reading, unnecessary sleep, or civil business, instead of their important ministrations and fervent prayer. But when gospel ministers are faithful and diligent, God often works by them miracles of grace in the conversion of sinners, even of profane clergymen, whose spiritual titude: and they chose ^aStephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and ^bPhilip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and ^cNicolas a proselyte of Antioch:

6 Whom they set before the apostles: and when^k they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.⁴

7 ¶ And^l the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedientⁿ to the faith.

8 ¶ And^o Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 Then^p there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines,⁵ and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And^q they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then^r they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words^s against Moses, and against God.

12 And^t they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,

13 And^u set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 For^v we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs⁷ which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, ^wsaw his face as it had been the face of an angel.⁸

CHAPTER VII.

1 Stephen, permitted to answer to the accusation of blasphemy, 2 sheweth that Abraham worshipped God rightly, and how God did choose the fathers, 20 before Moses was born, and before the tabernacle and temple were built: 31 that Moses himself witnessed of Christ. 44 and that all outward ceremonies were ordained according to the heavenly pattern, to last but for a time: 51 reprehending their rebellion, and murdering of Christ, the Just One, whom the prophets foretold should come into the world. 54 Whereupon they stoned him to death, who commendeth his soul to Jesus, and humbly prayeth for them.

THEN said the high-priest, ^aAre these things so?

2 And he said, ^bMen, brethren, and fathers, hearken;¹ The^c God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, ^dwhen he was in Mesopotamia,² before he dwelt in Charran,

3 And said unto him, ^eGet thee out of thy

5 Stephen's speech was an apology (1) for his own conduct, and (2) for his faith. He was charged with breaking the Mosaic law; he shows that he was honouring and fulfilling its country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee.

4 Then⁹ came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And^h he gave him none inheritance³ in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, ⁷That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.⁴

7 And ^kthe nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and ^lserve me in this place.

8 And^m he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve ⁿpatriarchs:

9 ¶ And^o the patriarchs, moved with ^penvy, sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 Now^p there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But^q when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second ^rtime Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then^s sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, ^tthreescore and fifteen souls.⁸

15 So^u Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers, 16 And were carried over into Sychem,⁹ and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham¹ bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.

17 ¶ But^v when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, case is peculiarly desperate. But, alas! how maliciously carnal men set themselves against Christ and his gospel, and readily charge its peculiar doctrines with blasphemy! And none are apt to be more inveterate enemies of truth than empty professors. No spirit of wisdom, no miracles, can move those who, instead of Scripture and reason, fly to calumny and violence, and who can falsely witness, or suborn others so to do, against those whom God signally owns and honours.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 16. Here are two difficulties:—(1) According to Ge. 33. 19 and Jos. 24. 32, the sepulchre of Sychem was bought by Jacob, and not by Abraham. (2) Jacob was buried, not in Sychem, but in Machpelah, before Mamre, Ge. 49. 30; 50. 13. To reconcile the first, it is generally admitted by expositors, that 'Abraham' has, by the oversight of a transcriber, been substituted for 'Jacob'; but while nearly all MSS. have 'Abraham,' and none 'Jacob,' the substitution of 'Jacob' seems totally unauthorized. May not both difficulties be solved by filling up the ellipses thus:—'But Jacob went down into Egypt, and died there, he and our fathers; and they were all carried which Abraham had purchased, for a sum of money, and (they the fathers) in the tomb that Jacob had purchased from the sons of Emmor, the father of Sychem.' A similar construction, in which the nouns are all placed in the beginning, and the verbs in the end of the sentences, may still be frequently found in legal documents and in Latin epitaphs. And to the Jews, who were perfectly familiar with the history of their fathers, the statement of Stephen would thus be understood. C.

Ver. 35. The object of this statement is to show, that as the refusal of Moses as a ruler and judge was no evidence against his divine legation, so the refusal of Jesus as a Saviour was no evidence against his personal dignity and authority. C.

Ver. 59. The word 'God' is not in the original, but is erroneously supplied by the translators. From comparing this passage with Re. 22. 20, it will be evident that the dying prayer of the noble proto-martyr was addressed directly to the Lord Jesus. Which prayer, compared with that of our Lord himself, Lu. 23. 34, furnishes an evidence of the Godhead of Christ which nothing but blinded and hardened prejudice can possibly resist. C.

REFLECTIONS.—If we are called to account for our faith and hope in Christ, let the oracles of God be our sole defence: they all relate to him. In them he is represented as the God of glory; as the angel JEHOVAH who appeared to the patriarchs; and as the worker of

THE VALLEY OF SHECHEM. [Acts, vii:16.]—Set in the midst of olive groves, gardens and orchards, and refreshed and made productive by as many as 80 springs, Shechem enjoys advantages of a natural character hardly equaled by any other town in Palestine. It was to this place that Abram came when he first entered Canaan. For we are told in Genesis, xii:6, that he came “unto the place of Sichem.”

Thus Shechem is the oldest town in Palestine of which we have any authentic history, dating back in the distant past as far as 4,000 years. Here Jacob bought land and took up his abode; here Joseph came in search of his brethren on the occasion when they sold him to the Ishmaelites at Dothan; and here the law was given to Israel. There are about 15,000 inhabitants here today, and it is a prosperous town for the East.

THE ISLAND RHODA (RODA) — WHERE THE CHILD MOSES WAS CONCEALED.
 [Acts, vii:21.]—"And when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son."—Acts, vii:21. We are told that the mother of Moses took an ark of bulrushes and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put her child into it, and laid the ark with the child in the flags by the brink of the Nile.

It has been supposed that this place on the Nile was on the Island of Rhoda. Every tourist who goes to Cairo will have his attention called to this beautiful island in the Nile as the point in the river where Moses was concealed. The boats we see are wheat boats which have come from far into the interior of Egypt, loaded with wheat to sell in Cairo. The island is in the western suburbs of Cairo.

18 Till^a another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtilly with our kindred, and evil-entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 In^a which time Moses was born, and was exceeding fair,² and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And^a when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 And^a Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.³

23 And^a when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 For^a he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but they understood not.

26 And^b the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst the Egyptian yesterday?

29 Then^a fled Moses at this saying; and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And^a when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sina⁵ an angel of the Lord⁶ in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet; for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

PILLARS IN SAMARIA—BUILT BY HEROD. [ACTS, viii:5.]—We read in the I. Kings, xvi:23, 24, that the hill known as Samaria was purchased by King Omri from Shemer. And in this way it doubtless came by its name. Ahab, the son of Omri, lived here with his wife Jezebel, daughter of the king of Sidon. Here Ahab erected a temple on the summit of the hill of Samaria to the Phoenician god Baal.—Kings, xvi:31, 32. This temple was destroyed, we learn from II. Kings, x:17, 28, by Jehu. Elisha the prophet lived here a part of his life, and many of his wonderful actions are associated with this place. The pillars we see in the picture were built, it is supposed, by Herod, for he built a temple here in honor of Augustus, the emperor of Rome. The limestone columns stand now in the midst of the wheat fields.

19 Saying, "Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost."

20 But Peter said unto him, "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money."

21 Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.⁸

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedness; and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee:

23 For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness,⁹ and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, "Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me."

25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 ¶ And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza,¹ which is desert.²

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning; and, sitting in his chariot, read Esaias the prophet.

29 Then the Spirit³ said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, "Understandest thou what thou readest?"

31 And he said, "How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him."

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, "He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth."

ought speedily and solemnly to devote ourselves to him and his service. But, alas! through ambition, covetousness, or other vicious inclinations, many profane the seals of his covenant, and publicly pretend to be his when they are not; and from mercenary views, many are too readily admitted as members or officers in the church. Dreadful will it be if a Saviour perceive them at last in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity! in an unconverted state! Yet it is to be feared that many ask, and rely on the prayers of others, who never heartily pray for themselves.—But no awful discovery of hypocrites must discourage ministers from going on with their work. While wrath lights on the heads of dissemblers, the earnest shall be instructed and strengthened in their most holy faith; and by following the means of grace which they have, they may hope to meet with a blessing, or even to receive means more eminent. If we be humble searchers of God's Word, and often call ourselves to an account whether we understand it, he will send us an interpreter. And much of Jesus Christ may be seen in the Scriptures, if our mind be enlightened by his Spirit. Yea, nothing so affects the conscience as the gospel record concerning him.—What strange methods God sometimes takes to send the gospel to nations answerable to his own promises! Short-lived is the delightful fellowship of Christians on earth. But if Jesus and his Spirit go with each, all may go on their way rejoicing.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 20. The Grecians. Paul, upon two accounts, made choice of 'the Grecians' as the special objects of his missionary efforts:—(1) Because they had been his unhappy assistants in the martyrdom of Stephen. (2) Because he was intimately acquainted with Grecian literature, and therefore better 34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more:⁶ and he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found⁷ at Azotus:⁸ and passing through, he preached in all the cities, till he came to Cesarea.⁹

CHAPTER IX.

1 Saul, going towards Damascus, 4 is stricken down to the earth, 10 is called to the apostleship, 18 and is baptized by Ananias. 20 He preacheth Christ boldly. 23 The Jews lay wait to kill him: 29 so do the Grecians, but he escapeth both. 31 The church having rest, Peter healeth Eneas of the palsy, 36 and restoreth Tabitha to life.

AND Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high-priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that, if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?²

5 And he said, "Who art thou, Lord?" And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

fitted to argue with them than any other of the apostles. For while God bestowed supernatural, he always made use of the natural and educational endowments of his servants. C.

Ver. 31. Rest. Rather, 'peace.' This lull in the storm of persecution, so far as natural causes can be assigned, is accounted for by referring it to the time when Caligula attempted to place his statue in the temple at Jerusalem—an event which threw the Jews into such consternation that they ceased to think of the Christians, or perhaps were willing to borrow countenance and aid from them in opposing that image-worship that was equally hateful to both. It matters nothing which! Blessed be the Lord! Dorcas hath still many daughters who continue to 'make the widows' hearts to sing for joy.—Note. A religion that does not call forth, or permit, or encourage, the active benevolence of woman, cannot be the religion of the apostles! While ostentation of charity must be avoided, benevolence of heart must be cultivated. C.

GATEWAY TO DAMASCUS. [Acts, ix:3.]—"As he journeyed he came near Damascus; and suddenly there shined around about him a light from heaven." In the picture we have a gateway in the wall of Damascus looking toward Jerusalem. Whether St. Paul entered this city through the same place or not we have no means of knowing. It is true, however, that he entered from the same side. The roadway just before passing through the gate, leads over a bridge, under which flows, through a canal, one of the many streams of the Abana river. It is strange to think that notwithstanding St. Paul entered Damascus nearly 2,000 years ago, that the city then was 2,000 years old. This city has witnessed well-nigh all the history the human race has made. The location seems to have been intended for a city.

THE STREET CALLED STRAIGHT—DAMASCUS—INTO WHICH THE LORD COMMANDED ANANIAS TO GO AND INQUIRE FOR SAUL. [Acts, ix:11.]—The Lord appeared unto Ananias, a good man of Damascus, in a vision, and commanded him to go into a street called Straight, that he might inquire at the house of Judas for Saul of Tarsus. This was just after Saul had been stricken down on the road near Damascus, by the great light from heaven, and by the sense of the enormous sin he was committing in persecuting the disciples of the crucified Christ. Just as it probably was two thousand years ago, so to-day the street called Straight is the leading one in Damascus. It is one of the streets in the city through which a carriage can pass. It is also the leading street for trade. Along this street St. Paul walked many times.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—It is an honour for persons of all ranks to be devout and liberal, and to worship God in their families as well as in secret. And how does this Roman soldier shame many pro-

REFLECTIONS.—Often it happens that Christians may have gone to the most fearful lengths before their conversion, yet through grace they are at length led to Christ. Yea, great is their madness, their malice, against the Redeemer; and all at their own infinite hazard. How irrefragable are the proofs of our Saviour's exaltation to his Father's right hand! He has appeared and spoken from heaven with divine majesty and glory; and through an authoritative use of his name, by faith, has healed the sick and raised the dead even the dead in trespasses and sins. Victorious and divine also is his grace. It leads the most daring sinner into trembling and astonishment; stops his career of wickedness, and makes him all concern, all resignation, all obedience to his will; gives him a heart to pray, and turns the furious persecutor into a zealous preacher of the faith which he had once destroyed. No wonder that both saints and sinners are amazed at the marvellous change. Through great distress and darkness the good are sometimes brought into their blessed state, to their spiritual comforts, and remarkable usefulness in the church. But the miraculous convert is gradually emboldened and strengthened, to the silencing and confounding of every opposer. With great caution ought church-members to be admitted; but never should those whom Christ has marked with his grace and truth be rejected.—It is impossible for Christ ever to want instruments for carrying on his work. If he find them not here he does there, and can easily take away all their objections and discouraging difficulties. Nor

SITE OF THE HOUSE OF TABITHA—SHOWING ALSO PLACE OF BURIAL. [Acts, ix:36.]—"Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and alms-deeds which she did." The site of the house of Tabitha in Joppa is always pointed out to travelers as one of the places of interest. Joppa almost ranks with Damascus in being one of the oldest cities in the world. Pliny says it existed before the flood, and Josephus says it was founded by the Phœnicians. Strabo says that it was here that Andromeda was exposed to the sea monster, and in Pliny's time the chains were said to be pointed out in the rocks to which she was bound. Joppa is interesting to Christians now, however, because it was the home of Tabitha, whose charity Christ maketh thee whole; arise, and make thy bed. "And he arose immediately.

35 And^b all that dwelt at Lydda and Saron^c saw him, and turned to the Lord.

36 ¶ Now there was at 'Joppa' a certain disciple named Tabitha,^d which by interpretation is called Dorcas;^e this woman was 'full of good works and alms-deeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom, when they had washed, they laid her in an 'upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa,^f and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay¹ to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose, and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him ^hweeping, and showing 'the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them.

40 Butⁱ Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed; and turning him to the body, said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, he presented her alive.

42 And^k it was known throughout all Joppa; and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa,² with one Simon a tanner.

CHAPTER X.

1 Cornelius, a devout man, being commanded by an angel, sendeth for Peter: 11 who by a vision, 15, 20 is taught not to despise the Gentiles. 34 As he preacheth Christ to Cornelius and his company, 44 the Holy Ghost falleth on them, 48 and they are baptized.

THERE was^a a certain man in Cesarea,¹ called Cornelius, a centurion² of the band called the Italian band,

2 A^b devout³ man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.⁴

3 He^c saw in a vision evidently, about the ninth hour of the day,⁵ an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, ^ahe was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come^e up for a memorial⁶ before God.

5 And^e now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 He^h lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, fessed Christians who, on the most trifling pretences, neglect the worship of their Maker, who scarcely know what it is to observe family devotion, and who take no more pains in the religious education of children and servants than if they were beasts! God takes great delight to increase their knowledge and comfort who sincerely practise what they know, and earnestly ask his further direction. And though our best actions cannot render our persons acceptable to God, yet, if they are agreeable to his perfections and law, he graciously rewards them.—It is by men, not by angels, that we must expect to be taught.—With tender care God removes the conscientious scruples of his servants, and prepares them beforehand for their duty. And never are we more ready to receive his direction than when we are engaged in solemn prayer. Cheerfully therefore ought all, especially ministers, to go whithersoever he, in his providence, calls them, hoping for success, whatever impediments lie in their way. Gospel preachers ought to be gladly received and kindly entertained; and as many friends as we can influence be encouraged to share their instructions. With the deepest whose house is by the sea-side: he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, ^hhe sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey,⁷ and drew nigh unto the city, ⁱPeter went up upon the house-top⁸ to pray, about the sixth hour.⁹

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into ^aa trance,

11 And saw ^bheaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been ^aa great sheet, knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth;

12 Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, 'Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten any thing that is common¹ or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, ²What God hath cleansed,² that call not thou common.

16 This was done ³thrice: ^aand the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 ¶ Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men ^bwhich were sent from Cornelius had made inquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate, 18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on ^c'the vision, ^c'the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 Arise^e therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing: for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22 And they said, 'Cornelius the centurion, a just man,³ and one that feareth God, and of ⁴'good report among all the nation of the Jews, reverence and attention ought we to hear and believe the truths of God, on which depend our eternal salvation and his glory. And with their utmost care ought preachers to make known Jesus Christ in his person, offices, debasement, and glory, as the source and mean of our whole salvation, and as our great Judge, to whom we must quickly give an account. It is a delightful season when the Holy Ghost, with supernatural influence, attests the truths preached, and applies them to the hearts of hearers. Cheerfully they then surrender themselves to Jesus, and avow their

HOUSE OF ST. PETER, JAFFA—WHERE PETER PRAYED, FELL INTO A TRANCE AND SAW HEAVEN OPEN. [Acts, x:32.]—This is called the house of St. Peter here, but it is really the house of Simon, the tanner. "Send therefore to Joppa and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon, a tanner, by the seaside; who when he cometh shall speak unto thee."—Acts, x:32. This house of Simon, the tanner, is still pointed out. This, with the house of Tabitha, make up the two most interesting objects of historic interest in Joppa. Here it was that Peter learned the great lesson that God was no respecter of persons, but thought as much of a Gentile as of a Jew. He here learned that in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him.

was warned from God by an holy angel, to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cesarea. And Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 ¶ And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.⁴

26 But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour: and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house; and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing,

31 And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.⁵

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter: he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner, by the seaside; who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee: and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶ Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

c These were those Jewish converts to Peter before, were upon mission (ch. 10. 13. 34), and like his companions

before the Holy Ghost was poured out upon the Gentiles (ch. 10.

45), still adhered to the law of Moses.—

Note. This unwilling-ness to receive the Gentiles into the church of Christ furnishes a very striking argument for the divine origin of Christianity, so far as it testifies to the disinterested sincerity of its propagators. For had it been a false religion, a cunninglydevised fable, its first propagators would have com-passed sea and land to make a proselyte;

and like the missionaries of Rome in Paraguay and China, would have yielded

every accommodation to the opinions, prejudices, and practices of their pupils, instead of which we find them not only refusing converts upon any but the most stringent terms, and contending with their very leaders, when they appeared to relax their exclusive discipline.—C.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, ¹John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 Forasmuch then as ²God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, what was I, ²that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, ²they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, ²Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

19 ¶ Now² they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as far as ²Phenice,⁵ and Cyprus,⁶ and Antioch,⁷ preaching the word ²to none but unto the Jews only.

8 On comparing this statement with ch. 10. 14, the difference of the words seems so great as to lead to the doctrine of ideal instead of verbal inspiration, inasmuch as the second edition (50 to speak) corresponds with the first in ideas, but not in words. The verbal difference, however, may be easily accounted for, on the principle of verbal inspiration, when it is recollected that the sheet was let down three times, and that one reply of Peter may be accurately given upon one of these occasions—another reply different from the former, yet as accurate, upon a second. Antioch, spake unto the ²Grecians,⁹ ²preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And² the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and ²they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch.

23 Who, when he came, and ²had seen the grace of God,¹ was glad, and ²exhorted them all, that with ²purpose of ²heart they would ²cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a ²good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then² departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul.²

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year ²they assembled themselves ³with the church, and ²taught much people. And the disciples were called ²Christians first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came ²prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them, named ²Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar.

29 Then the disciples, every man ²according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, and sent it to the ²elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

CHAPTER XII.

1 King Herod persecuteth the Christians, killeth James, and imprisoneth Peter; whom an angel delivereth upon the prayers of the church. 20 In his pride, taking to himself the honour due to God, Herod is stricken by an angel, and dieth miserably. 24 After his death, the word of God prospereth.

NOW about that time, Herod¹ the king stretched forth his hands² to ²vex certain of the church.³

2 And he ²killed James⁴ the brother of John with the sword.

3 And ²because he saw it pleased the Jews,

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 26. The disciples were called Christians, &c. Hitherto, by the Gentiles, they had been called 'Jews;' and by the Jews, 'Nazarenes,' 'Galileans,' &c. Whether the name was taken by the disciples themselves, or given by others, does not appear. That it was not given in derision seems probable from the use of it by King Agrippa, Ac. 26. 28; and that the disciples were not ashamed of it is evident from its use by Peter, 1. Pe. 4. 16. C.

Ver. 28. The word translated 'world' is one of very indefinite application—sometimes describing the lands inhabited by the Greeks, sometimes those jointly inhabited by Greeks and Romans, sometimes confined to Palestine and its immediate dependencies, as Lu. 2. 1, 3; 21. 26.—Note, Four famines are recorded in the reign of Claudius, but none of them general. Indeed, among the merciful dispensations of Providence, there is one very remarkable, that a famine is seldom, if ever, universal; but while one country is visited with drought or deluged with rain, other, and even neighbouring countries, are blessed with fair weather and fruitful harvests, by which the wants of other lands may be supplied. This seems to have been the case in the present instance, as the people of Antioch were able to afford a liberal collection to relieve their brethren during the famine at Jerusalem. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Delightful are the tidings of sinners receiving and being converted by the gospel of Christ. The salvation of souls, the honour of Christ, and the glory of God are hereby highly promoted. And it is strange that even saints should be sometimes prejudiced, when their enemies, or persons of detested characters, are made partakers of the same spiritual blessings as themselves—that rash censure should so often drop from gracious lips, and godlike charity should be reproached as looseness in religion! But ministers must bear with the weak; and though no unreasonable prejudice should ever hinder the execution of their commission, they should be always ready to clear their conduct to scrupulous minds. And every Christian also ought gladly to hear and receive anything that may tend to remove his prejudices.—What! are we to withstand God, who distributes his favour as is best, and overrules the fury of persecutors for the spread of the gospel and conversion of sinners? Thrice happy are they who show willingly that repentance which manifests spiritual life received, and prepares them for the eternal life promised hereafter.—When his Spirit and power attend the preached gospel, multitudes believe and are turned to the Lord, and cleave to him with fixed purpose of heart. And with alacrity and diligence do ministers then attend their increasing work. Delightful is the name, and great the honour, to possess the privileges and tempers of CHRISTIANS; and especially to act up to the profession and obligations included in the character! Happy had it been for the church if no other character had ever marked the followers of Christ. With harmony in the truth, with holiness and order, ought such to hold fellowship one with another; and with great cheerfulness should they supply one another's wants, none of which can take place without the approval of God. Yea, he sometimes wisely permits calamities to his people, for the trial, exercise, and improvement of their own or others' faith, love, and self-denied obedience, and for the removal of groundless differences among them.

CHAPTER XII. REFLECTIONS.—Whether should he proceeded further to take ^aPeter also. (^eThen were the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And ^awhen he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions^b of soldiers, to keep him; intending after Easter^c to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer^d was made ^awithout ceasing^e of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have ^abrought him forth, the ^asame night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains,^b and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, ^athe angel of the Lord^d came upon him, and a light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And^d his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; ^aand wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but ^athought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city, ^awhich opened to them of his own accord; and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, ^athat the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath ^adelivered me out of the hand of Herod, and ^afrom all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John,^d whose surname was Mark; where ^amany were gathered together praying.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken,^a named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, ^aThou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is ^ahis angel.^b

16 But Peter continued knocking:^a and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Paul and Barnabas are chosen to go to the Gentiles. 7 Of Sergius Paulus, and Elymas the sorcerer. 14 Paul preacheth at Antioch, that Jesus is Christ. 42 The Gentiles believe: 45 but the Jews gain-say and blaspheme: 46 whereupon they turn to the Gentiles. 48 As many as were ordained to life believe.

NOW there^a were in the church that was at Antioch, certain ^bprophets and teachers; as ^aBarnabas, and Simeon that was called ^aNiger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, ^awhich had been brought up with ^aHerod^b the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they ^aministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said,^a Separate^a me Barnabas we here most admire the wickedness of men in promoting, or the wisdom of God in overruling, the persecutions of his church? Alas! what selfishness, pride, rashness, and cruelty, to murder one of the best, the most useful of men! And infernal the malice to take pleasure in it! But men-pleasers will lead themselves at last into the greatest guilt; and success in one sin will embolden them to commit another. The united and fervent prayers of the saints will prove in the end too hard for all that oppose them. If God bestow his Spirit of grace and supplication, to make intercession with groanings which cannot be uttered, deliverance is at hand. And in their extremity, though often not till then, he will rise up for their help. And if ordinary means cannot avail for their preservation, he will work miracles for them. Nay, even by ordinary means, he can hide them from their most inveterate foes. But proud persecutors quickly meet with the living God. The prudent submission of neighbours, and the servile flattery of friends, but lift them up, that their destruction may be the more terrible. God seasonably cuts them off in the midst of their pomp and grandeur, and makes their fall, as well as their fury, subservient to the propagation of the gospel.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 5. Salamis. A city on the east side of Cyprus—not to be confounded with the island of Salamis, so famous in Grecian history as the scene of a memorable sea-fight and victory. This city attained to great eminence, but its very site has been swept away by the sea. C.

Ver. 9. Saul appears to have been his Hebrew, and Paul his Roman name; which, from this time onwards, the evangelist uses, as he had now become a preacher of the gospel to the Gentiles. C.

Ver. 29. And laid him in a sepulchre. This statement seems to disagree with Jn. 19. 38, &c., in which, as well as in the other evangelists, his sepulture is ascribed to Joseph of Arimathea and his other disciples. The difference may easily be removed by the most simple and natural supposition, that some of the Pharisees who took so deep and malignant an interest in securing and watching the tomb, Mat. 27. 62-66, had also taken an insulting and triumphant part in the funeral procession and act of sepulture. C.

Ver. 33. This day have I begotten thee—that is, from the dead, Ro. 1.4, even as every Christian is said to be 'begotten' on the day of his conversion, of his spiritual resurrection, 1 Co. 4. 15; Phil. 1. 10; 1 Pe. 1. 3; 1 Jn 5. 1, 18. But the address does not ascribe his Sonship to his resurrection, for he had already been acknowledged as 'Son' by a voice from heaven—by his disciples on earth; and he himself had openly asserted the title before the and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And ^{when} they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.⁵

4 So they, ^{being} sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia;⁶ and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God ⁱⁿ the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also ^{John} ^{to} their minister.

6 ¶ And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos,⁸ they found a certain ^{sorcerer}, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Barjesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) ^{withstood} them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,⁹) filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, ^O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness,¹ wilt thou not cease ^{to} pervert the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, ^{the} hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy,² when³ he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

Jews, Mat. 3. 17; 16. 16; Jn. 10. 36. Besides which, the eternity of the Father implies the eternity of the Son, he being described as 'that eternal Life that was with the Father,' 1 Jn. 1. 2, and to whom (as Son) the Father saith, 'Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever,' Ps. 45. 6, 7, and, 'Thou, Lord (JEHOVAH), in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands,' Ps. 102. 12, 25; He. 1. 8, 10, C.

Ver. 35. Of 'the Holy One of God' (Jesus Christ) it is expressly declared that he 'should not see corruption.' Wherefore, it is impossible the doctrine of transubstantiation can be true: for while that doctrine asserts that a piece of bread becomes, by what is called 'consecration,' the very body, and blood, and soul, and divinity of Christ, it admits that that same transubstantiated bread (body, &c.) may, and often does, see corruption. Wherefore, because it sees corruption, it cannot be the body of Christ. See ver. 37. C.

Ver. 39. Justification by the law of Moses is simply this: 'He that doeth these things shall live by them,' Ro. 10. 5. By that law, therefore, no sinner could ever be justified; that is, pardoned, and accepted as righteous before God. But 'being justified by faith in Jesus Christ,' we have peace with God, 'having redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of our sins,' being made, through grace, 'accepted in the Beloved,' Ro. 5. 1; Ep. 1. 6, 7. C.

Ver. 48. The word translated 'ordained,' or its immediate cognates, occurs also Mat. 28. 16; Lu. 7. 8; Ac. 13. 2; 22. 10; 28. 23; Ro. 13. 1; 1 Co. 15. 16. Taking the examples in order, six unquestionably signify 'appointed,' or 'constituted,' by authority or decision of another, a superior. The last alone appears to signify 'self-devoted,' but that must still be under the power of the Spirit of God, 1 Co. 12. 6, 11; Phi. 2. 13, so that no other conclusion can be drawn but that 'believing' and 'eternal life' are alike the gifts of God, one combined with the act of man, the other absolutely. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Important is the work of preaching the gospel, and absolutely necessary for it is the direction of God's Spirit and providence. He qualifies his servants for it, calls them to it, and directs and succeeds them in it; and with pleasure and courage they may set about it if satisfied of their divine call. But Satan and his instruments will certainly oppose them in it with great warmth and earnestness, especially if great sinners and persons in power appear to be converted by it. Great will be their subtilty and mischievous ardour in opposing the gospel—the right ways of the Lord. All the arts of sorcery and infidelity; all the fury that blind zeal, temporal interests, and envy can inspire; all the powers of this world, are stirred up to oppress it. But no weapon formed against Zion shall prosper; for under the influence of the Holy Ghost the word shall the more spread and be glorified. Very important are the tidings it brings us concerning the promised Saviour; for whose being born, crucified, and raised from the dead, according to the ancient oracles of God, all former dispensations towards Israel but paved the way.—By infinitely wise and seasonable advances the knowledge of Jesus Christ, and a full redemption through him, spread and prevailed in the world. Thrice happy are they who receive him as the light of life and propitiation for sins. From eternity he was the slain lamb of God. In time they are justified through their living faith, even from crimes for which the ceremonial laws allowed no expiation. They are endowed with the presence, supplies, and consolations of the Holy Ghost, and enabled to continue in the faith, profession, and obedience of the gospel, notwithstanding the most cruel persecution.—If among these converts some be remarkable for sense, others for stupid idolatries, all marks the wisdom and power of gospel grace.—But, alas! great is their sin and danger

13 ¶ Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia;³ and ^{John} departing from them returned to Jerusalem.

14 But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch⁴ in Pisidia,⁵ and ^{went} into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and sat down.

15 And after ^{the} reading of the law and the prophets, the ^{rulers} of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, ^{Ye} men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and ^{beckoning} with his hand, said, ^{Men} of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience.

17 The^b God of this people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, ^{and} with an high arm brought he them out of it.

18 And^a about the time of forty years³ suffered⁷ he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And ^{when} he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chanaan, he divided their land to them by lot.

20 And after that, ^{he} gave unto them judges, about the space of four hundred and fifty⁸ years, until Samuel the prophet.

21 And^b afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.⁹

22 And^c when he had removed him, he ruised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.¹

23 Of^d this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus:

who, notwithstanding their visible relation to him, reject the Redeemer, and set themselves to reproach his servants, his truths, and ways. They thrust the gospel and eternal life from themselves, and provoke God to cast them off with sorrow into everlasting ruin. Take heed, my soul, to hear only such preachers as the Holy Ghost has qualified and regularly placed in their office. Let no station make me think myself above the gospel; and let no sinfulness make me reckon myself below it. Let reading and hearing of God's Word be my constant delight. And let me carefully observe all providences in connection with Christ. Regarding the word of salvation he hath sent, and receiving the sure mercies he hath given, let me serve my generation according to the will of God, and then fall asleep in the Lord.—If I am justified, let me manifest it by my good works. If I have grace implanted in my heart, let me continue therein. If I am benefited by ministers, let me love and cleave to them. And if for Jesus' sake I am tossed to and fro, let his comforts delight my soul.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—God plainly testifies his own being, life, patience, goodness, power, and wisdom, to the heathen world in the works of creation and providence. And even while, by their perverse manners, they abuse the light of their consciences, he graciously gives them the necessities and delights of outward life. Surely even these his common favours should attract their love to him. And, alas! great is their sin and misery who, being left to their own lusts and imaginations, put vanity and devils as 24 When* John had first preached, before his coming, the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel.

25 And as John fulfilled his course, he said, Whom* think ye that I am? I am not he. But, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men* and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath-day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But God raised him from the dead:

31 And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, 33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure mercies² of David.

35 Wherefore he saith also in another psalm, Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, after he had served³ his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 Be⁴ it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware, therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: for I work a work⁶ in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶ And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles⁷ besought that these words might be preached to them the next sabbath.⁸

43 Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 ¶ And the next sabbath-day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy,⁹ and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles.¹

47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.²

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 ¶ But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

52 And the disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Paul and Barnabas are persecuted from Iconium. 8 At Lustra Paul healeth a cripple, whereupon they are reputed as gods. 19 Paul is stoned. 21 They pass through divers churches, confirming the disciples in faith and patience. 26 Returning to Antioch, they report what God had done with them.

AND it came to pass in Iconium,¹ that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude, both of the Jews and also of the Greeks,² believed.

2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the for their further edification and establishment, and in compassion to the snares and troubles through which they must pass into the heavenly state. In the most solemn manner, by prayer and fasting, ought ministers to be set apart to their work. And with pleasure and hope, labour and diligence, should they spend and be spent in the conversion of sinners and edification of saints. And though they ought to avoid suffering as isters.—Inconstant and worthless is the applause of the multitude. To-day they admire preachers as gods; to-morrow they persecute and murder them as miscreants. But God's testimony to his word, in external and internal operations, is sufficient to overcome all opposition. With wisdom, care, and love, he forms his people into a church; and by their own choice provides them pastors and teachers after his own heart,

THE TEMPLE OF JUPITER OLYMPUS, ATHENS. [Acts, xiv:12.]—It is almost impossible for us to understand in our time what great obstacles the early disciples had to overcome in preaching the gospel. We can get some idea of the tremendous hold the heathen gods had upon the popular imagination of the time, by considering the magnitude and splendor of the temples erected in their honor and for their worship. We have in the above picture three columns, one fallen and two standing, which formed a part of the temple of Jupiter Olympus. There were more than a hundred of these splendid Corinthian columns in the original temple. The preaching of St. Paul and of others, however, displaced the heathen gods, and now their temples everywhere are in ruins, while Christianity is taking the world.

Gentiles,³ and made their minds evil-affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But^a the multitude of the city was divided: and part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And^b when there was an assault made, both of the Gentiles and also of the Jews, with their rulers, to use them despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They^c were ware of it, and fled unto Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:⁴

7 And^d there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶ And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak: who steadfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith^e to be healed, 10 Said with a loud voice, "Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city,⁶ brought oxen and garlands⁷ unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out, 15 And saying, Sirs, "why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions⁸ with you, and preach unto you, that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 Who⁹ in times past suffered all nations⁹ to walk in their own ways.

¹⁴ The original, translated 'ordained,' occurs but once again in a cognate form (1 Co. 8. 19), and there it is unquestionable that it implies and declares election by the church, by holding up, or forth, their hands, as the composition of the word signifies. That it does not signify the act of ordination by imposition of hands, though that may have immediately preceded, seems to be granted by all commentators, even by those who would confine the election exclusively to Paul and Barnabas, and totally deny all electoral right in the Christian people.—C.

from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ¶ And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people,¹ and, having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing² he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

22 Confirming^a the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when they⁴ had ordained⁵ them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25 And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:⁶

26 And thence sailed to Antioch,⁷ from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

CHAPTER XV.

¹ Great dissension ariseth touching circumcision. ⁶ The apostles consult about it, 22 and send their determination by letters to the churches. ³⁶ Paul and Barnabas, thinking to visit the brethren together, fall at strife, and depart asunder.

AND certain^a men which came down from Judea taught the brethren, and said, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

2 When^d therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they¹ determined that Paul and Barnabas, and far as can be done without sin, yet none must ever deter them from the faithful execution of their office. Till their testimony be finished God will help them in life; nor will upright disciples ever disown them on account of reproach or danger.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 20. Whether this precept, originally delivered to Noah, Ge. 9. 1-7, be still binding upon the Gentiles, is a point upon which much difference of opinion prevails among Christians—some holding the prohibition to be perpetually obligatory as much as the prohibition of idolatry and fornication with which it is associated; others holding the prohibition of idolatry and fornication alone to be perpetually obligatory, as founded on the first, second, and seventh commandments; but the prohibition of 'things strangled and blood' to be mere temporary accommodations to Jewish prejudices (comp. ch. 16. 3. with Ga. 2. 3-5; 5. 1-6; an abstinence from things not unlawful in themselves. 1 Ti. 4. 4; Ro. 14. 14), but merely out of tenderness and charity to the prejudices and consciences of weaker brethren, Ro. 14. 15-21. In the midst of this division of opinion—a division among learned, sincere, and godly men—one thing is certain, that 'every man should be fully persuaded in his own mind' that he is following scriptural authority, not led by bodily appetite, 'in that thing which he alloweth,' Ro. 14. 5, 22. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how early a spirit of bigotry, legality, and attachment to ceremonies, began in the Christian church, to the great injury of the pure doctrines of salvation by Christ alone, through faith! And it is a great mercy that the church is now delivered from the ancient burdensome rites of Moses, which never availed to the purification of men's consciences; and that the salvation of sinners, greater or lesser, Jews or Gentiles, is wholly of free grace; for the faith of the gospel powerfully tends to the purification of men's hearts and lives.

—When attempts are made, especially under pretence of apostolic authority, to corrupt the peculiar doctrines of the gospel, and to pervert the souls of believers, it is high time to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. But proud and angry contentions about mere circumstances should never trouble the church, and expose her to confusion, danger, and reproach. It is a mercy that Jesus has appointed courts in proper subordination, and proper regulations, for the happy adjusting of differences. And there is need in all our disputes to adhere closely to the Scriptures, and in all ecclesiastical decisions to manifest a strict regard to the gospel liberty secured by Christ, and to the weakness of tender consciences. If they be made with proper prudence and harmony, they will in certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem, unto the apostles and elders, about this question.

3 And being brought on their way² by the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles: and they caused great joy unto all the brethren.³

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders, and they declared all things that God had done with them.

5 ¶ But there rose up certain⁴ of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

6 And the apostles and elders came together, for to consider of this matter.

7 ¶ And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.⁷

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me.⁸

14 Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

general be heartily received by church-members for their edification. And greatly should we rejoice in the success of other churches, and in the union of Jews and Gentiles into one body of Christ; and carefully should all avoid giving offence to their neighbours, even in things indifferent in themselves. But since the gospel is necessary for the confirmation of believers, as well as for the conversion of sinners, not only ought ministers to labour in the ministrations of it, but all to rejoice in their success.—It is an unpleasing reflection

m Perhaps not Josias Barnabas, ch. 11:23, but his brother.

n Silas became afterwards the close companion of the apostle Paul in some of his missionary journeys, Ac. 16. 40; 17:4. It is worthy of note that the contracted form of the name, Silas, is always used in this book, while in Paul's epistles we find the full form, Silvanus,

18 Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication,¹ and from things strangled,² and from blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath-day.

22 ¶ Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch, with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren.⁴

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles, and elders, and brethren, send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you, with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, 26 Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by mouth.

28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things:⁷

29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation.⁹

32 And Judas and Silas, being prophets also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding, it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

FALLS OF BEYROUT. [ACTS, xv:41.]—"And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches."—Acts, xv:41. It is not definitely stated in the Scriptures when St. Paul entered Beyrout, or the city that stood where the modern Beyrout now stands. He could hardly pass through Syria, along the coast into Cilicia, without passing through the Berytus of the Greeks and the Romans. This was a city of the ancient Jebelites. Herod the Great caused a mock trial to be held here over his two sons. Herod Agrippa adorned this city with baths and theaters. Here Titus came after the destruction of Jerusalem. The silk trade has flourished here from the time of the Romans. The falls are north of the city. They are at the foot of the Lebanon Mountains, and the water is largely melted snow.

36 ¶ And some days after, Paul said unto Barnabas, 'Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them 'John, whose surname was Mark.

38 But Paul thought not good to take him with them, 'who departed² from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.

39 And 'the contention was so sharp³ between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto 'Cyprus:

40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, being⁴ recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.⁴

41 And he went 'through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches.

CHAPTER XVI.

¹ Paul having circumcised Timothy, ⁷ and being called by the Spirit from one country to another, ¹⁴ converteth Lydia, ¹⁶ casteth out a spirit of divination. ¹⁹ For which cause he and Silas are whipped and imprisoned. ²⁶ The prison-doors are opened. ³¹ The jailer is converted, ³⁷ and they are delivered.

THEN came he to 'Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, 'named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek.¹

2 Which was 'well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised² him, because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, 'they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And 'so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of 'Galatia, and were forbidden 'of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in 'Asia,³

7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia:⁴ but the Spirit⁵ suffered them not.

8 And they, passing by Mysia, came down to 'Troas.⁶

9 ¶ And 'a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia,⁷ and prayed him, saying, 'Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And after he had seen the vision, 'immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, THESSALONICA. [Acts. xvii:1.]—"Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews." The above view shows Thessalonica as it is to-day. Thessalonica has always been a city of note. It was an ancient city of Macedonia and was known as Thernia. A daughter of Philip, king of Macedonia, was named Thessalonica. She was the sister of Alexander the Great and married Cassander. This city was named Thessalonica in honor of King Philip's daughter. There are here about 75,000 inhabitants, among them a great many prosperous Jews. You see the minarets of the mosques rising in different parts of the city; this indicates that there are Mahometans here also, but they are not influential.

them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.⁴

25 ¶ And¹ at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.

26 And² suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison-doors open, he³ drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do⁴ thyself no harm; for we are all here.

29 Then he called for a light,⁵ and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, 'Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

31 And they said, 'Believe on⁶ the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And⁷ they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 ¶ And "when it was day, the magistrates sent the sergeants,⁷ saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned,⁸ being⁹ Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay, verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out.

38 And the sergeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.⁹

39 And¹⁰ they came and besought them, and brought them out, and desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Paul preacheth at Thessaionica, 4 where some believe, and others persecute him. 10 He is sent to Berea, and preacheth there. 13 Being persecuted at Thessaionica, 15 he cometh to Athens, and disputeth, and preacheth the living God to them unknown, 34 whereby many are converted unto Christ.

NOW when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessaionica,¹ where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days reasoned with them out of the scriptures,

3 Opening² and alleging that Christ must needs³ have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ.⁴

4 And⁵ some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

5 But⁶ the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a commis; but still more justly celebrated in Christian annals as the first city of Europe in which the gospel was preached. Under Turkish misrule it has long been reduced to the condition of a miserable village; but some remnants of Christianity are still found among its few and impoverished inhabitants—a seed of hope when the time for favour shall return. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is need of wisdom from above to direct us when to condescend to men's weaknesses, and when to assert our privileges, religious or civil. God remarkably owns his gospel for the conversion and edification of men when it is faithfully and rudely preached. And in loving wisdom he directs where to preach it, and where not. Marvellous is it that he has not forbidden nor hindered the preaching of it in Britain, where it has been so peculiarly undervalued, rejected, denied, and detested! God deals with people in very different forms in bringing them to his Son. And some of them, when near to the brink of hell, as well as to the ordinances of grace, are plucked as brands out of the burning. But it is enough if, either in a more kind or a more awful manner, they be deeply convinced of sin and self-sufficiency, and led to receive and rest upon Jesus Christ alone, in all his offices, for salvation, as he is offered in the gospel. And while God, in infinite kindness, becomes at once their God and the God of their seed, they will testify their high regard to the instrument of their conversion, and be deeply concerned for the eternal salvation of their whole family. Satan will turn himself and his agents into very different forms, will become a friend, an angel of light, a witness for Christ, or a selfish, outrageous, persecuting fury, in order to sully the honour and prevent the spread of the gospel. But let them do as they will, Jesus can support, comfort, vindicate, and render victorious his faithful servants. No persecutor is so proud or furious but either the terrors of God can restrain or his grace convert him. And, if possible, Christ's ministers should study to obtain their deliverances with honour as well as with safety; but they must never manifest any selfish resentment. Learn, my soul, carefully to observe providential directions. Always delight in meetings for prayer or religious conference. Never relish dissembled applause, however just. In every distress believe in Jesus Christ; and always rejoice in suffering for his sake.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 11. More noble seems to imply both higher in rank (see ver. 5), of better education, principles, and feelings—more rational, more candid, more thoughtful, more generously disposed, because more acquainted with the Scriptures, and more anxious to study them. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How justly the Holy Ghost had witnessed that bonds and afflictions awaited the apostle in every city! And it is delightful to see ministers preaching the gospel, regardless of all fatigue, contempt, and persecution, counting nothing too dear for Christ and his cause. It is comely when all the sermon is plainly derived from the oracles of God, and when hearers attentively receive the truth, and examine all they hear by the Scripture. Important is the matter of gospel preaching, even Jesus' person, sufferings, and glory; his dying for our sins, and calling us back from our graves to his last judgment. Powerful is its efficacy in the conversion of multitudes, and even of persons of rank, in places the most wicked. Real converts take delight in owning, holding fellowship with, and caring for the safety and comfort of, faithful ministers; while the offscourings of mankind, and the high pretenders to wisdom, readily unite together against Jesus Christ and his gospel. Unhappy is the place where the mob are both judges and executioners. Very false, but common, is the pretence that Jesus' sole headship over his church interferes with lawful civil authority; and yet many magistrates dread danger chiefly from noted believers.—If ministers be persecuted in one city they may flee to another. But they will everywhere meet with as abounding wickedness, and, in consequence thereof, much contempt and hatred. Yet, the nearer Christ's Word lies to their own hearts, they will the more eagerly seize all opportunities of publishing it. Great prudence is necessary in dealing with self-conceited pretenders to wisdom. Nowhere has the gospel less success than among such. They are often ignorant of the plainest doctrines of nature, of the divine perfections, and of our relation to God as our Maker, Preserver, and Disposer. None are more madly set upon the most senseless idolatry, or more given to waste precious moments in mere trifles. Wonderful is the wisdom of God in permitting them to be so blinded by the god of this world; and great his mercy in calling men to repent, in view of the future judgment, whether they will hear or forbear.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1. Corinth. One of the most illustrious cities of Greece, situated on the isthmus that joins the Peloponnesus, or Morea, to the continent. It is said to have been founded in the year 1514 B.C., and to have been

ATHENS, FROM MARS HILL, SHOWING TEMPLE OF THESEUS AS PAUL SAW IT. [Acts, xvii:16.]—There is but one building in the panorama before us that was standing, as it stands to-day, when Paul looked in the direction you are looking now. That was the temple of Theseus, which you see with rows of Doric columns running all the way round it. It is a source of pleasure to be able to look upon a building now that we know absolutely he saw. We can say this of the temple of Theseus. This temple had been here more than 500 years when Paul came to Athens. The city he saw from Mars Hill was far different from the modern Athens, with its electric lights and railroad cars, which we see to-day from the same sacred height. Athens has now nearly 150,000 inhabitants, and is in all respects a modern city.

MARS HILL, ATHENS, FROM WHICH PAUL ADDRESSED THE SUPERSTITIOUS ATHENIANS. [Acts, xvii:22.]—From the top of Mars Hill, overlooking the classic and beautiful Athens, was preached perhaps the greatest sermon that was ever uttered by the lips of man. It was delivered in the presence of philosophers and from the top of the rock you see in the picture. It was in this place the ancient Athenians were accustomed to hold their court. Standing on Mars Hill, St. Paul was in full view of all the great works of art that made Greece famous. The Parthenon, crowning the Acropolis, was to the east, the temple of Theseus was to the northwest and the rostrum from which Demosthenes thundered was to the southwest. When St. Paul was here all these works of art and historic places had not suffered from the disintegrating effects of time.

pany, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason,^a and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, 'These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ¶ And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea:^b who coming thither, went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily; whether those things were so.

12 Therefore many of them believed; also of honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 ¶ But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people.

14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul, to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens:^c and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry.^d

17 Therefore^e disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them^f that met with him.

18 Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans,^g and of the Stoics,^h encountered him.ⁱ And some said, What will this babbler^j say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto Areopagus,^k saying, May we know what this new^l doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

²⁷ Epicureans.—Stoics. Two philosophical sects among the Greeks. The former held that virtue was whatever promoted the happiness of the agent; the Stoics, that it consisted in living agreeably to nature,—systems alike calculated to mislead, unless man were a better judge of what constitutes true and permanent happiness, and unless human nature were cleansed from the selfishness of its desires, and restored to the love and obedience of God.—C.

The side of the hill, partly by nature, and partly by art, presents a gently inclined plane of a semi-circular form, bounded above by the brow of the hill cut down perpendicularly. In the centre the rock projects into a platform about ten feet square, on which public speakers stood; and from this place, it is probable (ver.22) that Paul spoke.—C.

³⁴ Superstitious, in modern language, is always applied to an ignorant fear of, or dependence on, invisible powers, whether supreme or subordinate, or some vain inventions for averting their anger or propitiating their favour. There is no reason to imagine that Paul, a consummate orator, would commence his address with a description so calculated to excite prejudice and opposition. It should therefore be translated, 'I perceive that else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶ Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars'-hill,⁷ and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.⁸

23 For as I passed by, and beheld⁹ your devotions,² I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.⁴ Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

24 God^b that made the world,⁵ and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands;

25 Neither^c is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And^d hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth; and hath determined the times before appointed,⁶ and the bounds of their habitation;

27 That^j they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us:

28 For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets⁷ have said, For we are also his offspring.

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God,^e we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.⁸

30 And^p the times of this ignorance God winked at;⁹ but now commandeth all men every where to repent:

31 Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance¹ unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.

32 ¶ And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33 So^o Paul departed from among them.

CHAPTER XVIII.

3 Paul laboureth with his hands, and preacheth at Corinth to the Gentiles. 9 The Lord encourageth him in a vision. 12 He is accused before Gallio the deputy, but is dismissed. 18 Afterwards passing from city to city, he strengtheneth the disciples. 24 Apollos, being more perfectly instructed by Aquila and Priscilla, 28 preacheth Christ with great efficacy.

AFTER these things, Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth;¹

2 And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Claudius had

GENERAL VIEW OF OLD CORINTH. [Acts, xviii:1].—"After these things Paul departed from Athens and came to Corinth." Corinth was an ancient city of Greece situated on the middle of the Isthmus of Corinth. It received its name from Corinthus, the son of Pelops. The inhabitants were once very powerful. Corinth was burned to the ground by the Romans in 146 B. C. It is said that during the conflagration all the metals which were in the city melted and mixed together and formed that valuable composition of metals known as Corinthian brass. When St. Paul came to this city in A. D. 51 it was perhaps the most corrupt community on earth. There was a famous temple of Venus here then given up to lasciviousness. The city that St. Paul saw was built by Julius Cæsar. It is about five miles from the new city.

commanded all Jews to depart² from Rome;) and came unto them.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: for by their occupation they were tent-makers.³

4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit,⁴ and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.

6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads: I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one⁵ that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized.

9 Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.

11 And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 And when Gallio⁷ was the deputy of Achaia,⁸ the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment-seat,

13 Saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.⁹

14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong,¹ or wicked lewdness,² O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you:

15 But if it be a question of words and names,³ and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters.

16 And he drave them from the judgment-seat.

17 Then all the Greeks took Sosthenes,⁴ the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment-seat. And Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 ¶ And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea:⁵ for he had a vow.⁶

19 And he came to Ephesus,⁷ and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not;

21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast⁸ that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at Cesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening all the disciples.

24 ¶ And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria,⁹ an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

25 This¹ man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John.¹

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace:

28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ.

CHAPTER XIX.

6 The Holy Ghost is given by Paul's hands. 9 The Jews blaspheme his doctrine, which is confirmed by miracles. 13 The Jewish exorcists 16 are beaten by the devil. 19 Conjurings books are burned. 24 Demetrius, for love of gain, raiseth an uproar against Paul, 35 which is appeased by the town-clerk.

AND it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through crying for all the abominations that are round about them, and earnestly inquiring, 'What must we do to be saved?'—A note: Let this statement of the Spirit, who knows the hearts of all men, and who searches and reveals when he will the deep things of God, encourage every effort for the melioration of society through the preaching of the gospel. It is God's means. It succeeded in licentious Corinth, and has never been unsuccessful wherever it has been employed in faith. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are those churches where ministers are so hearty in their work that they will rather labour for their own subsistence than prejudice men against the gospel, or give enemies a handle to reproach them as mercenary! But there is need of divine direction when to condescend and when not. Ministers should take great pains in making known Christ, and persuading men to accept of him as their only Saviour, and in defending the great truths of the gospel, till their hearers manifest themselves incorrigibly wicked and obstinate rejecters of it. And, alas! dreadful is their destruction whose blood faithful ministers stand clear of! But while some despise the gospel to their own undoing, it will become powerful to others, even the most unlikely. His own, whether great or small, shall be ever blessed. If ministers have God's direction, promise, presence, comfort, and protection, they need fear nothing. Success shall crown their labours; yea, even heathens, not very attentive to their duty as magistrates, shall refuse to persecute them. And the more success faithful ministers meet with, they are still the more diligent.—It is comely when old experienced Christians are inclined readily to instruct younger ones. And young preachers, who gladly accept instructions from exercised saints, though of the weaker sex, bid fair to be useful, if not famous, in gathering and edifying the church. There is little hope of such as are too wise to learn. And nothing should preachers more study than to have the Scriptures stored up in their memories and deeply written in their hearts, that all they deliver to others may be plainly marked with the authority of God.

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—Much more clear and glorious is the gospel dispensation which we the upper coasts,¹ came^b to Ephesus; and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost² since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

5 When they heard this, they were baptized in^b the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And^d when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 ¶ And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing,³ and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But¹ when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.⁴

10 And² this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia⁵ heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And⁷ God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ¶ Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists,⁶ took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus^a I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 And⁸ the man in whom the evil spirit was, leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

enjoy than even the ministration of John Baptist. And much better the baptism of the Holy Ghost than that of mere water. But, alas! how many receive the external seals of God's covenant who have no experimental, and very little notional, knowledge of him or his influences! And though baptism is never to be repeated, yet the Spirit is daily to be received. With great boldness and persevering courage ought the gospel to be preached; and dreadful is their fate who put it from them, or attempt to counterfeit its miraculous confirmations. They but fight and labour for the devil that he may reward them with shame and ruin.—But happy are they who are turned to the Lord by a cordial faith and genuine repentance! And hopeful is the case when the peculiar favourites of Satan are made openly to renounce his service, sacrifice their dearest abominations with abhorrence, and remove every temptation of drawing back out of their own and their neighbours' way. How furiously zealous are the most of mankind for a false religion, especially if worldly gain and long custom are on its side. And with such, noise and clamour are invincible arguments for the ² Having received the testimony concerning the kingdom of God, and been by John baptized unto repentance, they must have known the Scriptures, and consequently the existence of the Holy Spirit, and the prophetic promise of his effusion. Their meaning, therefore, must be that they had not heard of the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit bestowed on the day of Pentecost upon the Jews, and afterwards, at the conversion of Cornelius, upon the Gentiles. 17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds.⁶

19 Many of them also which used curious arts⁷ brought their books⁸ together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.⁹

20 So¹⁰ mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.

21 ¶ After these things were ended, Paul purposed¹¹ in the spirit,¹ when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome.

22 So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 And² the same time there arose no small stir about that way.

24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines² for Diana,³ brought no small gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover, ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods which are made with hands:

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians!

29 And⁴ the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre.⁵

30 And when Paul would have entered into unto the people,⁶ the disciples suffered him not.

FORUM AND PRISON OF ST. PAUL—EPHESUS. [Acts, xix:26.]—"And it came to pass that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts, came to Ephesus." Ephesus was a famous city in Ionia, built, according to Justin, by the Amazons. Here was the great temple of Diana, the most glorious structure ever applied to the uses of pagan religion. The temple of Diana was four hundred and twenty-five feet long and two hundred feet broad. The roof was supported by one hundred and twenty-seven columns sixty feet high, which had been placed there by so many kings. It took two hundred years to complete the building. This great temple was burnt the night after Alexander the Great was born. But soon the temple was rebuilt with all its former splendor. There is absolutely nothing here now but ruins. In the above picture we have what is left of the Forum and Prison of St. Paul.

31 And certain of the chief of Asia,⁷ which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some^a therefore cried one thing, and some another; for the assembly was confused: and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew⁸ Alexander^a out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward.⁹ And Alexander^a beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence¹ unto the people.

34 But when they² knew that he was a Jew,³ all with one voice, about the space of two hours, cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians!

35 And when the town-clerk⁴ had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper⁵ of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell⁶ down from Jupiter?⁷

36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, the law is open,⁸ and there are deputies: let them implead one another.

39 But if ye inquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a lawful⁹ assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.

41 And^a when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.

7 ¶ And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.⁵

10 And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him, said, Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.

11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.

An evident proof that the primitive Christians observed the first (or Lord's) day, and were also accustomed on that day to assemble themselves for hearing the Word and observing the Lord's supper. C.

Ver. 8. Many lights. For what purpose are the 'lights' mentioned? Partly perhaps to bear record of the perfect visibility of all the acts of Christian worship which the heathen were ready to calumniate, and partly to account for the sleep of Eutychus, from the heat of the room and the exhaustion of the air. C.

Ver. 12. How much more should parents and friends be 'comforted' when they that have fallen asleep in forbidden pleasures, and have fallen 'dead in trespasses and sins,' are restored again to life through the preaching of the Word and the power of the Spirit. C.

Ver. 21. Repentance toward God. Grief for and hatred of sin, not because it has injured ourselves, but because it has offended a holy and merciful God—hence called 'godly sorrow,' 2 Co. 7. 10, whereby the sinner, by 'faith toward the Lord Jesus Christ,' the only Saviour and way to the Father, turn from his sin to God. C.

Ver. 31. Night. For the avoiding of danger and offence, it would appear that the primitive Christians were much accustomed to meet by night: see ver. 8. Poverty, no doubt, also tended to introduce the practice—some being originally poor, others reduced by being outcasts from their friends and proscribed in their trade, others ruined by 'the spoiling of their goods' by the hands of their covetous and unfeeling persecutors. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Christ's providence can carry his servants safe through the wildest uproars, and turn mad outrage into calm tranquillity and peace. Parting with Christian friends whom we expect to see no more on earth ought to be very devout and affectionate. And if murderous enemies lie in wait for us, we may cautiously avoid them. If we honour Christ much, he will honour us with good companions. And if ministers be truly faithful, they will never think they do enough in the service of Christ. They may be often wearied with, but never weary of, their work. Christians who fervently love Christ will make his Sabbath and supper their delight. And it is very unlike a Christian to shorten the one by unnecessary sloth and sleep, and almost forget the other by infrequency. How criminal and dangerous is it, even at mid-day, to sleep at the worship of God! What if he whom we affront as unworthy of our notice—he whom we condemn as unworthy to be embraced—should seize the moment, and awaken us in eternal woe! Surely then every sermon should be heard, every sacrament received, every prayer poured forth, and every farewell of friends taken, as on the brink of eternity, and as before the awful tribunal.—Infinite is the importance of the ministerial work. With deep humility, earnest care, holy fear, self-denial, and candid fidelity, all the duties of it ought to be performed. The truths, the honour of Jesus Christ, and the salvation of immortal souls, are all at stake. And both ministers and people

VATHY, ISLAND OF SAMOS. [Acts, xx:15.]—"And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios, and the next day we arrived at Samos." Samos is an island in the Aegean Sea, on the coast of Asia Minor. The island is about 87 miles in circumference, and is known as the birthplace of Pythagoras. The people of Samos assisted the Greeks against the Persians when Xerxes invaded Europe. The people of the island have always been under the influence of Grecian ideas, and while to-day ruled by the Sultan of Turkey they are loyal in thought and feeling to Greece. This is not surprising, for the inhabitants of this island share the glory that belongs to Greece because of her achievements in literature, art and war in ancient times. The people here are seemingly prosperous.

Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia; for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the ²day of Pentecost.

17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders³ of the church.⁴

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, ⁵Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 Serving⁶ the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations,⁷ which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews:

20 And ⁸how I kept back nothing that was profitable ⁹unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, 21 Testifying¹⁰ both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now, behold, ¹¹I go bound in the spirit¹² unto Jerusalem, ¹³not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Save¹⁴ that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me.¹⁵

24 But¹⁶ none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that ¹⁷I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which ¹⁸I have received of the Lord Jesus, ¹⁹to testify the ²⁰gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the ²¹kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore²² I take you to record this day, that I ²³am pure from the blood of all men.

27 For²⁴ I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.

28 Take²⁵ heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers,²⁶ to feed the church of God,²⁷ which ²⁸he hath purchased with his own blood.²⁹

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous ³⁰wolves enter in among you, not sparing³¹ the flock.

30 Also³² of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore³³ watch, and remember, that ³⁴by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.

to travel about under the special direction and protection of Providence, and in every place to have edifying converse with Christian friends concerning the great things which God has done for us and for his church. And it is comely for Christians to meet and part with cordial affection and solemn prayer. No wonder that 14 Church of God. There is a variety in the MSS. of this verse—such as, 'church of the Lord'; 'of Christ'; 'of God and (even) the Lord'; 'of the Lord and (even) God.' Fathers and versions, however, are almost unanimously in favour of 'the church of God'; and all the most ancient and valuable MSS. concur in reading either 'the church of God,' or 'of the Lord and (even) God.' More over, the phrase 'church of God' occurs many times in the epistles of Paul—'church of the Lord' never. See, for example, 1 Co. 1.2; 10.32; 11.22; 15.9. Ga. 1.13. 1 Th. 2.14. 2 Ti. 2.15. 1 Paul will not by any means be dissuaded from going to Jerusalem. 9 Philip's daughters prophetesses. 17 Paul cometh to Jerusalem; 27 where he is apprehended, and in great danger, 31 but by the chief captain is rescued, and permitted to speak to the people.

AND it came to pass, that after we were gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course unto Coos,¹ and the day following unto Rhodes,² and from thence unto Patara:³

2 And finding a ship sailing over unto Phenicia,⁵ we went aboard, and set forth.

3 Now when we had discovered Cyprus,⁶ we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria,⁷ and landed at Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And ⁸finding disciples, ⁹we tarried there seven days: who said to Paul through the Spirit,⁹ that¹⁰ he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed and went our way: and they ¹¹all brought us on our way, ¹²with wives and children, till ¹³we were out of the city: and ¹⁴we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.

6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they ¹⁵returned home again.

7 And when we had finished ¹⁶our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais,⁹ and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next ¹⁷day, we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto ¹⁸Cesarea:

PANORAMA OF JERUSALEM. [ACTS, xxi:15.]—"And after those days we took up our carriages and went to Jerusalem."—Acts, xxi:15. Paul went up to Jerusalem at this time to see the Elders, and to give them some account of his ministry among the Gentiles. As he went up from the seacoast it is probable that he entered through the gate in the western wall. In the above view we are looking at Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, which is to the east of the city. We see the extreme northern part of the city. The wall which begins at the extreme left of the view is above the golden gate, hence the site of the temple does not appear. It is about two miles and a half all round the walls of Jerusalem. The city is entered by about seven gates. These were formerly closed at night, but for the last few years they are kept open night and day.

and we entered into the house of ¹Philip the evangelist,¹ which was one of the seven; and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins,² which did prophesy.

10 ¶ And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain prophet, named ³Agabus.

11 And when he was come unto us, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, "Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, ⁴besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? ⁵for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, ⁶The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages,⁷ and went up to Jerusalem.

16 There⁸ went with us also certain of the disciples of ⁹Cesarea, and brought with them one Mnason of ¹⁰Cyprus, an ¹¹old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 ¶ And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us ¹²gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us unto ¹³James; and all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, ¹⁴he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, they ¹⁵glorified the Lord; and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, how ¹⁶many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all ¹⁷zealous of the law:

21 And they are informed¹⁸ of thee, ¹⁹that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? ²⁰the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: We²¹ have four men which have a vow²² on them;

24 Them take, and purify²³ thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning 47 It appears from Josephus (Antiq. b. 12, and Jewish Wars, b. ii.), that, in the first or second year of Nero, and while Felix was procurator of Judea, a certain Egyptian persuaded a multitude to follow him to the Mount of Olives, to whom he promised a miraculous overthrow of the walls of Jerusalem. But Felix attacked them, slew 400, took 200 prisoners, and put the Egyptian to flight. The chief captain imagined that in Paul he had found this Egyptian returning to foment new disturbances, as he had done two or three years before. So slow is inquiry!—so speedy is misconception.—C.

thee, are nothing; but that ²⁴thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, ²⁵we have written, and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then²⁶ Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them, entered into the temple, to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 ¶ And when the seven days were almost ended, ²⁷the Jews which were of Asia,²⁸ when they saw him in the temple, ²⁹stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him, 28 Crying out, Men of Israel, ³⁰help: this is the man that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place; and further, brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

29 (For they had seen before with him, in the city, ³¹Trophimus an Ephesian, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

30 And³² all the city was moved, and the people ran together: and they took Paul, and drew him out of the temple: and forthwith the doors were shut.³³

31 And ³⁴as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto the chief captain of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproar:

32 Who³⁵ immediately took soldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them: and when they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left beating of Paul.

33 Then the chief captain came near, and took him, and commanded him to be ³⁶bound with two chains; and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And³⁷ some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude: and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into the ³⁸castle.³⁹

35 And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was borne of the soldiers, for the ⁴⁰violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, ⁴¹Away with him!

37 ¶ And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

weaknesses and strong prejudices remain with real believers. And it is difficult to judge how far we ought to condescend to their infirmity, or to appear zealous for our Christian liberty. It is indeed needless to condescend to ignorant cavillers or obstinate ungodly bigots, who will at any rate rage against us as the servants of Christ. Nothing can be expected in their popular tumults but violence and fury, confusion and injustice. But seasonably God interposes for the preservation of his servants from wicked and unreasonable men, and gives them opportunities to vindicate themselves, plead for the Redeemer, and spread abroad his glorious gospel.

CHAPTER XXII. REFLECTIONS.—With great prudence, temper, courage, and faithfulness, ought the cause of Christ to be maintained against its most malicious opposers.—Blind bigots are in general inflamed against it and its candid professors with the most outrageous and murderous zeal.—But God's grace strangely changes the most furious and obstinate tempers. And yet men often have gospel light shining all around them, and are never thereby converted to Christ or instructed in his truth.—Even when conversion is begun

RIVER ROAD, DAMASCUS. [Acts, xxii:5].—No one can ever forget even a short sojourn in Damascus. It is created by the River Abana, as completely as Egypt is created by the Nile. Take away the Abana river and Damascus would simply become a part of the great desert which stretches from the Lebanon mountains to Palmyra. The Abana river, made up of melted snow from the Lebanon mountains, rushes through a gorge in the mountains about three miles above the city, and is distributed through canals to every part of Damascus. It also makes productive the surrounding country for a circuit of 25 miles. After thus refreshing and replenishing a small area in the desert, the Abana loses itself in the lakes of the meadow about 25 miles from the city and finally sinks out of sight in the burning plains of Syria.

THE VALLEY OF THE KEDRON—THE MOST FAMOUS VALLEY IN THE WORLD. [Acts, xxii:20.]—"And when the blood of the Martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him." Stephen was stoned to death near St. Stephen's gate, and this gate opens out into the Valley of the Kedron. The Valley of the Kedron is the most famous valley in the world, situated as it is between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. Here are the graves of kings and prophets. Here David walked, and Isaiah meditated and Jeremiah wailed. Here Christ prayed, and here the Garden of Gethsemane bears its nurslings of the sky, the beautiful flowers, to remind us that though Christ suffered and died, He lives again in the grace and beauty and tenderness of the world.

39 But Paul said, *"I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city:"*² and, I beseech thee, "suffer me to speak unto the people."

40 And when he had given him license, Paul stood on the stairs, and "beckoned with the hand unto the people." And when there was made a great silence, he spake unto them in the Hebrew tongue,³ saying,

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Paul declareth at large how he was converted to the faith, 17 and called to his apostleship. 22 At the very mentioning of the Gentiles, the people exclaim on him. 24 He would have been scourged, 25 but claiming the privilege of a Roman, he escapeth.

MEN,^a brethren, and fathers, hear ye my defence which I make now unto you.

3 I^a am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city, "at the feet² of Gamaliel, and taught according³ to the perfect manner³ of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day."

4 And^a I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5 As^b also the high-priest doth bear me witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren,⁴ and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

6 And^d it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And^d they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice⁶ of him that spake to me.

10 And^k I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

2 Tarsus was an ancient city, having been founded by Sardapanus, king of Assyria. It was in the time of Alex- ander the Great, and became the capital of Cilicia. Antony gave it the privilege of a free city. Paul was consequently fully justified in the statement he here makes.

1 The Jews of Asia had stirred up "the people" of Jerusalem (ch. 21. 27), representing Paul as a Hellenist, one who spoke the Greek tongue, and was imbued with Gentilism; but when they heard him speak in the sacred tongue their prejudices were, for a time, arrested. —Such being the wisdom and goodness of God, that the "confusion of tongues" has often been made a key to open the heart to the gospel.—C.

in a miraculous manner, God leads to the ordinary means of his own appointment to carry it on, and render such persons acquainted with his will and their work. And while baptism solemnly admits them into his church, effectual fervent prayer recommends them to God.—When notorious sinners are converted, their former opposition to Christ sticks fast in their remembrance, and lies heavy on their heart; and sometimes God, in merciful chastisement, returns it on their head. But if Jesus inst. all ministers in their office, he will take care of them, and direct their course where they shall be truly successful, when others would have rejected them. And wonderful is the wisdom of his grace in accepting the most distant and unlikely, while others wilfully harden themselves in their sins.—Great is their wickedness who are enraged at the extending of God's redeeming kindness, even to the most despicable and infamous sinners, and who shut their eyes against the most evident appearances of God's Word and Spirit.—Seasonably he raises up protectors where his servants are in imminent danger.—And for their own safety saints ought to insist on their civil privileges, that, while they stand up for his truth, God may own them, and give them further opportunities of defending his and their righteous cause.

CHAPTER XXIII. REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they who can appeal to God, that, by his grace, they have lived soberly, righteously, and godly before him.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born.²

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have examined him:³ and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 ¶ On the morrow, ⁴because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from his bands, and ⁵commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

AND Paul, earnestly beholding the council, said, ^aMen and brethren, ^bI have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.¹

2 And the high-priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him ^cto smite him on the mouth.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee,² thou ^dwhited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and ^ecommandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 For⁵ the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, ^gWe find no evil in this man: but⁶ if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

² The fact of Paul's being a "free born citizen of Rome," did not arise from his having been born in Tarsus, for though it was a free city, yet it was not a colonia or municipium, and consequently its inhabitants were not Roman citizens. In all probability one of Paul's ancestors had rendered important services to the state, and had received as his reward the status of citizenship. It was of immense advantage to the apostle. A Roman citizen could not legally be fettered or imprisoned without open trial; neither could he be scourged. Any infringement of his rights subjected the magistrates who were guilty to severe punishment.—P.

^f This declaration of ignorance, compared with the special promise, Mat. 10:10, has been regarded as an evidence that Paul was not inspired. But can the objectors prove that Paul was really ignorant? The ignorance is their own. Ananias was not the high-priest. He had been deprived of that office by the Romans, and succeeded by Jonathan after whose murder by Festus there occurred a period of vacancy anterior to the elevation of Ishmael. During this vacancy Ananias usurped the office from which he had been formerly expelled on account of his crimes. When Paul, therefore, "wist not that he was the high-priest," he declares an historical fact: for though his partisans and flatterers called him so, they could not invest him with the office. Some suppose that the apostle recanted merely to his conduct since his conversion—his conduct as a Christian being the only subject of question or trial. It seems, however, more natural to understand him as speaking of his whole life, and declaring that as a Jew, when his mind was darkened and his conscience mislead, he had, with equal sincerity, disinterestedness, and zeal, devoted himself to the work to which the Lord had miraculously called him. The whole amounts to a solemn assertion that his life as a Jew would furnish a public test of his integrity in embracing the religion of Jesus.—C.

11 And⁷ the night following, the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 ¶ And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, ⁸and bound themselves under a curse,⁴ saying that they would neither eat nor drink ⁹till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

15 Now^a therefore ye,⁵ with the council, signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you to-morrow, as though ye would inquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are ¹¹ready to kill him.

16 And⁸ when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then¹ Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain; for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the "prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

23 ¶ And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go to Cesarea,⁷ and horsemen threescore and ten,

And it is base in judges to abuse any honest man for avowing his own integrity. He who knows their heart and way will vindicate his faithful servants, to the confusion of their enemies, however great; and proud persecutors will quickly feel themselves unable to stand before the storm of his judgments.—In ordinary cases we must not speak evil of our rulers whom we know and own as such.—But we may join the wisdom of the serpent with the simplicity of the dove. We may divide the counsels of our enemies, though we may not revile their persons; and by maintaining some particular article of truth, set one part of them against another. If one party be enraged, the other will probably favour us.—If we be upright followers of that which is good, God can make the secular powers to protect us, and can overrule our dangerous circumstances to gain their favour. And if Jesus assure us of his presence and support, and of our future usefulness.

ANCIENT BRIDGE, ROME [Acts, xxiii:11].—"For as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also in Rome." We give as an illustration of Rome the arch of an old bridge that is interesting in this connection, because we see it now exactly as St. Paul saw it when in Rome. This arch, which is just above the new bridge you see, was built here 181 B. C. St. Paul was in Rome two years upon his first visit; and he unquestionably often crossed the very bridge this old arch helped to bear up. It is almost impossible for an American, accustomed to seeing everything new, to appreciate the great age of things connected with the city of Cicero and Cæsar. Many of the oldest structures in Rome are built of brick, but they do not seem to crumble or decay; they last as well as stone.

1 Tertullus is a Roman name, but he speaks as a Jew, and hence it has been conjectured he was a proselyte. But is it not much more probable, that as a leader, he employs the term 'we' as a mere legal phrase, whereby the advocate is fictitiously identified with his client? For it is by no means unlikely that the Jewish priests, who were deeply acquainted with the ways and feelings of the world, would present before their heathen governor a proselyte to Judaism, whom he, as a heathen, would consider at once both an apostate and a fool.—C.

body of Roman soldiers, appointed to escort him, consisting of two hundred legionary soldiers, two hundred light-armed soldiers, and seventy horsemen, might have sufficed to repel any tumultuary assault of the Jews; but to prevent bloodshed, they were ordered to set off about three hours after sunset, that they might be out of the reach of the zealots before morning. This prudent precaution was accompanied by a most equally humane. Paul was not required to walk with the soldiers, who had been accustomed to long and speedy marches; but they were ordered to provide mules or horses, changing them when necessary, that he might be conducted safely & conveniently to Caesarea.—I.

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not further tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 For^a we have found this man a pestilent fellow,² and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 Who³ also hath gone about to profane the temple: whom we took, and would have judged according to our law.

7 But⁴ the chief captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 Commanding⁵ his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of whom⁶ thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things whereof we accuse him.

9 And⁷ the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 ¶ Then Paul, after that the governor had beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years⁸ a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer* for myself:

11 Because¹ that thou mayest understand that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for to worship.

12 And² they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 Neither³ can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, that* after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers,⁴ believing⁵ all things which are written in the law and in the prophets;

15 And⁶ have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.⁶

16 And⁷ herein⁷ do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now after many years,⁸ I came to bring alms* to my nation, and offerings.

18 Whereupon⁹ certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult:

will even turn their intended mischiefs to the good of his servants, and for promoting their further usefulness in the world.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Profane clergymen and abandoned lawyers stick at nothing to gain their own vile ends. Falsehood, flattery, and slander go hand in hand. The purest innocence will not protect men from the most abominable aspersions; and the most infamous characters will not render some men ashamed of flattery. Spiteful malice generally represents faithful ministers as enemies to the state. And as it is in the power of every villain to propagate falsehood, and lay the heaviest charges against the noblest characters, it becomes the innocent meekly to vindicate themselves and their doctrines from invidious reproach, and that with due deference to the magistrates who give them an opportunity. But in vindicating ourselves it becomes us to own the truths of God, particularly the general resurrection of the dead, in which ruin.—But watchfully God marks the most secret plots of his people's enemies. Easily he discovers and disappoints them in favour of his faithful servants. And he will return wickedness on the wicked, and 19 Who^a ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had ought against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I stood before the council, 21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, "Touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question by you this day.

22 ¶ And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge⁹ of that way, he deferred them, and said, When ¹⁰Lysias the chief captain shall come down, I ¹¹will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And^a he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 ¶ And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla,¹ which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning the ²faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of ³righteousness, ⁴temperance,² and ⁵judgment to come,³ Felix trembled,⁶ and answered, ⁷Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee.

26 ¶ He⁴ hoped also that money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.⁴

27 But after two years, Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, ¹willing to show the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.⁵

CHAPTER XXV.

² The Jews accuse Paul before Festus. ⁸ He answereth for himself, ¹¹ and appealeth unto Cæsar. ¹⁴ Afterwards Festus openeth his matter to king Agrippa, ²³ and he is brought forth. ²⁵ Festus cleareth him to have done nothing worthy of death.

NOW when Festus was come into the province, after three days he ascended from Cesarea to Jerusalem.

2 Then^a the high-priest and the chief of the Jews informed him against Paul, and besought him,

3 And desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, ¹laying wait in the way to kill him.¹

4 But Festus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cesarea, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

5 Let^a them therefore, said he, which among you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, if there be any wickedness in him.

6 And when he had tarried among them more than ten days,² he went down unto Cesarea; and the next day, sitting on the judgment-seat, commanded Paul to be brought.

9 Few things seem more unlikely than that a man of the disposition and habits of Felix should become an accomplished adept in Jewish jurisprudence and theology. By his "more perfect knowledge" of that way, he cannot well, therefore, be understood any extensive knowledge of Judaism derived from his long residence in Cesarea. Neither could he have learned much of Christianity from all that Paul had yet said; though by "that way," some understand the knowledge of Christianity he had acquired from Paul's expository defence. Is it not better to render the passage thus:—But when Felix had heard these things, he adjourned the cause, saying, "When I shall have acquired a more perfect knowledge of that way (which you, the Jews, condemn, and you, Paul, justify), and when Lysias the tribune shall have come down, I shall decide upon your cause."—C.

It is said of Adianus, who, at a later period, was governor of Judæa, that he encouraged bribery to such an extent, that no malefactors remained in prison, except such as were too poor to purchase their liberty. Paul was most unjustly imprisoned; he was, without a shadow of reason, detained for two years, yet his Christian principles forbade his using any such means for securing his liberation.—C.

e Festus was a just man. He was anxious on the one hand to act uprightly as a Roman magistrate, and yet, on the other, as far as possible to gain favour with those over whom he was so recently placed.

f He therefore asked Paul whether he was willing to be tried at Jerusalem under his own immediate presidency, but yet according to Jewish law. Had Paul consented, the sentence would have been final. But Paul, though not afraid of a fair trial, knew well that the Jews would attempt his life by treachery. He therefore exercised his right to decline the procurator's offer, and appealed to Rome.—P.

j Every Roman citizen had a right, when under a criminal charge, to appeal to the emperor; after which it was highly criminal for any governor or judge to proceed farther. This appeal was to Nero, a proverbial tyrant—yet, such are the mysteries of Providence, his very name, at the distance of some hundred miles, forms a shield for the protection of the Lord's chosen servant.—C.

r Agrippa being, by profession at least, a Jew, and Festus a well-bred Roman, there is no reason to imagine that the word translated "persecution" was intended to signify anything but religion—in which sense it is often used by Josephus, and in several edicts of the Roman emperors.—C.

v Augustus was a flattering title originally bestowed upon Octavianus, by the Roman senate, and, in common with the name "Cæsar," assumed by all the Roman emperors.—C.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jerusalem stood round about, and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove.

8 ¶ While he answered for himself, "Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cæsar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, ⁹willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?³

10 Then said Paul, I stand at Cæsar's judgment-seat, where I ought to be judged:⁴ to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 For^a if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, ¹no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal⁵ unto Cæsar.

12 Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cæsar? ¹unto Cæsar shalt thou go.

13 ¶ And after certain days, king ⁶Agrippa and Bernice⁷ came unto Cesarea, to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, ⁸There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, ⁹the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, "It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore,⁹ when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment-seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But^a had certain questions against him of their own superstition,⁹ and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because I doubted of such manner of questions,² I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul had ¹appealed to be reserved unto the hearing¹ of Augustus,² I com-offence towards God and towards men. And it is very shameful when infamous heathens manifest more regard to common equity, and more awe of God's truth, than high-flown professors.—Amazing is the power of divine truth. Uttered by a prisoner, it makes a wicked heathen judge an abandoned Jewish professor, feels it not. But if sharp convictions be stifled, the love of this world, and the deceitfulness of sin, ordinarily prevent their return.

HOUSE OF TIBERIUS, ROME. [Acts, xxv:21.]—Tiberius was Emperor of Rome from A. D. 14 to A. D. 37. His house on the Palatine hill helped to form the manifold and massive series of structures which all together constituted the palaces of the Cæsars. When Tiberius ascended the throne of Rome, Christ was ten years old, and was crucified just a few years before Tiberius died. His house on the Palatine is built of brick, and is one of the ruins that inspired a part of Byron's celebrated poem, "Childe Harold." Tiberius was the Roman emperor who from his resort near the city of Pompeii wrote to the Roman Senate the despairing words: "May all the gods and goddesses damn me a thousand times worse than I am damned, if I know what to write to you." All the emperors of Rome were called Cæsar. The emperor referred to in Acts xxv:21 is Nero.

manded him to be kept till I might send him to Cæsar.

22 Then Agrippa said unto Festus, 'I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 ¶ And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment 'Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom 'all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that 'he ought not to live any longer.
